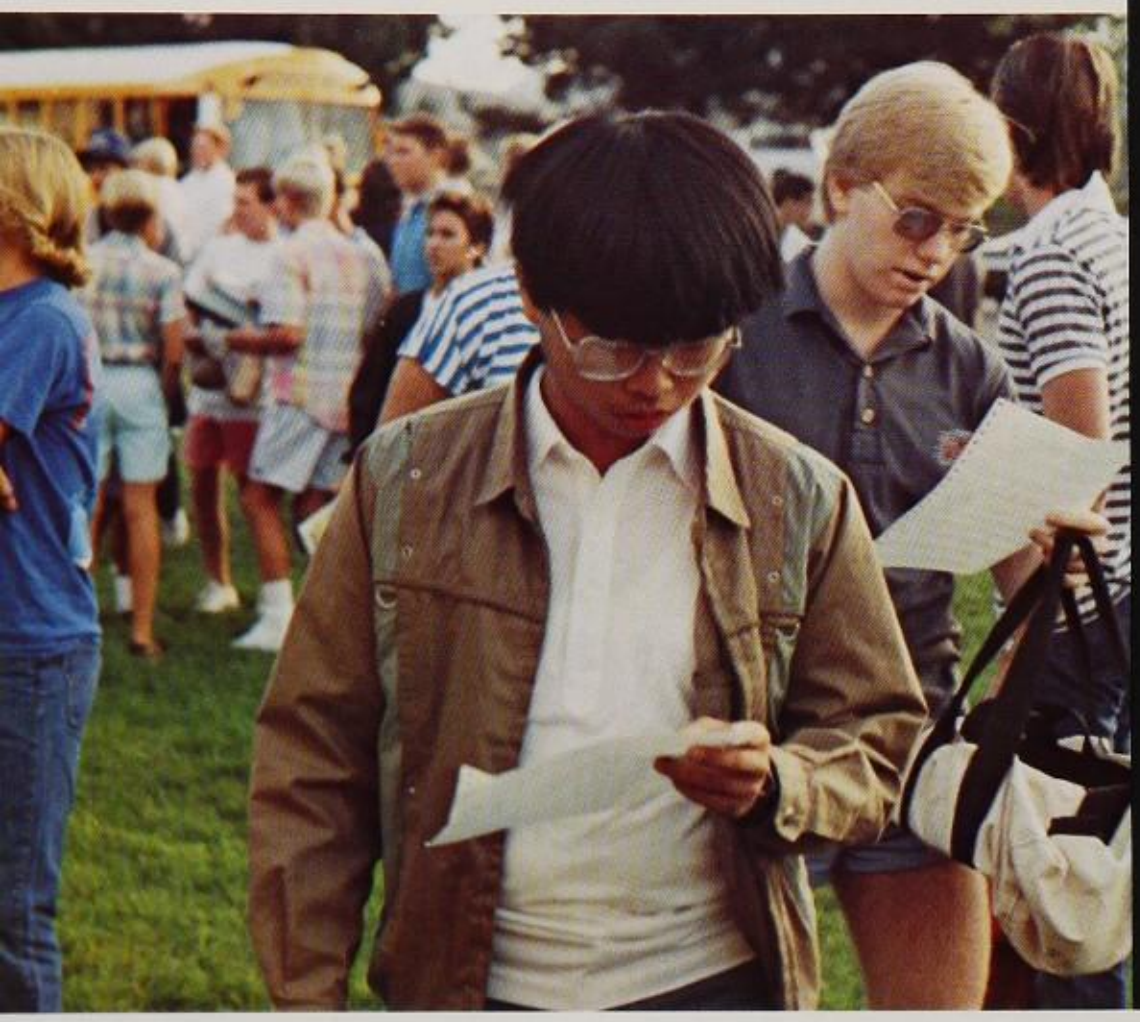
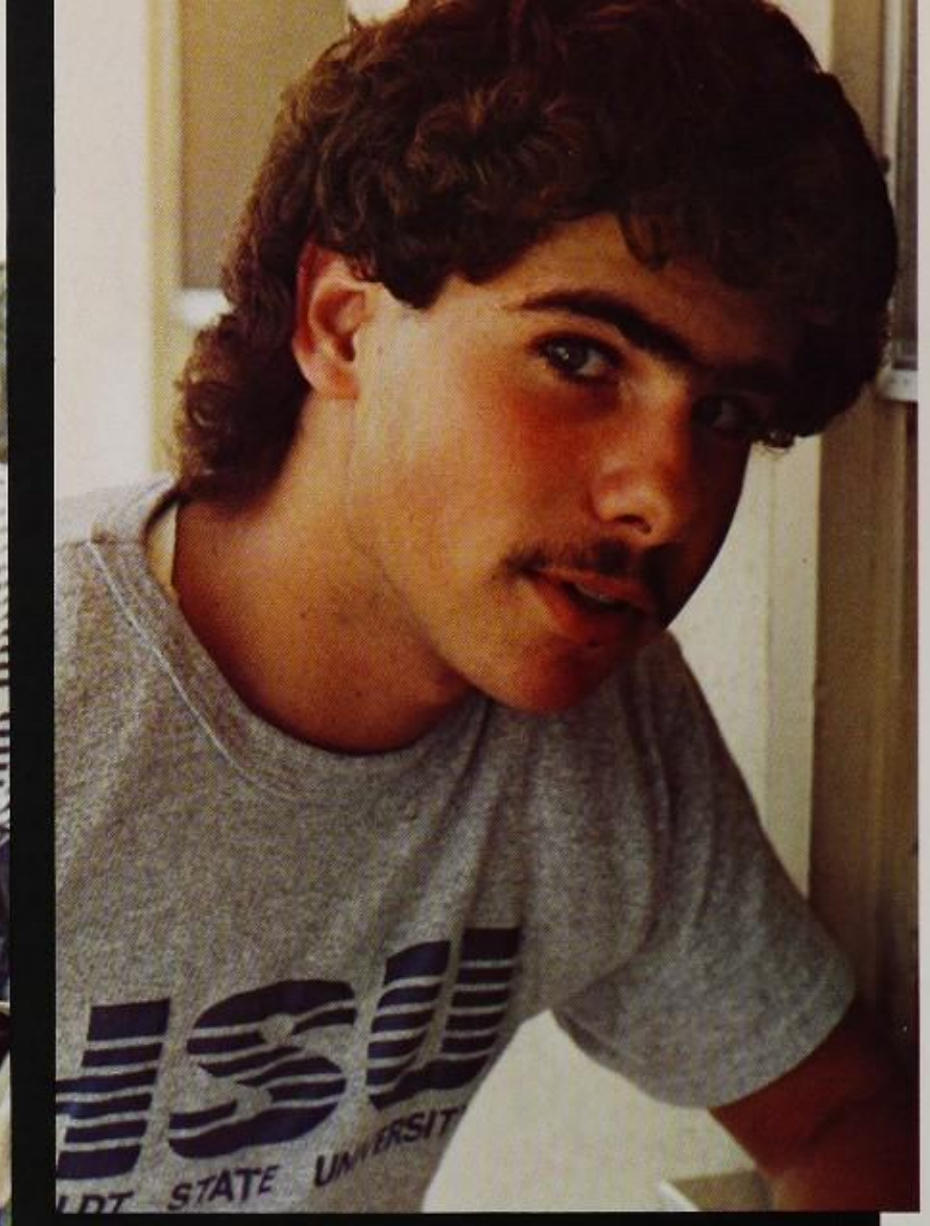
Senior Matt Rostoker reminisces about a summer all too short and a school year all too long.

Confused faces characterized the first day of school for incoming freshmen.





CONFUSION AND CHAOS REIGN
opening day jitters

A beaded necklace of yellow buses on a chain of cars dominated the swarming surroundings at PHS on the morning of September 9th. New students and entering freshman expressed bewilderment within the frenzy of tackling schedule lines and the abundance of people. As the onslaught of a new year rang under the first bell, Cindy Stenger noticed all of the "Confused people unfamiliar with the campus." Greg Stampfli reflected on his jittery first day, stating the "Depression" he entered school with turned into "excitement" as it progressed and "relief" when it ended.

New growth epitomized the year just as class-schedule lines only warned of the impending situations that would surface during the first semester. Burdened with complications, the campus populace sought solutions to their gripes regarding foodlines, a shortage of lockers, crowded hallways, classrooms, and buses, traffic, and the various sections of the school undergoing construction.

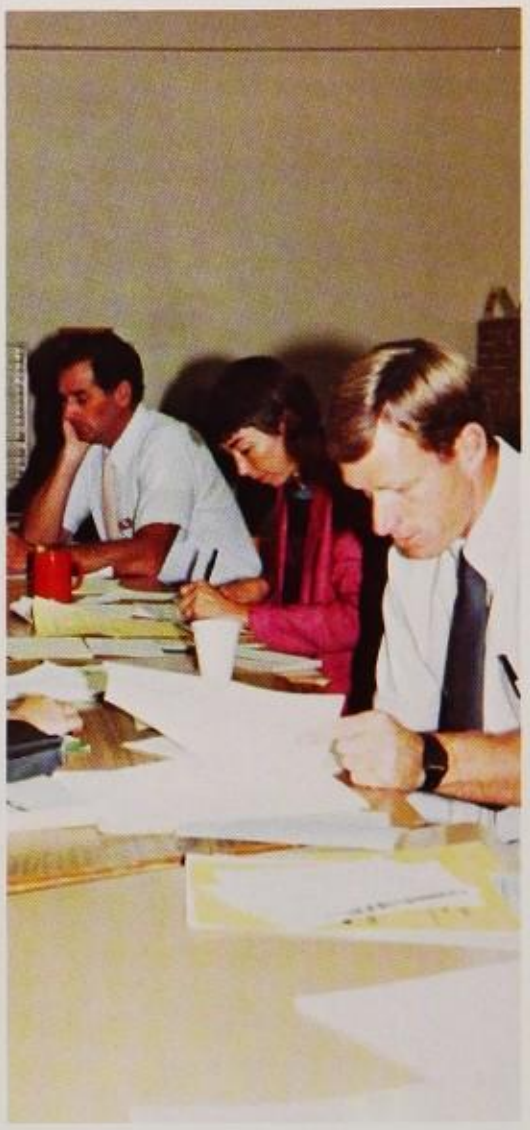
The PHS Redevelopment Foundation broke ground and completed the early phases of a master plan aimed at renovating the stadium, track and field, and eventually leading to the creation of a performing arts center. Principal, Dr. Thomas Robinson rejoiced at the advancement of the project he founded, exulting, "Nothing can stop us now! The Titans are Coming Home!" In addition to the new tradition of playing home football games in the new facility, PHS also boasted of another celebration, dealing with her Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

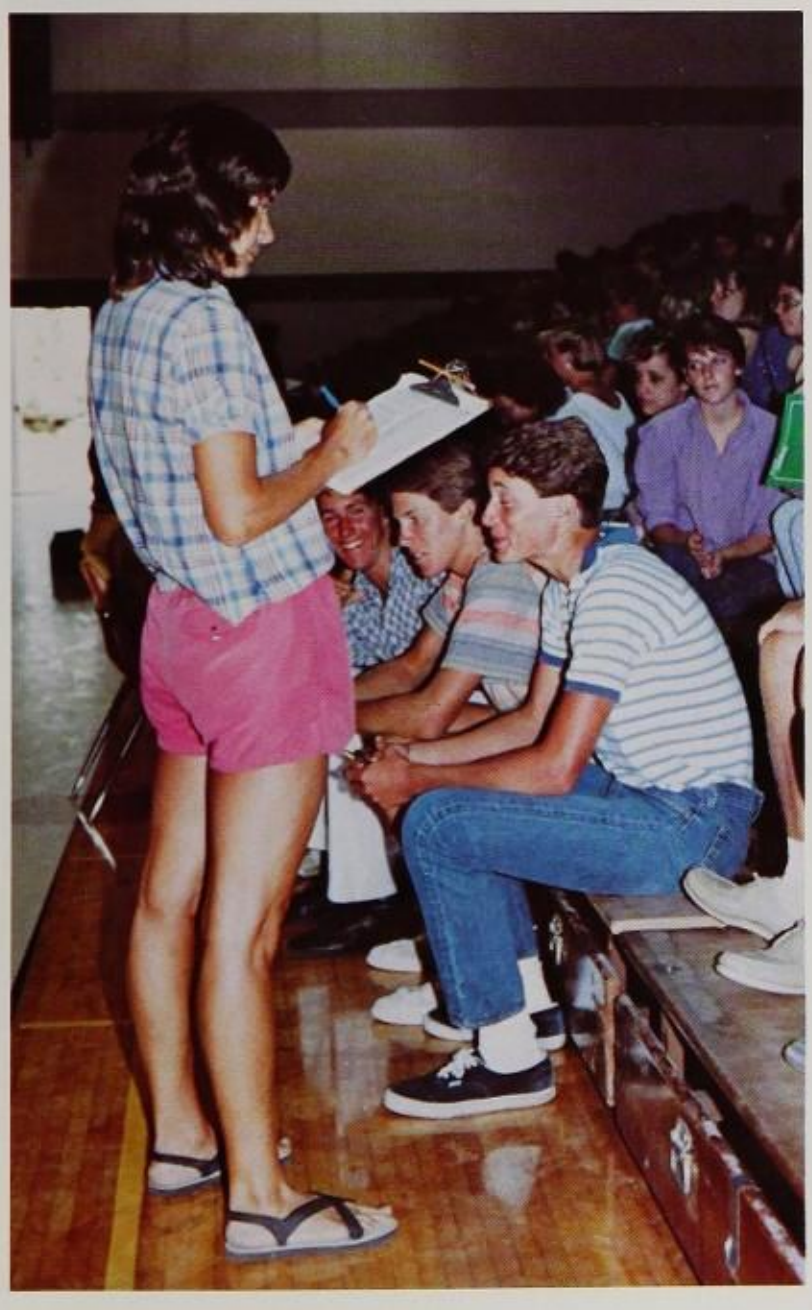
Despite the anxieties and crowded conditions that enveloped PHS, the end of summer dawned upon a silver anniversary and new traditions of "Coming Home."

Did we really look that young when we were freshmen?

John McClure, Steve Jumper, Bob Culviner and Erin Monahan lend a helping hand, passing out class schedules to underclassmen.

Counselors David Boulware, Sheila Arneson, and Mike Kearns attempt to solve scheduling complications.





Coach Branstetter and Mr. Hudgins have forgotten that they're not kids anymore.

Coach Mary Cooper doesn't seem to find Aaron Silveyra and Jud Buechler very funny.

Eliza Swanson, Angie Boehm, Arron McDonald and Dana Stein wait patiently in the cafeteria lunch line.

Rows of cars make their mass exit from the school parking lot every day.

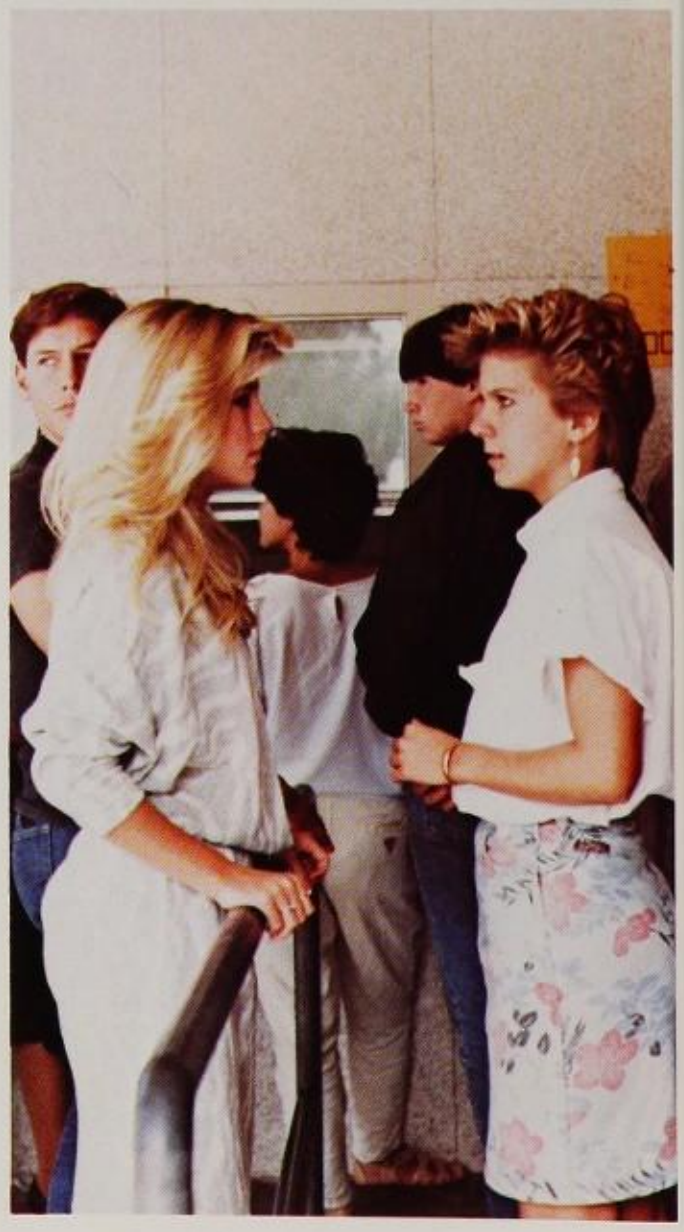
PHS GROWS AND GROWS AND . . .

At close proximity

"THE CROWDS! WHOA!!!" gasped Lisa Long as she bypassed the masses on the lunch lines. With a record enrollment of over 2,710 students and a faculty of nearly 300 at PHS (originally designed for a mere 1,500 students) multitudes of people engulfed and flooded the hallways, walkways, and grassy grounds on campus. Inundated with serious surplus growth, PHS found itself inadequately prepared to handle the overload. Summer construction continued into the first semester as mud, tar, and scrap wood were tracked like footprints all over the school.

The prevailing population troubles complicated matters for students. With 3-4 people sharing one seat on the schoolbuses, a group of underclassmen unanimously agreed their ride, "Was very uncomfortable and overcrowded!" Upperclassmen experienced difficulties in attempting to enter the parking lot as it reached capacity. After school, the tortures of exiting into the traffic jam on Titan Way encouraged Tim Williams to believe, "They need a light here. It's a problem now and it's an accident waiting to happen!"

The locker shortage affected over thirty students, their only solution suggested sharing with a friend. With so many young people on campus, Martha Ybarrondo felt, "PHS has friendly students; despite its size, it's like a small town!"



Are Erin and Shelly Monahan really sisters? Could have fooled me.

Really, I was sick yesterday. Don't you believe me?

ACHIEVEMENT CONTINUES AT PHS

soaring to new heights

By opening the doors of our minds with the keys of our acquired knowledge and understanding, we discovered new frontiers and dared to dream. We decided what we wanted to reach for. We searched and looked for the key to achievement.

Success! P.H.S. has always been one of the leaders of academic and athletic excellence in North San Diego County. We stepped into the future while celebrating our Twenty-fifth Anniversary. The rapidly developing field of computer technology warranted the renovation of two classrooms to become the Institute of Applied Technology.

From Biology to Physics, A.P. English to Writing Seminar, Football to swimming, clubs to socials, we strove to succeed and improve on past years. We are young, growing and innovative and we want to make our high school years shine.

PHS football has not played a true home game since 1976. With the support of the "Bring the Titans Home Fund", Dr. Thomas Robinson has made the "Titan Stadium" a reality. He stressed, "As a basis for community and scholastic support for the athletic teams, I feel the stadium will bring the students closer to their school. It will be valued for years to come, serving as an important structure for all to identify with." The project planned to have three stages of completion. Dr. Robinson outlined them as, "First, we completed the visitors' bleachers, seating 8,800, and have started building the homestands, seating 3,000. We also plan an installation of a modern lighting system. The final stages involve the construction of a permanent concession stand and a performing arts center." The chrysalis of mud and dirt has already shown signs of becoming a thing of beauty.

INDIVIDUALISM PERSONIFIED

styles and more styles

This year on campus, some surprising new styles grabbed everyone's attention. Styles ranged from casual denim jeans and cotton T-shirts to the contemporary yuppy look of Izod shirts, woolen sweaters and pastel colored slacks. There's something to suit everyone. Simple dresses, concert T-shirts, sweatshirts depicting sports or vacation spots, neo-psychedelic colors and paisley prints, and an unlimited range of dyed hair all have a place at PHS.

The punk-rock scene made itself felt with an assortment of hair styles and hair colors of everything blonde to black to pink to burgundy in contrast to their ever present black garb.

The G.Q. and Harpers Bazaar influence represents the more preppie, sophisticated style of attire. Mike Mansfield described himself as, "Casual, comfortable, and semi-preppie. I wear jeans, all colors of materials; oxford/polo style shirts, sweatshirts, and cotton shirts."

The 1960's appear to be hitting the local scene, with an influx of bright and psychedelic prints on shirts and jackets. The occasional thrift shopper of this crowd buys bell-bottoms, loose cotton blouses, any far-out ties or bandanas, and leather belts.

The athletic type adorns their uniforms and varsity jackets. The disciplined and well-conditioned muscles expressing their hard efforts and pride.

The full circle of PHS Looks appears incomplete because there are as many styles as people.

RELAXING MOMENTS
a peek at campus life

Beyond the concrete borders at the north end of the quad, a train of silent students crept around the corner and entered the cafeteria. To preserve their anonymity, the group hid their faces beneath their texts and notebooks. Suddenly, the only female in the group blurted a noticeable, "Yeaaaaahhhhh! NO LUNCH LINES FOR ME TODAY!"

The evidence of Titaln-life appeared campus wide, especially during lunch. While some students charged into the cafeteria to avoid lines, others brown bagged it and laughed at their peers in line. There were always the few who retreated beneath a shady tree or sought refuge on the vast front lawn of the school.

Besides eating and talking frantically during mid-day, the active types became more active and loud as they assumed various roles. For instance, Craig Bradley and Charlie Mitchell tossed their frisbee across the crowded quad and then proceeded to attack it. Other fun happenings included the enter-the-student-store-and-see-if-you-make-it-out-alive, the overachiever who plops down with a book and reads at least three minutes past the last bell, and of course, there's always the carload of students returning from their mini-market run.

Students have traditionally found their own nooks and crannies to escape the pressures of academic life. The tradition continues.

TOGETHER WE GATHER
assemblies add spice

"Hot dog! No way! That's a mother on that bike? Incredible!" uttered Brian Boennighausen, his mouth open. The first outdoor assembly of the year presented Gale Webb and her family. They attracted attention as they performed stunts and tricks on their bicycles, skateboards and skates. Even uninterested attendees developed enough stamina to clap and respect the show. It was also taped for television's "PM Magazine."

An unusual and unpredictable assortment of treats were aimed at gathering the student body together. The ASB launched a mixed collage of tastes and styles. By catering to a varied assemblage of students, the ASB succeeded in enabling a large selection of students to become loyal audiences.

From the lunch-time pep rallies, cheerleaders, choral arrangements, band concerts, and rock bands to the Titan Time assemblies, the ASB brought students together as one large mass of humanity. The outdoor assemblies especially appeared splendid under the backdrop of sunshine tickling the gazing faces.

The administration and the ASB conducted a very busy and highly effective schedule of entertainment. They promoted an exchange of interests and styles amongst the different and unique individuals on campus, offering a new tradition of student compatibility.

A Traditional Year to Remember

And thus, we embark on yet another compelling journey as we escort seniors Tina and Tommy Titan through an incredible year of fun-filled activities. From the glamorous and sophisticated styles of Morp to "Goin' For the Gold" at Homecoming, from a beautiful and romantic prom to the brutality of senior broom hockey, these are the year's guaranteed-to-remain-special in our hearts. This year, the Titans are coming home. Under bright new stadium lights and on new bleacher seats, we'll welcome our teams home to the field of Poway High; and before the newness wears away, we'll bid a sad good-bye to the seniors, the awesome class of 1986. As Matt Paschall sat reflecting on his senior year, he stated that this year's activities "are really fun. They're what's making my last year here great." In agreement, Dave LeCours nodded, "The activities this year are special, really one of a kind." And so, we glide through the '85-'86 school year, enjoying band performances and pep rallies on the quad, looking toward our futures with high hopes and bright ideas, our days at P.H.S. always in our hearts.

MORP . . . SATURDAY NIGHT FERVOR

It's 6:30 p.m. on a sultry Saturday night as Tina parks her mom's tuna boat in front of Tommy's house. Tom opens the door at once, looking stupid in electric blue polyester bell bottoms and gold tube top. "Oh Tommy, you're a sore sight for eyes," Tina exclaims as she whisks him away for a romantic dinner of egg salad sandwiches and Tang. As they arrive at the infamous PHS gym, they're swept off their feet by the 91X Party Sounds, Instantly, Tommy metamorphized into John Travolta as Stayin' Alive pulsates through numerous speakers.

The students boogie into the night until at last, the Morp Court was elected. Highlighted by Trash King Steve Chinn and Queen Chrisanna Weech, the court expanded to include Miss Sleeze, Debi Daniels and the African God, Harold Jones. Through all the excitement, Steve Chinn told surrounding fans, "I'm so tickled to have been chosen Trash King and have someone as gross as Chrisanna as my queen." Eleven o'clock rolled around too quickly for most students. As the dance ended, Senior Ray Navarette told Tommy Titan, "Everyone had such a great time because the music was great, and everyone was really wild." Sadly, students shuffled out to the parking lot, already anticipating next year's Morp.

GOLD GLITTERS OVER HALFTIME ACTIVITIES

On the night of October 18, 1985, Tina and Tommy joined all the Titan fans for the homecoming game against Fallbrook. Complete with triple-time halftime activities, one PHS female commented, "I think the homecoming game, along with the floats, is one of the best games of the year, second only to the Mt. Carmel game."

The respective classes of '86, '87, '88, and '89 began working on their floats during the first weeks of school. Their work paid off.

The half-time activities started immediately after the firing of the gun, signaling the end of the first half. The parade of floats came first. After being judged, the class of '87 came up with the winning float with their gold rush scene. Following in a close second was the class of '86 with their pirate ship, then the class of '88's version of the Olympics and finally the freshmen with another goldrush scene. Senior Mylee Goetz stated about the floats, "I thought they were more creative than in the past years. Everyone did a good job."

Following the floats, came the crowning of the King Jud Buechler and Queen Lorrie Rousseau. Halftime ended this year with a display of fireworks followed by ohs and ahs from the crowd, a job well done on behalf of those who participated.

STAY TUNED, DANCE HIGHLIGHTS AT 11:00

Glitter, romance, a night out on the town . . . Many students expressed these comments on the homecoming dance. Even after a disappointing loss at the game many people remained fired-up.

After dining at some of the fancier restaurants around town, the couples joined Tina and Tommy Titan at the dance. Once Tina and Tommy reached the parking lot, Tommy placed three orange cones around his mother's car. "Gotta do this," he explained, "Mom would kill me if there was even a fingerprint on the car." Tina was still laughing when they glided through the paper tunnel into the newly painted PHS gym.

Following the Goin' for the Gold theme, the gym this year was decorated in green and gray balloons and streamers. The band Cat Tracks provided the top 40 tunes for the dance. Junior Kim Krepelin frowned when remembering the band, "I wanted to dance to more slow songs and, the band only played three. If I'd wanted to dance to what they played, I'd have gone to a nightclub." Others agreed, but said they still had a good time.

REIGNING COURT CAPTURES THE GOLD

Mixed feelings flowed through everyone in the court this year, from pure excitement to the thrill of being selected to represent his class.

For Freshmen Princess Lisa Appel and her twin brother Prince Jason Appel, the thrill was nothing new as they won the title all throughout junior high. Jason jokingly laughed, "If this goes on all through high school, I think I'll go nuts! But it's still a lot of fun." Other old timers to the court included Junior Princess Shelly Monahan, Senior Princess Marilee Ogren, Senior Prince Todd Wilson, and Queen Lorrie Rousseau.

To Lorrie, being elected Queen left her feeling, "Excited, happy, and shocked." The King, Senior Jud Buechler, declared, "It's a privilege to be honored with a beautiful girl such as Lorrie."

Other members of the court included Sophomore Prince Pat Moore and Princess Donna Stiritz, Junior Prince Kenny Battle, Senior Princess Christy Domville, and Senior Prince Matt Paschall.

Matt smiled secretly, "Never in my wildest dreams did I imagine this would happen." While Marilee summed up the feelings of all the senior court, "We're all such close friends. It was really special." All the members of the court agreed that this was one of the greatest experiences of their high school career.

Lorrie concluded, "This experience will be something I will always remember. I think all of us had fun being a part of the court."

CREATIVITY SPARKS A NEW SPIRIT

"Eighty-six, eighty-six," Tina yelled loudly from the quad. Up on the stage, the newest version of "Burn the Devils," a skit ridiculing our rival, Mt. Carmel, drew laughs from the crowd. The band played the Poway fight song while the cheerleaders bounced in simultaneous rhythm to the beat.

Each week the pep-rallies brought new competition to the school. From the twinkie eating contests and class bingo, to Name-That-Tune and Tug O'War, the fights between the classes took on a new meaning this year. The pep-rallies combined creativity with a new spirit. Senior Sonja Bettig claimed, "Pep-rallies show the kind of spirit this school has, besides they're funny to watch."

Varsity football player Rob Browning expressed his opinion, "Of all pep rallies I've witnessed at PHS, our homecoming rally has been the best. It proved to be what a high school pep rally should be; the team was introduced as were the cheerleaders and the court. The band played outstanding and the student body's attention did not wane."

Kathy Rudzinski concluded by saying, "This school can get very boring. Pep rallies get people involved."

THE EMERALD BRIGADE KNOWS NO BOUNDS

Soft, melodious music drifts from the band room to blend in the breeze. Harmoniously, notes float across the quad to rest in the ears of nearby listeners, hinting at what lies ahead for next week's game. But this euphonic sound doesn't come easily — it takes hard work. "Most people don't realize the time and effort put into a performance. We are constantly working to be the best," said Color Guard Captain M.J. Fisher. Daily, students engage in classes and after-school practices, preparing for competitions in which they usually walk away with The Sweepstakes Award, the highest honor possible in a competition. Horn section leader Conrad Ross explained the band's long-term success by stating, "Everyone works hard to do their best because each individual performance is crucial to the success of the entire performance."

Exploding with talent, the band operates on family-like closeness. "Without close-knit friendships, the band wouldn't be so successful." Other members added that band has given them pride in themselves as well as drive and dedication. And this year, the Emerald Brigade won a special honor. The band debuted nation-wide a composition written expressly for them by Canadian composer Brent Dutton. "Astral Expressions," became a highlight that no member will ever forget. Band director Marc Davis summed up the band's success with just one word, "A-W-E-S-O-M-E!"

NIGHT LIFE . . . NEVER HAD IT, NEVER WILL

As the sun sank heavily beneath the horizon, Titans prepared themselves for a happenin' night on the town. While darkness drowned out the daylight, hangouts like Round Table Pizza and the Mann Theatre began to swarm with teenagers in mini skirts and pink lipstick. As for Poway, movies and pizza extended the limit for entertainment. Needless to say, Poway night life left something to be desired. Tonia Reinys expressed her opinion by stating, "There is no life in Poway after dark." Nodding, Julie Dickinson agreed, "It's nearly impossible to stay in Poway and have a good time. It's sad that people have to go to county limits to find fun."

Because of lack of variety, students were forced to make their own fun. Parties headlined events on most weekends, while others metamorphized into beach bums, crashing in front of bon fires. Some spent their evenings in neighboring towns, dancing at After Dark or Distillery. Then again, the movies became a habitual retreat for others and some sought refuge working during their free time. And as always, PHS sporting events served as solid stand-bys. Senior Trace Smith simplified Poway night life by defining the word. "Night life in a nutshell," he said, "can be defined in just one word — D*E*A*D."

ACTIVITIES ADD FLAVOR TO LUNCH

As a huge ball of fire erased the dingy gray morning, stomachs woke up around campus. Grumbling in unison, the noise alleviated the monotony in classrooms until at last, the hour of pandemonium arrived. Finally, the lunch bell rang, unleashing the usual hallway stampede. Immediately, humanity swallowed every square inch of campus as Tina and Tommy Titan battled their way through a group of freshman toward the senior wall. As a local band imitated Top 10 Radio Hits, a group of seniors activate a game of "duck-duck-goose" and "red rover" on the grass. Social butterflies fluttered around the campus, spreading all the latest gossip as the AP students buried their faces in books. Whip cream wars in full force ran rampant through the hallways. Tommy and Tina embarked on a journey toward the cafeteria, but changed their minds at the advice of John Sargeant. "It's nearly impossible to be served in the cafeteria because the place is packed. Besides, who wants to spend their lunch waiting in lines?" Tina and Tommy returned to the quad to resume their social lives, bumping into Jodi Wilson who had just returned from an off-campus lunch. "Thank God for lunch," she said. "It's nice to have 45 minutes to relax. It really breaks up the day."

Crimes Of The Heart Heightens Drama

Night after night, long rehearsals, and frustation on getting everything down perfect in just a few short weeks, this was the way the cast and crew of "Crimes of the Heart" felt when preparing for the first play of the year. Their hard work paid off. The first play of the year ran for six dates in mid-November and what a success it had.

Directed by drama teacher Jan Manos, the play starred some of the veteran players at Poway High. Six students held the leading roles; Kathy Thomas as Meg, Teri Deaver as Lenny, Joyce Gibson as Babe, Linda Powledge as Chick, Mike Heap as Barnette, and portraying Doc Porter was Christopher Eakman.

These roles made up the plot of this tangled drama. Meg, Lenny, and Babe were sisters who managed to get a little mixed up because of their fast paced lives. At a gathering for Lenny's birthday, the viewer learned about Babe's movie stardom and of Meg shooting her ex-husband. As the play progressed other characters appeared and it seemed as if Lenny's the only sane enough one to hold it all together.

The reaction from the audience was overwhelming. One viewer claimed, "The characters portrayed the drama beautifully." While Teri Deaver commented on the long hours she put in, "It took up much of my afternoons, but the cast was united in such a special friendship during that time."

Chris Eakman laughed when asked if it took too much of his time, "The play took a lot of hard work, long nights, and many sacrifices but it's worth it opening night. It was a success."

Winterball Features Valentine's Day

Winter sweethearts happily make their way into the gym.

Crisp, cold February air blew across the parking lot as winter sweethearts waltzed into the long awaited winter ball. This year, complications excluded the traditional Christmas theme from the event. "The reason the dance didn't occur around the Christmas holidays was because the ASB was unable to reserve the gym on a Saturday evening," stated Brady Hamilton, sophomore class president. Instead of utilizing the usual holiday theme, students impatiently waited an extra two months for a Valentine's Day winter ball. The new idea was a huge success.

Students began the evening with the girls treating their valentines to dinner at a local restaurant such as Galileo's or Hungry Hunter before attending the dance. Greeted with Top 40 radio hits orchestrated by the local band "Features," students quickly filled empty tables as well as the dance floor. Red and pink streamers and balloons added a festive atmosphere as the ASB served complimentary refreshments. Stated senior Kristen Stewart, "I really liked the Valentine's Dance! It was a new change and the ASB did a great job with decorations." Janet Helser quickly agreed. "I was surprised at the turnout. It was great. The band was really enthusiastic, and the music was super good."

AIR BANDS RIVAL REAL GROUPS

The house lights slowly dimmed as the spotlight was flashed upon the stage. "Ladies and gentlemen, allow me to introduce one of the newest groups on the scene, A-Ha!" Tina and Tommy screamed wildly with the rest of the crowd as the band took the stage.

This was the beginning of the Fourth Annual Poway High School Air Band competition. This year's show began with twelve bands instead of the usual six, performing at a sellout night show in front of a panel of celebrity judges and MC Rick Rockwell alias Skippy on "San Diego at Large." Six bands were chosen to perform during the Titan-Time assembly. One face in the crowd was heard commenting, "I think it was a really great idea to have a night show because other people in the community were able to attend and see the fun activities that go on at our school."

The six outstanding bands that made it to the finals were A-Ha, ZZ Top, B-52's, Fat Boys, Kiss, and the Blues Brothers. Both the crowd and the performers were excited about this year's Air Band. When asked how it felt to perform in front of such a wild crowd, ZZ Top's Michele Anet responded, "It was really scary right before we went on the stage but once I was out there I had a good time!" The feelings were mutual for most of the performers.

John Ashworth of the Blues Brothers also stated enthusiastically, "It was a lot of fun. I felt like a real rock star when we went out on stage. The crowd would scream so loud at times that I could not hear the music."

Who won this extraordinary mimicking feat? Well, honorable mentions went to the six groups who did not make it to the finals; Oingo Boingo's "Dead Man's Party," ZZ Top's "Legs," Eurythmics's "Right by your side," Captain Sensible's "Captain I Said Wot," Beach Boy's "Catch a Wave," Bryan Adams' "Kids Want to Rock," and a special appearance by Billy Idol. Broom Hockey Boosts Spirit Among Seniors

As the camera pans the fading horizon, our heroes Tom and Tina Titan appear on the scene. Sporting bullet-proof vests and football helmets, the two peel out of an oil-stained driveway enroute to the UTC ice arena. The camera tracks them to the end of the street, then pans to a rhinestone-studded sky. Words splash across the screen. "Just when you thought it was safe to return to the ice . . . Senior Broom Hockey's back!"

The scene opens with the arena already swarming with seniors dressed in ratty tennies and old sweats. In keeping with a PG-13 rating, the event included violence, danger and torn clothing; but the excitement didn't stop there. It continued in ten-minute spurts with teams of eight sliding, tripping, tackling, and suffering for the pleasure of entertainment. Pandemonium engulfed the crowd as the camera captured the flurry of low-flying brooms. Bruised and battered, exhaustion ended the show. Surrounded by shredded clothes, abandoned shoes and scattered teeth, the teams crawled from the ice into retirement while Lisa Simon summed up the event in a word — "FUN!" Katie Rarity was quick to agree. "It was wild!" she laughed. Christy Selser closed the event by stating: "The University Towne Centre ice arena was the perfect setting for broom hockey. There was enough room for a lot of people to play at one time. My shins will never be the same again."

HOP ABOARD SADIES HAWAIIAN CRUISE

"Aloha and welcome aboard Sadies Hawaiian Cruise to the tropics of Hawaii and through the fresh open atmosphere of the Pacific. Plenty of activities await your discovery. On the main deck there is dancing to the wild music of Barracho Y Loco and their free-spirited native beat. At ten we will sponsor a limbo contest, come test your skills to see how low you can go. And if all this wears you out, there are tropical refreshments on the Tahiti deck over-looking a spectacular view of calm ocean beaches . . . "

On the evening of March fourteenth, couples donned grass skirts, Mu-mus, Hawaiian prints, flojos, and huraches; covered themselves with leis and took off to enjoy a twist to the traditional Sadies Hawkin's Dance — Sadies Hawaiian Cruise. The ASB was skeptical over whether the students would accept this twist where the attire was Hawaiian rather than western (which many students thought only put down Poway more) and so was the music. This time, instead of girls ask guys, either could do the asking. One Senior mentioned, "I think it was better that way considering the last dance only a month ago was girls ask guys, this way either was free to ask another so there was no waiting around."

Almost everybody agreed that "goin' Hawaiian" theme really set the trend for having a different dance with still the same intentions of Sadies. "It was definitely a blast!" exclaimed Senior Jennifer Zug.

Decorations were one of the strong points for this dance. Along with the Pineapple Fruit Drinks, were surfboards, windsurfers and a Hobie catamaran outside to set off the ocean flavor. A member of the ASB, Katie Rarity expressed her feelings on the decorations, "With all the hard work that went into finding people to provide some of the decorations we needed, I was glad the dance was such a great success. The Senior class officers did an outstanding job in the planning and the outcome of the dance."

Later in the evening, Tina and Tommy gathered with the rest of their friends to witness the limbo contest. After half an hour, Michelle Bellefeuille took away the prize at a back-breaking twenty-one inches. Conrad Vaplon watched the whole thing, "It was unbelievable that those guys (in the limbo contest) could make it under a bar that low."

Sailing away into the sunset Tina and Tommy Titan stood at the railing of the Tahiti deck and gazed out over the sunlit sea. "This cruise has been the best thing to happen to Poway High," Tina said lovingly.

Students Step Out In Style

A warm June breeze ruffles the trees, carrying with it the din of voices and the pulsating beat of live music. Students arrived at this year's prom site, Camp Pendleton, after beginning the evening with a romantic dinner at a local restaurant such as The Marine Room or The Triton. As students arrived at The Officer's Club, they were greeted with festive decorations provided by the junior class. "We chose Camp Pendleton because of the spacious dance floor and endless possiblities for decorating," said Julie Dickinson, junior class commissioner. Soft, white lights and streamers along with flowering trees and plants accented the elegant walkway and ballroom as students enjoyed the pleasure of dancing to two terrific bands. Exquisitely dressed couples danced and socialized from 8 pm to 12 am while indulging in complimentary soft drinks and hors d'oeurves. Despite a long line, students anxiously awaited their turn for pictures taken by Schaffer Photography. At 12:00 am, couples headed for fun at After-Prom or made their own fun by getting wild at parties. Festivities drew to a close with a buffet breakfast at Stoneridge Country Club, where Lisa Simon stated, "Prom this year was extra special because the junior class went all out with the decorations and the bands. I've never had so much fun in my life." Nodding in agreement, Leigh Ann LaTorraca added "This year's theme (Steppin' Out In Style) was really great. 25th Anniversary

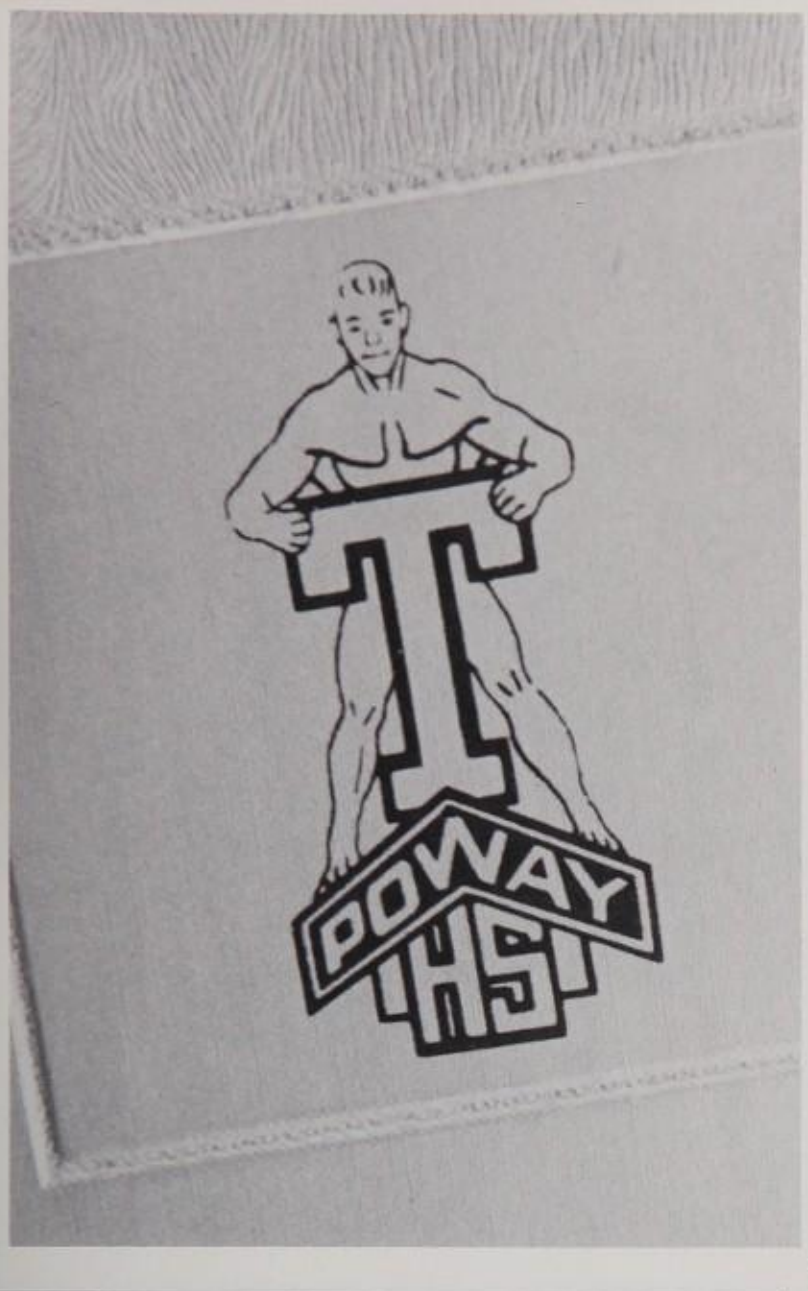
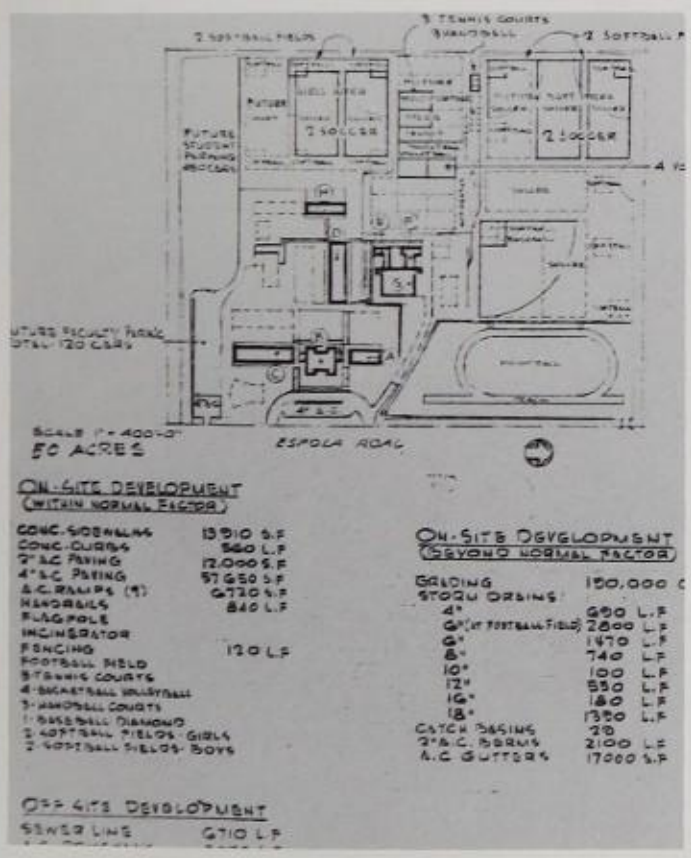
An overview of Poway High, as it appeared in 1966, illustrates its growth in twenty-five years as compared with the present overview on page one.



"Poway High Day" was celebrated on November 4, 1961 in the gym. The new school was formally dedicated with a ceremony and afterwards a Bar-B-Q lunch.

The mighty "Titan" as he appeared, in his youth, on the cover of the 1963 Odyssey.

As PHS welcomed its 25th Anniversary, growth and construction continued on campus.



The above is a copy of the on-site developments and additions which were planned in 1962 to improve Poway High's foundations.

PHS

Traditions Founded

Established with only six original buildings and a total of 71,936 square feet, Poway High School was officially commemorated on November 4, 1961. In a twenty-five year history, the school originally designed for a little over a thousand students as a remedy for the emerging growth problems and tedious hour-long bus rides for Poway youths to Escondido High, grew into a tremendous campus of over 2,800 students and saw its original stadium built and rebuilt.

Although the burden of growth continued to accompany PHS as it matured, the founding years played a major role in starting the Titan tradition of excellence.

During its early years, PHS was a closed campus and the parking lot was off-limits until the close of school. A dress-code also existed, with girls in skirts which came below their knees. Poway Road evolved from a stop-signed interchange with highway 395 (now interstate 15) and consisted of two-lanes. In fact, PHS was built by the Escondido Union High School District and was the first high school to serve Poway since 1897!

With traditions of football games, pizza, an active student body, and a diverse and close-knit school, PHS chronicled the growth of its campus and students.

Students Benefit from Athletics

Poway opened their memorable 25th year by sending a record 5 out of 6 fall sports to CIF. This initial success spread from team to team and the enthusiasm for sports mounted. More Titans participated in sports this year than ever. Their involvement enhanced their overall experience in high school. Cari Houtz, the girl's athletic commissioner, commented, "I think the people who get involved in sports are more enthusiastic and enjoy their high school years more."

With the addition of boy's volleyball as a sport, the Titans adopted a 22nd sport this year. This shows the rapid growth in interest of all sports considering that 25 years ago Poway High offered only 6. Not only did having a variety of sports make school more interesting, but it added a whole new dimension to education for those students who participated. Wrestler Ray Navarette expressed this opinion, "Through sports you meet a lot of people, make friends, and most importantly have fun!"

Everyone likes to have fun and sports at PHS were even more fun due to the success of our teams. "We have about the most potent athletic program in the county!" boasted Varsity tennis player Gordon Shockley.

Kiwanis Cup Home Again

"Do anything and everything possible to get people excited!" said Bob Culviner of the Bleacher-Creatures as he and other club members cheered supportively to Titan fans in the stands to keep the spirit going. "I want to beat Mt. Carmel!" raced Andy Byrne intensely through the air and out into the burning fields. Cheers and screams reached an all-time high the night of their game against the rival, Mt. Carmel. Despite being labeled as visitors we stuffed the bleachers as if we played home. Disregarding the delay in building our stadium and their record, this year's team consisted of quality athletes and more experienced players. This helped to bring home the Kiwanis Cup (won by a great lead of 21 to 12) to PHS for the fourth year in a row. The team captains, linebacker Steve Chinn, receiver Clint Lynch, and receiver Jeff Maynor contributed their leadership, rewarding themselves with a win on their final game. Hidden strengths from the linemen, Harold Jones, Randy Rostad, Rob Barrie, and Brian Vickers, who worked hard through injuries, also displayed great performances and dedication to the team. "He's been like a friend," described Andy Byrne about his coach, Dave Boulware, who shared the hard times and goals with the players during practices. "It was an absolute pleasure to work with these young men. They are quality players and winners!" he said proudly about this year's season. "I have pride in my personal performances and pride in how our audience sees the game. Football is definitely worth the work involved," explained Todd Wilson after one of the great wins that concluded the season with "VICTORY". The season, decorated with the Kiwanis Trophy provided lasting memories as well as excitement to plunge into the next year. Good luck to the future Poway High Football team.

J.V. Flirts With Success

Next year's potential Varsity appears to be off to a fine start. The football season ran well for the Junior Varsity team according to Coach Dave Boulware who reported that in spite of some rough opposition the team, "performed well and showed they learned from our workouts" Troy Steiner mentioned that, "less support (spectator) is given to the Junior Varsity team, but we've got a good team. The games are pretty exciting, and we should get more publicity now." Pre-game enthusiasm was stoked to fever pitch amongst the team, however and Paul Blaha maintained that this "fired up" attitude was responsible for the aggressive play that hallmarked their victories. Player Craig Godfrey said that the season could have gone either way as far as wins and losses but that "our record wasn't bad and we got a lot of experience from these teams we played." "And that," said Scott Bloom, "is what will make the difference next season." Thanks to attitudes such as Scott's, this instinctive motivation spread throughout the team. Scott also mentioned that a lot of the fired up feeling came from the J.V. cheerleaders who, "came to practices and generally let us know that they knew we were giving it our best shot." Coach Boulware closed by saying that despite final scores for the season, he expected great things from his players in the years to come.

Frosh Crush Rival Squads

Inexperience to a relatively new school and a relatively new sport did nothing to demoralize the Freshmen Football team this year. Coach Greg Franzen appeared especially pleased with the success of his players and their game results this season and happily remarked, "We've the makings of some fine young athletes here and I don't think much in the way of opposition will hold them from success." Preparation for the first games seemed endless although squad members who persevered were rewarded with a smoothly operating team. Despite heat, mud and over-zealous sprinklers, it was a common sight to see freshmen players practicing in even the most extreme weather conditions. "The first weeks are hardest so we can see who really wants to play," said Franzen. "We had a simply enormous turnout for tryouts and the result of "cutting" was such that the team plays well together which is what is winning the games. All I can say is look for these guys next year."

Varsity Sets Nets on Fire

Continuing the long tradition of Varsity Women's Tennis excellence, this year's squad worked long and hard to achieve recognition. Coach Evi Yarnell worked especially hard during practice sessions to ensure that each player's individual weak points quickly became their strong points. "We did well because of the previous experience and dedication of our team," said Senior Sybil Schlotman. "Or," quipped Deena Mueller, "it could have been all the chocolate between games!" Whatever the reason, our girls did not let us down as they treated spectators to seemingly effortless returns and backhands whenever they entered the courts. "It's been an extremely exciting season," said Dominique Rosano. "I couldn't have hoped for any better competition," added Carla Quaresma. Michelle Anet noted, "It feels good to get on the court and absolutely pour your energy into a game and look up . . . to realize you've won." Carla Quaresma was unanimously voted MVP (most valuable player of the year) and she reported that she had a great deal of fun while playing on the team. Carla's recognition was special too because of the fact that her tennis abilities have ranked her not only as a talented player, but as the only Freshman to play on the Varsity level this year. Doubles teammates Sybil Schlotman and Marilee Ogren also maintained a fine performance of precision in their advance in their division. Overall, the team finished the season with a 2nd place CIF finish. With players Carla Quaresma, Dominique Rosano, Jill Brawner, and Deena Mueller coming back next year, the 1986 team promises a season of similar victories to come.

J.V. Bursts Onto Courts

"I'm extremely pleased with the way this season has gone for our team," asserted Coach Evi Yarnell when quizzed about Junior Varsity Girls Tennis. "We've so many promising players that I'm expecting great games from them." Both teams; Varsity and Junior Varsity, trained together which gave the J.V. team that added competitive edge they needed. "Training with better players can be depressing at times," sighed Lisa Yum, "But it really improves your game and it's surprising how close the scores can get after a bit." Lisa Calhoun also seemed to feel that mixed practice prepared them better for the more aggressive teams they played. "It built our confidence up to the point where we knew we were good, so we just marched on court and showed what we could do." Laura Whyte said that players were playing on the team because of a love for the game, and also a desire for improvement. "Improving is the key since anyone can just play tennis . . . we want to win." Lisa Hess wound it up by saying, "It really IS like a family . . . we all pull to succeed."

J.V. Spikes Vicious Wins

Sweating out the intense passing and spiking drills, and crucial serving practices a fountain of success sprang out from the concept of "striving to improve on each individual," illustrating teamwork. Even though the team consisted of 16 players, with Katie Merrifield and Linda Bertran as captains, unity and determination brought the team together, leading these volleyball players into a line of continuous victory, highlighted by their first-place finish in the Christian Tournament. "A friend," as Carolyn Beattie referred to her coach, Mary Cooper, "contributed her faith and trust, along with long hours of hard practices to make Poway the best." Some freshman starters such as Judy Egan, Kirby Seale, Shannon Griffin and Carrie Poynter showed great performances and improvements on the courts. "I think volleyball is a sport you need a lot of motivation to want to be the best," expressed Katie Merrifield. As a result, each game showed glows of team spirit and constant devotion to the sport. This year the J.V. Volleyball team, with 11 wins and 5 losses, proved to be one of the most consistent and energetic teams that Poway ever had.

Titans "Eat Nails"

"Let's play Poway ball!" and "Eat Nails!" were the cheers that started off the game with the spirit of Titan pride and the hope to play up to their fullest ability. These motivations and agressiveness' not only appeared as words on the court, but also within each player as Amy Johnson expressed, "I feel like you can't give up until the game is over." The team consisted of tough athletes with outstanding skills, topped off with the unbreakable unity they possessed between each other. "Since we are a family, I feel like a part of me is on the court even when I'm not playing," stated Christie Hoover showing the true meaning of team work. figure by supporting and pushing the team to make them the best. "She's a great coach. She's like a good friend, too. And she's really dedicated to our team," commented Julie Read. Spiker and backrow player Rachel Arzaga predicted, "I feel great! I think we'll get first in C.I.F. this year." at the beginning of the season. The hard work and dedication the team put in on and off the courts were rewarded by winning C.I.F., the Serra Kiwanis Tournament, the Hilltop Tournament as well as many league games they played throughout the season.

Great backrow performances by junior Kirsten Pinnell and terrific spikes hit by Sophomore Cheri Boyer and Junior Sheila Kube show bundles of potential for the upcoming year. "I think our volleyball team will be good for the next couple of years. We started a tradition here. I hope everyone knows how good we really are," said Deanne Anastas who made first team, MVP in the Palomar League and C.I.F. player of the year. Varsity Unifies

Though the season proved to be a trying one, the Varsity boys kept up their spirits. One reason for their struggle dealt with the extremely strong competition between inter-league teams. Nevertheless, everyone tried their best to unify and form a stronger team. As Daryl Shepard stated, "Through the season the team unity really held the team together." As the year progressed, their desire to win remained and therefore spirits ran high especially after a greatful win over the Mount Carmel Sundevils. This was the first time in the history of the two schools that Poway has beaten them. "Because we leveled the Mount, it gave our team a lot of confidence," stated Jeff Kenney.

"This season proved to be rewarding due to our team spirit." — Bill Dunker

A main factor in the togetherness stemmed from both coach Schaitels' and coach Jones' dedication given to the team at all times. They supplied each runner with a great deal of attention towards his style and made every effort to develop him to his highest potential. This related to another problem plaguing the Varsity boys. In order to win, five people must cross the finish line before five do from any other team. Two runners from Poway always came across early, but a slow finish from three others would set the team at a disadvantage. Therefore depending on the strength of the other team, a win weighed on the probability of five Titans crossing before five of any other school. Poway's excellent coaching helped to improve this tremendously. As Brad Hyldahl commented, "The coaching helped a lot to develop the leg of the team so that we were successful."

Completing the season with a record of 6 and 3, not to mention placing third in league finals, the Varsity squad qualified to advance on to CIF. In this important event, Daryl finished fourth, Bill eleventh, and Brad thirteenth.

These results proved that team unity combined with excellent coaching produce a rewarding outcome.

Daryl Shepard escapes from the pack during an after school practice.

With a determined look on his face, Brad Hyldahl makes every effort to keep ahead of the competition from behind.

Off to a running start, the Varsity Titan boys find themselves swept up in the action.

Running all alone, Bill Dunker eyes the finish line.

J.V. Thrash Competition

Although the Freshman boys ran separately from the J.V. boys, both completed their most successful seasons yet. This was due to the excellent coaching provided by Coach Jones and Coach Schaitel, combined with the desire to pull together as a unit, and the overall talent present within.

Coaching makes up such a large part of individual achievement and, therefore, it proves helpful to have very dedicated coaches who are willing to give everything they have in the quest for a more perfect team. As Brad Roth commented, "Both coaches showed me my weak points and my strong points and helped me to improve them."

An important aspect of the squad dealt with an attitude of striving towards total unity. This forced each runner to give his best in order to make his teammates' efforts worthwhile. As a result, the J.V. and Freshman boys turned in win after win against their competition. Finishing up with a record of 6 and 1 for the Freshman and an undefeated 9 and 0 for the J.V., proved that their efforts paid off. As Bill Santos replied, "Practicing with an undefeated team made you want to work to do better."

Due to the J.V.'s efforts in forming a more unified team, dedication was necessary. Their enthusiasm allowed them to reach their goals.

J.V. Runs With Spirit

With such qualities as knowledgeable, dedicated coaches and a positive team attitude, success was the only possibility.

The J.V. squad contained three main ingredients which allowed them to complete a rewarding season. Dedication, team support, and the spirit evolving from inside of the girls brought about a positive attitude which carried over from practices into competition. At each of the five days of practice per week, everyone put in lots of hard work. As Kirsten Keithly stated, "Every day after school practices have been a lot of hard work, but have paid off." This is evident in their 5 and 1 record in closing out the season.

Work alone does not create a winning team. Team support also adds a great deal to the overall success. It was obvious at the pasta parties and through the genuine concern of Coach Schaitel and Jones towards each girl. "The coaches really inspired us to help us do good," Wendy Hrdlicka stated.

A most important aspect dealt with each person's spirit coming from within. This spirit took on many forms and was the key in the team's determination to continue and win.

The winning combination of dedication, team support, and internal spirit led the J.V. gitls through a rewarding and fulfilling season.

Varsity Sets New Record

Running away with a new school record, the Varsity girls proved that talented people who work hard and receive support from both teammates and coaches alike, will be successful.

Many people feared that without Jennifer Sheflo, the team would have no chance in winning. Fortunately, this theory became obsolete as the girls started to continuously outrun other teams. As Kim Uyeda replied, "I think it's amazing how far the girls cross country team has come this year considering we did not have Jennifer Sheflo."

Lauren Anderson, Carrie Gelwix, Vanessa Owen, Teresa Davis, and Kim Uyeda led the Varsity team to victory throughout the season. Their tremendous efforts made possible a needed win over Fallbrook and San Dieguito which closed out the season at eight and one, edged out only by Vista. Advancing onto League Finals, the Titan girls came away with an excellent finish. In this important event, Lauren finished fourth, and Carrie eleventh. This qualified them for a very exciting CIF meet where they came in sixth in their race and tenth at an overall standing.

"The coaches added a great deal to improving the team."
— Teresa Davis

This success did not just come without effort, but was the by-product of many hours of hard work given by each runner, as well as the expert coaching from Mr. Schaitel and Mr. Jones. Lauren Anderson commented, "The hard work we put in each day of practice has helped to develop our team to its highest potential." Practices included many miles of running along Espola Road and in the back country, whether it be raining or blistering hot.

Talented girls possessing the desire to work hard and accept advice from coaches made up the winning combination known as the girls Varsity team. Summing things up, an inspirational quote to Molly Roth and her teammates goes as follows, "The race is not always to the swift, but the those who keep running."

Out on her own, Lauren Anderson strides toward the finish line.

Varsity Polo Swamps C.I.F.

Even outboards couldn't have helped opposing-teams playing our Varsity Water Polo Crew this year in their aggressive drive for CIF. Poway, previously ignored as lesser competition quickly established early in the season, to the dismay of other teams, a vicious offense designed to swamp all rivals. The moans and groans from Titans sore from workouts were quickly traded for cheers as Poway roared over lesser teams to focus upon main rival, Mt. Carmel. With a record of 20 wins and 3 losses, most agreed that the effort was worth it. Paul Prebble, unanimously voted MVP for the season, as well as being Co-captain, contributed to the winning effort by shattering several of his own records, including the most goals in one season with a total of 231. Brian Berry had the most blocks with nine, and Senior Goalie Greg Blomberg made the most blocks in the goal with 21. Greg also shattered his previous record of 181 blocks last year with 213. Coach Mark Miller proudly quoted highlights such as Poway's 12/10 victory over Fallbrook and the 13/11 triumph over Vista, both for only the second time in Poway history. Coach Miller said early in the season that his main goal was to see his players go to the C.I.F. Tournaments this year. Saying that, "There is no doubt in my mind that the team is good enough, we have to have the drive and the will to compete with the excellent teams we'll need to overcome." Coach Miller also pointed out that the ONLY losses came to the first and second place C.I.F. teams; Valhalla and Mount Carmel. Said Jim Miller, "This year's team must obviously had what it took for a great season." Coach Miller expressed his hopes for a season as successful as this one in the future years.

JV Polo Dominates

"It's cazh (casual)!" commented JV player Kenny Battle in regards to this year's polo team. This easy-going attitude contributed to the team's success and their 3-way tie for league champions. They shared this title with Fallbrook and our cross-town rival Mt. Carmel. "This was outstanding considering that they played in one of the toughest leagues," remarked Coach Dave McCoy.

All of the players worked really hard to improve. But their spirit and unity really were the keys to winning. "It's fun, even though there's hard work during practices," said Jarrod Peace, one of the captains. And he added, "Team work is our strong point!"

Sophomore Mike Napierala and Junior Kenny Battle brought both their skill and fun-loving attitudes to the team. As well as adding life to practices, they helped bring the Titans to victory by being the main scoring threats. Other stand outs included all-around players: Sophomore Ray Underburg and Juniors Mike Schroll and Jarrod Peace. Also, goalie Eric Wetzell contributed his skill by keeping their opponents to a minimum number of goals.

Coach McCoy noted with the conclusion of the season, "By this year's success it's obvious that Poway has a real future in waterpolo." Hopefully these talented players will go on to Varsity in the years to come and bring their skill and spirit with them.

Experience Pays Off

Showing spirit and an upbeat attitude, the freshman polo team proved successful. Although they didn't have a winning record, they achieved success by "learning skills which would benefit the Varsity team in years to come," stated Coach Moore. Their love for the game added to their motivation to improve. "Everybody's into the game, so we all come to practices," commented goalie Jeff Carmichael.

Most of the guys felt the experience they gained playing as a freshman would help them later at the JV and Varsity levels. However, field player Chris Daniels noted that "Coach Moore's fairness in giving everyone equal playing time wasn't the best thing." Since, the team had 18 players, no "one" person got very much time. But, the number of players illustrated the enthusiasm for waterpolo generated by the freshman class.

Freshman Prove Worthy

Communication and team unity have proven to be two keys in the success of the freshman boys soccer team this year.

A very important part of the squad was in its composition. Many of the players have previously been in the same soccer club and therefore know how to work together. As Paul Coumans stated, "We really trust each of our teammates because we play club soccer with them too." Although past playing experiences have been added benefits, communication really brought the team together as one unit. It also created an understanding of each other's motives. "We talk to each other in games," commented Danny Rajsky. "And learn how to communicate with each other in practices," he added.

Their talents were evident during games and in particular when they whomped Mt. Carmel, 5-0. With such skills present, it's no wonder Poway's freshman team finished the season with such a rewarding outcome.

Guys Work Towards Goal

Sparked with determination, the boys varsity soccer team met a great deal of success this year. Their excellent record from previous years led to high expectations for this year's season, and the guys all worked hard to achieve these goals. However, despite the incredible effort these players continually put out, some close games ended in a loss. But, these losses were few and far between and not a result of poor performances by Poway but simply the fact that other teams in the league are also very competitive. One of these disappointments for the Titans was losing to our cross-town rivals, Mt. Carmel, for the first time in ten years. "We gave it our best!", confirmed Soren Skive ruefully in reference to that game.

"It has been a big help making friends."
— Soren Skive

Coach Champion helped greatly in the emphasis of the great importance of team unity while simultaneously demanding the hard work necessary to compete effectively at the Varsity level. Craig Bradley explained, "I think Champ's sense of humor really livens us up, and he gives us a reason to win."

All members of the varsity team were dedicated athletes, but still kept the practice atmosphere light, which in turn insured a positive attitude. One such player, forward Kelly McCann, constantly kept the team spirit up with his joking personality so that all the guys had fun while getting the hard work done.

The leadership of halfbacks Brian Berry and Doug Warden (who also served as this season's team captains) and Champ's coaching skill combined with everyone's participation and hard work led to a successful record for this year's boys varsity soccer team. But, even if it had not been as rewarding, the friendships they built made everything worth the effort. As Soren Skive from Denmark emphasized, "Since I am an exchange student, it has been a big help making friends!" This worked both ways because Soren Skive contributed a great deal of effort and dedication as well as talent on the team.

J.V. Talent Ranks High

Competing at full Varsity strength, the J.V. boys soccer team may have been mistaken for Poway's Varsity team. Though the uniforms were different and the overall size of the players tended to be smaller, the techniques used and the benefits from them ranked high.

While watching various games, the J.V. squad demonstrated excellent playing form, whether it be passing, heading, or shooting for a goal. The team's best feature seemed to be their passing. Time after time the Titan boy's completed passes which involved a series of tricky maneuvers around the opposing players. More often than not, their attempts were successful and therefore our team had many opportunities to score a goal. As Eddie Paz pointed out, "We have a lot of skill, it's just a matter of organization." Through hard work they learned to work as one which was a main factor in their important win over Vista.

Excellent playing techniques combined with team organization led to a rewarding season for the J.V. soccer team this year. Shawn Stewart held a bright outlook for the Titan's soccer squad next year by stating, "This year's team will be a stepping stone for next year's Varsity." With such positive attitudes, the boys will keep Poway's success alive.

J.V. Unifies Successfully

"Good job! Good job!" shouted the J.V. girls soccer team as the referee called time-out. Although a team's playing ability tends to overshadow other important details, how the team works together makes up a large portion of the overall success too. This view held true to the accomplishments of the J.V. squad this year.

Working as one unit led to great improvements over last year's team. Each person acted as a piece of a whole rather than their own team; and, therefore, many talents are combined to produce a completed unit. Every player added her talents to the squad in order to assure success. In this respect, everyone's effort was used to benefit the entire team.

Not only has unity added strength, but communication between teammates during soccer games has boosted the girls' skills in playing. "Because we communicate, we are able to control most of the game," stated Shelley Carrel.

Without question, Poway's J.V. soccer team has improved greatly due to good communication during games and each member contributing equal efforts so that the team may prosper as one. Collete Vaughn looked favorably upon the future with her closing remark, "We have a really good team this year and should be even better next year."

Varsity sets New Record

"We are like one big family," stated Coach Bradshaw. He also added, "We have a certain amount of sibling rivalry, a certain amount of bickering, a certain amount of Esprit De Corp, and of course there's someone like me, like the father in the house who's the last one to know. But my smile and sense of humor is the glue that brings us together again. Perhaps with all those ingredients, that's why we're number one!"

During games an incredible display of team support were given to the players on the field by fellow teammates at the sidelines. Sayings such as "Snuff 'em! Snuff 'em!" could be heard as a Titan ran by with the ball. During half-time advice was given to each of the girls by fellow teammates and all discussed ways in which they might improve their strategy for the second half. "We know everyone so well and aren't afraid to tell each other our faults," commented Linda Bertran.

"We have come together as a team."
— Chris Lodginski

Not only did the girls possess a caring, encouraging attitude, but they also demonstrated excellent playing form despite many injuries. A majority of the time Poway's squad was right there at the center of action taking the ball away from the opposing team. This was especially true when Poway beat Mt. Carmel and for the first time ever, Torrey Pines: The Titans managed to win the league pennant, another first in the school's history. They also advanced to CIF, but were defeated in the final round of play by a close score of 2 to 1. A bright future seemed evident by Kirsten Pinnel's comment, "We are a young team, but still a strong team and we're going to get better each year and be a bigger threat to our rivals."

During half-time, the Varsity squad listens intently to Coach Bradshaw's strategy.

Titan Grapplers were tossed through an emotional roller coaster ride that thankfully ended their season with a smooth and successful ride. Once again, another of the Masters titles had been captured by the Titans. Unfortunately, Titan wrestlers were forced to forfeit their 3A C.I.F. title due to a technicality concerning a mix-up of weight classes. Said Coach Branstetter, "I may appeal the decision, but everybody knows who the better team is."

These happenings failed to daunt our Titans; however, as they wrestled their way to the Masters Championship, they qualified 10 wrestlers for the state competition in the process as well. Poway's ten qualifying wrestlers were led by their champion, Senior John Sargent. Coach Branstetter noted proudly that in reference to Sargent and his wrestling, "He did great, he really dominated his opponent." Junior Marty Lewis placed second at 115 alongside Doug Aghassi, Terry Watts, Marc Frederick, Ray Navarette, Trace Smith, and Harold Jones. Shane Rosselle rounded out this sweep of victory by battling to capture third.

"Qualifying 10 wrestlers was more than a dream," closed the coach, "It made the entire year worthwhile for us!"

J.V. Lay Down Titan Law

Domination has always played a major role in J.V. wrestling for the Titans, and the 85-86 season seems to have been no exception once again. When it comes to aggressive and lightning-fast moves on the part of our young Grapplers, our "padded floors" were the place to be. Coach Torretto expressed a great deal of pride when speaking of his men, calling them, "the best skilled group of wrestlers he's seen in a long time." Ross O'Briant commented also that, "We were in a lot better shape mentally as well as physically than most of our opponents this year. We were pretty psyched up for a really impressive season. A winning attitude helps a lot." Coach Torretto also expressed his thanks to this year's "Grapplettes" by saying that they played a large part in the upbeat morale of the team. Doug Eagle grinned, "The girls did a lot to boost the team." Still, the credit goes to the wrestlers themselves who were solely responsible for the way they were labeled, winners!

John Sargent carelessly lifts his opponent and throws him to the mat.

Jeff Aghassi gains ruthless control and presses his advantage.

Frosh Titans Learn Holds

First-season Titan Grapplers had an extremely rewarding and educational year, according to Coach Torretto. "Victories are important to learning," admitted Torretto, "but what I want out of tournament games is to have each kid wrestle to his best ability." Although this was the team's first season of this sport, a great deal of bone-jarring work was put in after school. "Wrestling is obviously a very physical sport," explained the coach, "and to maintain skill these kids need to remain in top condition at all times." Coach Torretto expressed a lot of pride in this group of wrestlers and closed his praise with, "I'm expecting to be hearing good things about these young men in a few years, ultimately if they stick with it, we should have a very strong Varsity."

Jason Appel takes hold of the ball and runs to score.

Heading for Perfection

"There are no selfish players, so we're all friends," replied Kevin Berry with a grin. Starting out with many inexperienced players from different schools and backgrounds, the newly formed team improved in skill as well as uniting themselves with team work. "There's a lot of competition between players on the team. But we all really get along," said Jason Appel with confidence and pride. The struggle to become a better player by competing and the motivation to reach the high standards that the varsity team has received, definitely made Poway's team a stronger one. Behind these strengths is Coach Embrey. "He's a good coach and teaches a lot of fundamentals," expressed Jason Appel. "I didn't think we had a chance because we are so small. But by spending a lot of time, having self-confidence, working hard as a team, and motivation from our coach made us a good team!" commented Keith Ball.

Excellence Gets Victory

"Our experience will take over!" exclaimed Jud Buechler with a sure sign of determination and excitement in his eyes. The basketball team consisted of many hardworking and motivated players, once again impressed the fans on the bleachers as well as the opposing team. Highlighted games, such as the one against our rival, Mt. Carmel fascinated the crowd. At the beginning of the game the points seemed to add on to each side alternately, with each team making a basket. But soon the advantages of "playing basketball together for a long time and we never had any major conflicts," expressed by Brett Reynolds, proved to be one of the major points to withstand the tough competition during games.

"We play as one, and come together as a team."

— Jud Buechler

At the end of the 4th quarter against Mt. Carmel, the score nearly doubled, concluding the intense match with a leading victory. The 3 senior captains, Jud Buechler, Andy Byrne, and Dominick Johnson contributed points along with a ray of motivation to the entire team, by giving others a helping hand when the struggle got tough. Encouragement and understanding of each other eliminated jealousy and conflicts, which helped bond the athletes closer together than most of the other teams. Players that enjoy the sport like Pete Zaayer, "I like the fast pace of the game. There's no dull spots," and Brett Reynolds, "I like the contact," expressed the fun side of the game.

Not only are the players close, but Coach Saner also was a major ingredient to the team's success. With the strong support from the coach, the boys' basketball team was able to achieve a high level of recognition by winning C.I.F. three years in a row. This honor was glorified by the fact that it set a San Diego record. Not only did these outstanding players win C.I.F. but the 1st round in the state playoffs against Muir. This victory set another San Diego record for the 3A boys' team. They were the first boys' 3A San Diego team to advance in the State playoffs.

Striving for the Best

"There's no clowns! Everyone really works hard during practices and games . . . which is unusual," expressed Glen Tripp about one of the many special qualities the basketball team has. Even though many times the junior varsity performs beautifully, because we have such an outstanding varsity team, the junior varsity sometimes tend to play under their shadow. But really, the junior varsity team has contributed a lot to our school name. With constant wins and many skilled and talented players (which could be on varsity in other school teams), the team has been one of the major competitors to other teams. "Coach Fisher's a great coach. He teaches a lot and he's like a friend, too. I know if I ever have a problem, I can tell him," said Terry Armstrong proudly about the heart of the strength of the team. "The opportunity to work together with a hard fight, strengthens the teamwork. I feel that the players are close off as well as on the courts. It's fun to work hard, which everyone does!" smiled Glen Tripp explaining the other key factor that motivates the team. With great athletes and strong teamwork, the team was incomparable to other high school teams.

Unity Helped Them Win

"We are very competitive and show real potential for the years to come," boasted Coach Jim Salzman. With seven freshmen on the team, girls basketball met with success and set a winning pace that will enable them to recapture their winning tradition in the future. Although rather inexperienced, the young team also showed natural talent. Some of the girls with exceptional ability included Lynell Stokes who averaged 16 points per game and point guard Regina DaSilva. "In general speed is our best quality; we are very fast and strong on rebounding," commented Coach Salzman.

Over all the season, no individual players truly stood out. Everyone did their part and each game was a team effort. And whether this was their first attempt or they had played on a team before, Coach Salzman worked to bring all of the girls up to the same high skill level by the end of the season. As Terry Miley remembered, "If he sent in a second string they do just as well, everyone contributes." And that is the true key to success in any team sport, everyone participating and working towards a mutual goal.

Team Spirit Brings Wins

Springing onto the court before each game with unmatched spirit, the Varsity girls basketball team showed their will to win. At every home game, the girls would turn on the gym stereo and blast their favorite tunes. This combined with their unity and team spirit proved influential factors in their success.

The girls good qualities might not have surfaced though without the guidance of Coach Boulware. As cited by forward Deanne Anastas, "We've all improved and work well together, this wouldn't have happened without Coach Boulware because he's always a part of the team — not just a Coach."

"Unity and team spirit are big factors!"
— Deanne Anastas

Junior Deanne also was a big contributor in Poway's wins. The team benefited greatly from her rebounding skill and general experience in the game (she has played Varsity 3 years).

Although some of the competition, such as arch rivals Mt. Carmel, proved too tough for Poway this year, the girls never gave up or stopped working hard. As wing guard Yvonne Hose noted, "It's hard work, but we all have fun!"

Though not ending with a glorious CIF title, the girls still had a good season and as Deanne concluded, "We'll have a really good season the next few years since we have such a young team." This is true considering that Deanne will be a returning captain next year and that the team will only be losing three girls to graduation (unfortunately one of those is co-captain Donna Sheehan). Also this year's Junior Varsity team has developed some promising athletes for the future whose skill will no doubt end up benefitting the Varsity team. Well, if this kind of optimism and perseverance continues there is no question about the future success of Poway High girls basketball.

J.V. Gains Confidence

A new wave of J.V. Gymnasts tumbled their way through the season this year. Working hard and willingly accepting advice from two talented coaches, the Titan's advanced and demonstrated future potential.

For most of the girls, this was their first competition and it took a while to adjust. However, after doing so, the potential of each gymnast shone through with their increasing confidence and abilities in the four events. "Gymnastics workouts are hard and help you for meets," stated Michelle Bellefeuille, "because the coaches put pressure on you to perform well." With Mrs. Ondler's and Hull's expert coaching, the J.V. squad improved even more so, and were able to feel good about their performances in the meets. Tina Neeley commented, "Gynmastics is probably the hardest sport because you have to do everything one particular way, and in front of judges, but it is all worth it when you score really well."

This sense of personal achievement created a desire to work harder and improve to their highest potential. "It's fun," replied Colleen Vaughn, "but you have to push yourself. What you achieve, is up to you."

Varsity Succeeds

Leaping upward, Poway's Varsity gymnastics team has made considerable improvements over the past few years. Clearly stating this fact was head coach, Mrs. Ondler. "Since I have been coaching, this is the best talent I have ever had!" Hard work combined with strong talents led to a squad in which the potential to win was always present.

Six days per week, each gymnast practiced for the meets. Most of the team members competed regularly, further demonstrating their depth of talent. In order to be ready for the separate events, much time was put into improve and keep up the skills needed. As Michelle Harding stated, "We all work together, helping each on skill and dance. Without this team support, we wouldn't be as good as or even better than our competition."

Due to Poway's high ranked talent, they tended to come out on top. The overall concentration and desire to win also played a large part in the Titan's success, as well as the coaching provided by Mrs. Ondler and Hull. These two special people added much to the team with their excellent knowledge of gymnastics.

With the high-ranking talents of Poway's Gymnasts, and their will to continually strive for perfection, they had the potential for victory. With the benefit of coaching provided by knowledgeable people, Poway succeeded. "The workout is hard," replied Chris Gilliam, "but when our team wins, it really makes the effort worthwhile."

Optional Leaps Ahead

Intense competition between optional squads has caused Poway some problems in establishing themselves as a highly ranked team. Although improvement had been slow, gains came about due to dedication to practices and a desire to overcome obstacles. "In the three years I have competed optional," stated Chrissy Capitanio, "our team has really improved. We have shown that we were ready to take on our opponents."

In spite of the team being comprised of only four gymnasts, they managed to accomplish many things. Each girl worked very hard in order to perfect their routines which they, themselves, made up. This allowed for creativity, but also meant there was a large gap between the best and worst competitors; some being of slightly better than Varsity stature and others near the national level. This according to Kirsten Keithly, proved helpful. "I like competing optional because it's a real challenge," she commented. "You have to throw hard skills on each event and you get to try your routines out on people who are better than you are."

Nevertheless, the Titans have managed to score reasonably well and improved with each meet. Though demands were high, Poway's optional team made a successful comeback.

J.V. Tests New Field

With the added benefit of new and excellent facilities at Poway Lake to use, the Titan Junior Varsity was able to confidently strut out of spring training onto the field, and enter the season that was incoming, swinging with high spirits.

"I count ourselves fortunate," said Coach Salzman," to have such a fine selection of players to make our team from. Choosing the cuts from the teams was extremely difficult. We've got several returning players which helps to balance out some of the less experienced players." Seasoned or not, this year's team was willing to play and quickly proved that they could handle any curves that other teams dared to throw their way and still come back fired up and ready for more. "Softball is an exciting sport for us," said player Maria Moreno. "We wouldn't work so hard if the game was not important to us." She later added "A lot of teams (Junior Varsity) don't really care if they improve or not. We care so we improve, and you can see we do better than just any team." The coach indicated that the team had much to be proud of, saying, "Our current 4 and 5 record simply does not do justice to how well our team has been playing throughout the season. Every player has contributed, and our team should provide a nucleus for next year's varsity. We have indeed done well."

Teamwork Isn't Hype

With great expectations for another successful season, our softball team gamely rose to the occasion and greeted their first game with a hard, solid, resounding 'thwack' of ball connecting with bat.

Returning Varsity level Coach Traci Barker-Ball was especially enthusiastic regarding the 1986 team since so many of her players were returning well seasoned and ready from the previous year. "We've spent plenty of time in improving our overall game and also our response time," said the Coach, "and most of our later practices have been devoted to increasing our speed until our plays are mostly reflex action."

Watching the team effortlessly snagging pop-flies and retrieving grounders before smoothly relaying them to the proper players, it was easy this season to overlook the hours spent in synchronizing their movements and actions as a team. As Christy Montgomery pointed out, "A lot to softball is based on whether or not you have any natural talent, but we've all learned so much just by playing as a team and working out together!" Lori Thompson added to that by saying, "All of the talk about teamwork isn't just a lot of hype. When one of us is injured or can't play, it takes some readjusting until the rest of us can perform to our usual standard again." Coach Barker-Ball commented happily on the fine way in which the team worked together by noting, "I think we have a very special group of buddies here who just happen to be good at softball!" According to the coach, the performance standards for this season were on an extremely high level this year, and the general opinion was that the year was a success.

"Unity" Sparks Girls

"United We Stand!" That was the best way to describe the 1986 girls track team and their successes. They stuck together and urged each other on through the most competitive times. As coach Dan Schaitel felt, "Poway produces many fine athletes and we proved we could be competitive with any school in the Palomar League."

Hard work paid off for the hurdlers, who were in good form and the sprinters accelerated to great heights, improving their overall time. Kyle Clark felt, "We had a lot of potential and we knew we could accomplish a lot." Contributing to the success of the track team were hurdlers Sheila Kube and Molly Roth. Under the guidance of coach Jones, the intensity of the sprinters spelled out determination. Top sprinters included Jill Brawner and Becky Villalobos.

Through the girls unity, they had a very prosperous season. Rooting each other on with the coaches encouragement made everyone less pressured. Long distance running, the high jump, and the rest of the various track events, contributed to the promised success of a very competitive season.

Demands Aid Motivation

If a pair of tennis shoes could talk, the boys varsity track team's would be cheering, due to the enthusiastic attitude the team held. Last year, with star athletes Daryl Shepard, Jeff Kenney, Bill Dunker, and Sean Dean, Coach Schaitel earned a winning performance from his team. "Running track is a building process," Schaitel reported. "To improve, you've got to run everyday and keep challenging yourself. If you stop for a couple of days, you've got to start again. That's why I demand total dedication from my athletes." Last year it was evident Schaitel's demands were met. In a practice meet against Mira Mesa, the runners exposed their talent with exceptional performances. Their ability to help each other and work together as a team gave the Titans an extra motivating factor. Their excitement towards the sport insured their success. "Coach Jones has really done a great job in making track fun," said senior Sean Dean. "All of our coaches relate super well to the students. When practices are fun and you love the coach, it inspires the team. Even intervals aren't all that bad." Jeff Kenney quickly agreed. "My senior year in track was the best, because we all worked hard to reach a common goal. Going to practice wasn't a pain — it was fun, and that makes all the difference." And this year, for the first time, the fans were able to cheer the track team to victory in our new stadium, which proved to be another motivational factor. The runners were proud of the new facility and this also inspired them to do their best, since everything about a person's attitude figures into their success. The 1986 season exposed exceptional talent from our seniors as they performed at an incredible level, demonstrating drive and discipline. "These athletes have a lot to be proud of," said Schaitel at the last meet of the year. With the wrap up of the season, the guys truly deserved a round of applause!

Hard Work Brings Unity

Muscles tensed and sweat poured while the two hour track practice continued. Fatigue set in yet the girls prevailed with their friends cheering them on. The track team this year not only worked hard but also played hard. Melissa McCool, a sophomore, commented, "We're a very social group. We really get to know everyone in our sections." Lisa Lockwood, a freshman, said in defense to the teams' "social" status, "We might be social but it comes second to working hard. We like to encourage each other and make practice more fun." They had practice every day and it cut into their Easter vacation. Nicol Goudy stated, "Like most of the other sports here, during Easter vacation, we were required to come to three practices. At those practices we worked in our individual groups, getting in shape so we would be prepared for our upcoming meet against San Dieguito." Joy Wolski added, "It's good that we have each other to cheer us on. We're like one very big happy family because of all the time we have to see each other and to talk." J.V. Boys Learn Unity

"Come on, you can do it! Pace yourself! You can do it!" These words of encouragement often poured from the mouths of the Junior Varsity boys track team members as they urged a fellow teammate to victory. Last year, the J.V. boys learned the value of team unity. "We all worked so hard to do our best," said team member Clint Lynch. "And we worked together as a team. We pulled together when it mattered most. We really cared about each other." Last year, the team's success came from their close-knit friendships. They helped each other to improve by working together. Coach Schaitel reflected on the J.V. season. "I was very proud of them," he said. "They worked hard and never gave up. They really cared about each other as well as their sport." No doubt that the sport was important to the athletes. Their team record reflected their dedication and rewarded their struggle. When asked why he enjoyed track, Greg Warden answered, "I really don't know why, but I do. Last year especially was important to me. It was fun. I guess I'm crazy — I love to run." Greg's attitude reflected that of the rest of the team. "I'll be out here again next year!" said James Dunker.

Frosh Set Future Pace

With parched throats and sweat-saturated bodies, the freshmen boys track team paved their road for future success. If one word could describe last year's team, "motivated" would have to be it. Coach Schaitel commented on the future potential of the freshmen boys. "These boys are energetic, hard workers," he stated. "They all have a tremendous amount of talent. If I am able to keep their enthusiasm toward track as high as it ran last year, we'll be unstoppable in the future." Last year, the team concentrated on improving their consistency and developing their ability. A highly talented relay team highlighted the team's efforts with their explosive performances. "I can hardly wait for next season," said track runner Sean Eagle. "Unity and team spirit have really helped our attitudes and made us believe in ourselves." The team planned to continue their success with positive attitudes and dedication to their sport.

Fielding To Win

"Hang a star on that one!" Of course, our freshmen baseball team did. So many times the cracking of a bat could be heard at practice, and most of all at the games. With fresh young players, homers and RBI's came naturally for most who had played for several years and proved that they had experience. Coach Lekvold commented, "I was really pleased with the performance and ability the freshmen team displayed throughout the season."

For this season, the players realized that it was necessary to work as a team and compliment one another. Dave Perdue noticed, "Coach Lekvold has taught us a lot about discipline and and the team as a whole has grown in maturity." If the team could be as prepared as they were this year for next year, then our baseball team would have had an even more exciting year. "We had a lot of competition, but when we won our games, the effort paid off," remarked Eddie Cornblum.

Pitching for Success

Excitement reached a peak this season down on the Junior Varsity baseball field. The team's skill and ability led their way through a very successful season. Coach Nelson remained calm and very supportive throughout the season, which contributed to their good games. Coach Nelson said, "I feel the most important attribute to a sports team is a lot of hard training with continual pats on the backs."

The team reflected many positive attitudes among their unified group. Billy Wraith stated, "I feel that we had a great team this year; we all got along and worked well together."

The long and often grueling practices were many times made very enjoyable by the easy-going team. Their workouts were hard and strenuous, but as Andy Cortez said, "Everything was worth it!" The Junior Varsity team once again felt enormous amounts of pride after their terrific season. Brant Bender summed everything up by saying, "To make a good team, you've first got to have people who want to work hard and succeed. We did!" The positive attitudes and the explosive energy to work hard launched these talented players into the world of success. The rewarded team deserved every bit of the glory.

Titans Slide Home

"Hustle those buns! Slide! Slide!" Coach Harmon screamed at the faithful Titan, as he rounded third base with his eyes on home. The Varsity baseball team wrapped up their 1986 season with the pleasure of a job well done. Set back early in the season by bad weather, the Titans made up for lost time, producing players who responded well under pressure and respected the game.

Poway faced stiff competition in the past, but this year's weather proved the most troublesome. Pouring rain and gusty winds delayed the first games for two weeks. When the sun finally emerged, the Titans began the season with a victory over Helix. "We started off on the right foot," commented second baseman Gary Anderson. But, victories rarely eased the tempo of practices. "Palomar League was the hardest it's been in five years," admitted Coach John Harmon.

"We worked hard for success." — Coach Harmon

Tough opponents did not intimidate the new players starting their first season on Varsity. "We didn't get any special treatment," said sophomore John Youngkin. "Everyone plays their best."

Veterans Conrad Vaplon and Dominick Johnson, along with rookie Eric Grimm, laid the foundation for progress by pitching strong games. With the power from the pitchers, the rest of the team played tirelessly, diving for balls and putting the other team in the field and Poway up to bat. Efficient batting brought in winning runs. Powerful hitters like Phil Plantier and Joey Bellezzo frustrated other teams by slamming balls over fences and beyond straining gloves. "With everyone cheering you on," stated team captain Joey Bellezzo, "You give it your all!"

With this in mind, the Titans strove to bring victory to their school; and, on the way, they learned sportsmanship and friendship. Coach Harmon added, "The team is fairly young and with a good past season, we're going to be something to see next year!"

Titan: Try to Stay With Us

Titan tennis courts reverberated ominously throughout the 1986 season to the thundering rhythm found only during fierce competition. Competition was clearly the name of the game as senior Andy Staub remarked before matches, "We're aggressive, we're very accurate, and we play to win!" This attitude was obviously a direct echo to other players sentiments as this season reflected the tireless drive and fatiguing stamina involved in this demanding sport. "Tennis isn't for everyone," smiled senior Dave Welborn, another returning player, "so don't play against us unless you like to run a lot!" Truly a demanding sport, both mentally as well as physically, Titan tradition required more than the dedication found in any mere weekend 'racquet hacker.' Long, wearing practices were put in daily, despite rain, humidity or heat that resulted in what Coach Campbell smugly called, "One of the finest teams in the city." Coach Campbell emphasized the importance of getting in and training with his team, and was often found on the courts during practices for tournaments.

"We're aggressive, we're accurate, and we play to win!" — Andy Staub

Adding a definite boost to the overall power of the team were the doubles duos comprised of players Gordon Shockley, Dave Lecours, Brian Basinger, and Andy Staub. Said Gordon Shockley, "I think that playing as a doubles partner is the ultimate test of teamwork possible. One guy will make the difference between a good doubles team or a mediocre one." Dave Lecours agreed with, "We have to remember that each of us is only part of the whole team!"

In a season summary, Coach Campbell confirmed that 1986 had surely been the season of teamwork.

J.V. Relies On Teamwork

With a history of top-notch coordination and excellence to live up to, Junior Varsity level competitors began their season with their work clearly cut out for them. The goal was to maintain the tradition. Returning player Chris Toomey met this challenge by asserting that, "We've made a name and a reputation for this team, and we'll back it up with all the power we gave it last year!"

Comprised of a majority of sophomore 'racqueteers' this relatively young group of players was nevertheless seasoned and well-versed in the art of overcoming older players. Scott Fisher remarked, while scrutinizing a set against another school, "They just don't have the same drive that we've got. I can't see any problems with our team that way. We give everything we can, and either these other teams aren't trying or (more likely) we're just better." The coach had nothing but praise for his athletes this season, having a lot to say about how well the team was playing. "We've had some fine returning players," said Coach Smith, "and with the combination of previous skill and rough and rugged determination, we've become almost undefeatable." Smiling proudly as he surveyed his exceptional group, he said that coaching any team with players such as these was what, "really makes being a coach so worthwhile!"

Unity Comes With Growth

Under the superb guidance of Coach Champion, the JV golf team showed a marked improvement over last year. This success was made possible by the group efforts of all the players. Major contributions to Titan wins were made by Susan Pankau, Scott Wallenstein, and Heinrik Hansen.

Unfortunately, as with Varsity, the season started out slowly due to poor weather conditions. Rain caused slippery grips and the balls to sink into the wet grass which hindered the players. But, luckily for the golfers warmer spring weather finally arrived.

Once their regular season was well underway, a strange unity could be felt amongst the JV golfers. It is unusual to see such friendships in a sport like golf which is more individual. In the long run this helped the team as Glenn Capitanio explained, "We show each other our mistakes, which helps everyone to learn and improve."

Good Swings Lead to CIF

Poway's golf team provided the opportunity for excellence. Since golf is not a sport that kids are usually exposed to at a young age, these athletes had exceptional motivation to learn the sport and then go out and practice on their own. A couple of the guys did, however, admit that their parents had started them in golf. In particular, last year's All-CIF golfer, Brad Stewart learned at an early age what it took to succeed in golf. As Coach Miller complimented, "This year's team is fortunate to have a healthy blend of talent and dedication."

Due to having people from all the different classes on the team, it was sometimes hard to create a sense of team unity, especially since golf is such an individual sport. But as senior Dave Dietrich noted, "Coach Miller is good at getting our morale up."

With last year's CIF banner hanging over their heads, the Varsity golfers had a high goal to aim for. But, the players were all optimistic as shown by Dave Dietrich's statement at the beginning of the season, "We're gonna win CIF, yeh, we're gonna win!" Brad Stewart expressed a similar opinion, but emphasized, "All we need to do is start playing consistant like we can." Unfortunately, bad weather early in the season didn't help them. But, the team kept their positive outlook and aimed for CIF.

By definition, Coach Miller described golf as, "One of those unique individual sports that takes a 'team concept' to produce a successful program." It appeared that the Titan team indeed developed that 'team concept'!

Titans Reach New Heights

"Big Mac and Fries on Three!" is only one of the unique cheers that is heard across the courts of this newly formed team. For the past few years it existed as a club, but bloomed this year as an exciting sport to play, as well as to watch. Compared to last year, "We get more attention and gym time. But we still have hard practices!" said Billy Egan, the spirited team captain of the Varsity squad.

"Volleyball is a real quick sport. You have to be thinking real quick on the courts," said Junior Varsity Peter Babich. The enthusiasm can also be seen in other players as well. "We work very hard and it's never ever boring," shouted Brad Applegate with excitement in his eyes. Through aggressive play, it was obvious that the boys' volleyball team was full of spirit and was ready to attack and crush any team that they faced during the season.

The key to all this power was enclosed within the head Coach Mike Ball and the assistant coach Larry Higgins. "He's an easy guy to talk to," described Jon Kidwell with confidence in his coach. "He stresses fundementals and he likes us to talk and be noisy on the courts during practice," explained Jon Jaro with a relaxed smile on his face. "He knows the game very well!" commented Jason Apple about the coach's knowledge of the game.

"Volleyball is only rewarding," said Jason Jones, one of the best spikers on the Junior Varsity team. Everyone on the team was close and the teamwork was tightly-knit. Jason Jaro and Travis Higgins set and created perfect spikes down the throats of opponents. The Poway team benefited from their success. Outstanding players such as Jud Buechler, Billy Egan and Aaron Silveyra contributed their leadership and skills so that their teammates could learn and adopt them for themselves for future use.

Boys' Talent Surfaced

Coach Moore, coming in as the new Varsity swim coach, looked ahead optimistically at the beginning of this year's swim season. "We have a great group of kids and I recognize a desire to win in many of them," he commented. His job was to turn this desire into concrete results by bringing out the talent in each swimmer. Unfortunately for the swimmers, Lance Witmondt said, "Practices are real hard!" But, they had to work hard for the success they achieved.

Dedication and team spirit proved to be big factors in keeping the team going. Some of the most dedicated guys included backstroker John Voris and breaststroker Jeff Austin, who Coach Moore recognized as, "developing their talent to the fullest."

"We've got speed!" — Mike Jacoway

Occasionally when their times weren't so hot, the team need only scream out a cheer to get them back on track, such as a new cheer which ended with the lines, "We got something you ain't got, SPEED!" As sophomore Mike Jacoway explained, "We have a lot of fast swimmers and when we all pull together it helps to bring out our best."

Jacoway, along with Tim Williams, Mike Napierala, and captain Brian Napierala, proved to be major contributers in Poway's winning meets. Together on the 400 free relay, these guys worked towards breaking the 1983 school record of 3:30, which is extremely fast considering that they all had to go around :52. for their 100.

Twice a day practices, lunch-time meetings, and bus rides to meets (which sometimes included Saturdays) meant spending a lot of time together which developed a sense of unity amongst the Varsity boys. In the course of this unity, professional athletes also emerged; and, by supporting one another, the swimmers developed self-motivation. By the end of the season Coach Moore accomplished his goal of bringing out the talent within each swimmer.

Enthusiasm Powers Guys

Benefited by an especially large number of swimmers, the boys JV team accomplished a great deal. Swimming is one of the few sports that does not actually have a cutting policy and, although this meant sometimes swimming unofficial races, everyone still got a chance to strive for personal improvement. Head Coach Dennis Moore felt strongly about this as he stressed, "I like to see a lot of participation, I think it's real important that we don't have a cutting policy." All that was required was attendance at practices; and with that, the ones that worked hard met with success. For the guys that needed that little extra push, assistant coach Eric Vosenkamper was always ready with an encouraging word or demanding shout.

Some of the outstanding swimmers helping to bring the Titans to victory included freestylers Chad Milling and Steve Ostrom and breaststroker Todd Kroepel, who placed first in the 100 breaststroke against Escondido. Such talent combined with hard work, as especially shown by John Blackburn and Brian Huey, helped to spread motivation and success throughout the large JV squad.

J.V. Squirts Out Success

"Go, go, go!" The screams of the teammates cheering and inspiring each other were constantly echoed throughout the pool area. With many freshman swimmers from Meadowbrook, Twin Peaks and other schools, the team first lacked the unity found in many other sports. But, after many hard practices and being all together in the pool, the individuals soon molded into one big family. Though the workouts consisted of many intense drills of 100's and 200's, the enthusiasm and the encouragement from other swimmers helped keep the whole team united. Not only was the team bounded by trust and support, but by the common link to become the best. These competitive swimmers managed to drop the jaws of opposing school coaches and impressed them with their highly advanced skills. The Junior Varsity team, like the Varsity, contained energy that couldn't be found in any other schools. Excited swimmers like Kirsten Yamasaki stated, "I like the meets and I enjoy it a lot! It's the only sport. It's so refreshing." Aggressive players and a constant support from the new coach made Poway's Junior Varsity Girls one to be proud of. Such meets as the conference relays at Mt. Carmel kept the spirit as well as the skills high. With a great season and a great team the Titans once again took the lead.

Varsity Led With Speed

"Ten, nine, eight, seven, six, five, four, three, two . . ." as the count down ended, all the swimmers pointed out their index finger into the blue sky to symbolize that they are number one. This was just one of the spirited cheers that took place around the pool side during meets. With year-round swimmers, like Kristen Rangel, Cari Houtz, Julie Engstrom, Debbie Daniels, Lauri Innis and many others, the team was as stable as a rock and contained the swiftness that is rarely seen in high school levels. "Uppers, downers, pot. We got something you ain't got. Speed, speed, speed . . . Go Poway!"

"We all work together, and we all win together." — Lauri Innis was another cheer that expressed the speed advantages female Titans had over our opposing teams.

Sophomore swimmer, Stephanie O'Malley expressed, "Swimming is a pleasure exercise, and I enjoy the sense of being on the team. Achievement!" The potential hidden in the Varsity swimming team came out of its shell during the tough meet against Vista. Even though Vista is one of the top teams in the league, with the enthusiasm and the skills, Poway beat them after a long, hard struggle. Also, another side of the aggressive team was the warmth of the teammates. "You can feel a sense of individual accomplishments. No matter what, you win. Even if you don't do good, you're part of the team," expressed Lauri Innis, as she pointed out the closeness of the team and the feeling of winning as a whole rather than as an individual.

The hard and involved practices, coached by Dennis Moore, helped the swimmers bring their times down to their goals and reach their fullest potential. "He's between a tough coach and a close friend," described Stephanie O'Malley about her coach. Through the short four months of hard practices, the Titans were able to obtain their fantasies of being the best. The tradition will be passed on to the others and carried on to next year.

DIVING

Art Produced in Mid-Air

Steam rose off of the sleeping pool as the chilled morning air came to rest upon the water. All silence halted as a lithe form cut a perfect incision through the surface, leaving behind only a fading image of suspended ballet. Teamwork and grace became two words to describe the Poway High diving team as they spent this season improving individually and as a group. "We have a lot of quality divers," remarked Bob Gehrke. "They are doing a lot of difficult dives."

With a relatively small group of divers, the team formed a close-knit unit and used all of their spirit to their advantage. Coach Gehrke felt, "The team makes the workouts fun. They cheer each other on when learning new dives or when things are not going well."

This year's diving season brought to the surface new divers and broadened the popularity of a beautiful sport. Diving became more than just a prelude to Poway's swim meets. One improvement sought was the availability of more competition. But, for the future, the Titans see little splash and high scores.

Campus Participation Increases

Club announcements clutter the morning bulletin, and classrooms are full with members at lunch. Many people associate clubs with service. Dave Breeze commented, "I think of people helping people and the unified interest they share." Some people feel that it isn't too hip to be in a club, but this year with the addition of six new ones, the diversity practically met everyone's needs. Along with the desire of joining a club, students had a hard time deciding which club was for them.

A lot of clubs held their meetings at the same time and attendance varied each week. Senior, Chrissy Capitanio replied, "There are so many clubs, but I only have time for a few, and many occasions I've missed meetings due to other things." Also, fund raisers took time, and it was a normal sight to see tables on the quad at lunch with members selling items to raise money. The Outdoor Club earned money and went to Disneyland. Students were exposed to clubs that offered fun activities and helped their character grow. That's a reward by itself.

Cheering on A Tradition

Let's go Poway, Poway let's go! Our school's pride echoed this year by defeating other schools in various games. If it wasn't for our cheerleaders, the motivation for success wouldn't have been there at many of the games. "We give them confidence and purpose by encouraging the athletes," said Chareese Bedke.

Porsche Melendez responded, "It's rewarding to see other students help cheer the team on to victory. A cheerleader promotes school spirit and most of all gets others involved." Cheerleaders put a lot of time and money into this talent, and the end result of a winning season was partially accredited to the support from the cheerleaders. Elizabeth Taylor commented, "It takes a lot of time and commitment to be at all the games and sometimes it's tiring, but that's okay because it's a great feeling when our team wins."

Like the cheerleaders in 1961, ours this year did a great job uplifting school spirit; and much like then, the squads consisted of carefree girls. Adviser, Mrs. Barker-Ball said, "The girls put cheering first and if the school appreciates them, that's what really matters."

Varsity Club

Praising Our Athletes

More than just an athlete, we are talking about Poway's best athletes, students who have earned the right to wear a varsity letter. This was not all it took to become a member of Poway's most elete athletic group. To become a member of the Varsity Club one must be pledged to the stimulation of school spirit and the athletic program. As Coach Champion put it, "These are Poway's best athletes, and they look and act like it or they are not in the club." Besides being an honor club they also had fun. "We had a few good socials, and it was great to help out our school's athletic program," stated Todd Wilson. Perhaps the club's most important undertaking was their continual fund raisers which provided financial aid to those who needed help covering the mandatory bus fee for players who just could not afford it. These funds were also used to throw a banquet honoring Poway's great athletes who promoted a spirit of good sportsmanship. These athletes deserve recognition.

School Spirit Forms A Club

School spirit has been kindled like never before on this campus and the formation of the Bleacher Creatures was just one more example of this. Formed with the intent of supporting our school's athletic teams, the Bleacher Creatures whipped up massive support during the football season and then set the stage for all of the other sports to come. "The club was already there. All we did was organize it," stated Matt Paschall. Having an organized club made the games even more fun as the Bleacher Creatures stirred up spirit in the stands. It was only understandable that athletic's two biggest supporters, Mrs. Barker-Ball and Coach Champion, would serve as the club's joint advisers. Mrs. Barker-Ball said, "The Club did wonders at the football games. They did more to promote school spirit there than anybody else." Her only wish was that next year the club might do the same thing for the other sports.

Gifted Minds Compete

Covering all the bases, our well rounded academic team swarmed its opponents as Mr. Arnold Kunert's starting line-up flaunted it's knowledge of every subject conceivable. Gifted with the usual strong turnout, the coach's were able to field a well-rounded team. Mrs. Nobriga coached the Junior Varsity while Mrs. Lessard coached the freshmen. Mrs. Nobriga proudly stated, "We have a lot of depth in our JV and freshmen teams and they will form a great varsity team next year." Every potential team member was given a screening test in order to select only the best students. William Wargo stated, "I think that the underclassmen will be able to carry on our winning tradition." Mr. Kunert explained, "I always open with my best team and hopefully get far enough ahead to rotate in my other players who are also great competitors. I really feel bad when everyone doesn't get a chance to compete." The academic team dedicated itself to do the practice and research necessary to be winners and, "Earned the right to be known as one of Poway's most prestigious clubs," according to Will Wargo. Now three years old, the club has truly established a winning tradition and as a result continued to grow.

Learning How The UN Works

"Everyone condemning terrorism . . . say aye." These words echoed in last year's UN simulation which was sponsored by the newly formed UN Club. Created by several interested students following Mr. Middleton's simulation in 1985, this club became a chapter in a national organization. Members competed in several large simulations which involved the entire county. "This gives us a chance to put what we learn about the UN into action with other students who have similar interests," stated Chris MacIlroy. To prepare for these conventions they continuously drilled themselves on UN procedures. "If it wasn't so much fun, it would seem as if we were just staying after class, we learn so much!" explained club President Pete Foster.

Poway Hits The Powder

Catch air! Skiers soared down the snow-covered slopes and tried avoiding large moguls and tall pine trees. A refreshed smile plastered on Lisa Calhoun's face, "It's such an exhilarating feeling when you glide down the white powder and look back over your shoulder to see that enormous mountain hovering over you, a real treat." The Ski Club at Poway ventured off to Vail, Colorado for Easter vacation with excitement and adventure. Due to some bad weather though, other short trips had been cancelled. But the overall common interest the organization shared helped make the fun Vail trip worth remembering forever. Jenny Ernst remarked, "It was terrific when all five busloads of ski-hungry Titans took to the slopes." For all one hundred and seventy-two members, they grew in experience and capability. As Vanessa Owen commented, "Skiing was something that took skill, but once you got it down, you never want to stop."

Theater Guild

Acting On A Dream

Lights! Camera! Action! "Did you hear the latest?" There's a cast party Saturday night!" said actor Michael Heap. The Theater Guild held many parties in celebration of the overall success of their performances, for example, "Crimes of the Heart," which almost sold out every night. Dixon Oliver commented, "The theater was really fun because you could express yourself with no need to worry about ridicule." The Club had an opportunity to attend SCETA conference and saw a lot of different people perform who represented schools throughout Southern California. "It was a choice experience to witness other people's interpretations of a play and its characters," said Dana Crouch.

The Guild did a good job representing our school and they wished that Poway had a new theater to comply with the great attendance of play-goers. "The theater was really crowded and I feel that they deserve a new one," said Stephanie Allen. Jason Graham concluded, "This club was an exciting, sociable and educational experience and our dream of a new theater will someday be a reward to the success of the Guild and the people trying to make it possible."

Taking Poway By Storm

Lacrosse, one of the biggest sports on the East Coast, finally reached the West. Invented by the Indians as an alternative to war, the game was fine tuned and modernized by French settlers in the late sixteen hundreds. Since then, it has been one of the leading sports at every high school on the East Coast. In many cases it is even bigger than football. "Under the watchful eyes of Coach Champion we were able to put together the finest team in the county. We also received a little outside talent when four students transferred here from back East bringing with them their many years of experience," stated John Bray. This year they had to compete with other local schools that belonged to the San Diego Lacrosse Federation, but they hoped to achieve CIF recognition before long. According to David Stuflick, "We are by far the best team in the county and our team is still fairly young." Almost every member of the team thinks that Lacrosse is here to stay.

Telling It How It Is

Under the supervision of their experienced coach Gerald Schimke the Speech and Debate team trampled their opponents as they aggressively spoke their way to victory. The club was not formed just to collect trophies though, this just happens to be one of their more enjoyable hobbies. "The true goal of Poway High School's Speech and Debate Team is to provide students with a chance to compete in debates and public speaking. This includes any student who is interested and wants to put forth a little effort," reminded Mr. Schimke. Meeting after school on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays provided the team with all the time it needed to put together a winning performance. "We help each other out as much as possible and in doing so we made a great team," expounded their President, Betsy Klein. After a year on the Speech and Debate Team a member knew how to speak in public.

Shop Resumes Thursday Lab

Caught in a cross fire; the wood club suffered many major set backs and was lucky enough to emerge intact as the war between the teachers and the school board began to heat up. As a symbolic gesture, the teachers commited themselves to working within the time span their actual contract stated to be their working hours. It is a well known fact that the teachers put in a lot of additional time, which is greatly appreciated. In this case, however, the students suffered in order for the teachers to get the point across to the school board. Only meeting a few times all year, the wood club faced extinction as the doors to the woodshop were promptly shut at 2:16 rather then staying open for club meetings as it has done in past years. Only perseverance by dedicated students, commited to the task of keeping the wood club alive, were able to finally arrange for enough meetings to take place as to get them into the yearbook. After this, they continued their meetings on a tentative basis as the struggle between teachers and the board continued. Meanwhile due to popular support by woodshop students, Mr. Hawkins lifted his protest to the district and allowed late-night Thursday club sessions to resume, claiming the wood shop must not resort to silence or else face extinction.

We Support Our Men

As Poway High School's wrestling team continued to prosper so did the Grappelettes. Doubling in size served as the perfect springboard for another great year. Under Mr. and Mrs. Branstetter's guidance the club helped support the wrestling team to yet another successful season. Serving as the team's private pep club, they helped cheer on the guys. Scoring at all of the matches, they helped out more than any one could imagine. "The girls really have become an important part of our wrestling program," stated Coach Branstetter. Pres. Jodi Wilson explained, "We really put a lot of work into our club. It takes a lot to assist Coach Branstetter with the meets and still support our wrestlers." Generating a strong team spirit, and being as reliable as they were made them a club every sport should be blessed with.

Bowlers Find Their Mark

Bowling was one of several clubs that was developed to encourage the growth of non-CIF sports. Like most of the others, they would like to have official CIF recognition. Competing in a large circuit of schools, the bowling club seemed to do quite well. Boastingly, Richard Kiel stated, "We have one of the largest teams in the circuit, with two varsity teams and a single JV team, when most schools are lucky if they can keep a single team together. Poway has every reason to be proud." "We even have a few girls in the club this year. That means a lot to the guys," kids Mrs. Childers, the club's adviser. They had a great time practicing and competing on Saturdays. Many of the more serious members were working hard at increasing membership, and it seemed to be working. If you enjoy bowling, this was the club to join.

CSF

Good Grades Pay Off

Only a few students are eligible to join the California Scholarship Federation, better known as CSF. This club was developed to establish recognition for Poway High School students who excelled in academics. Meeting only a few times a year, they were able to accomplish their goal of raising funds for scholarships. Three scholarships were given. A 3.5 was necessary to compete for these scholarships, plus a grade of nothing lower than a "C". Members needed this GPA to join the club, so there was stiff competition between them. Mr. Jack Flanagan proudly stated, "I enjoy working with these students because they represent the best students on campus and they act their part." Even for those who do not get the scholarships, their membership would help them enter college. "I don't think I am going to win the scholarship, but just being in the club will help me get other scholarships and get into college," stated Chris Beach. CSF proved to be a terrific organization for those who found school rewarding through their grades.

Strive For Excellence

Any one who can keep a 3.7 or better GPA and still participate in extracurricular activities deserves to hold membership in the National Honor Society. Just as the name implies, these people have earned the right to be honored. Consisting of juniors and seniors, NHS gives its members considerable help in getting into academic Universities with scholarships. This group of students was held in great esteem. Mrs. Templer, N.H.S.'s adviser stated, "These students are the best Poway High School has. They deserve to be rewarded. The most unique thing about the club was that it never met. It was an honorary club roster and only really met once a year to take their yearbook picture. "It looks great on your transcript and that's what counts," stated David Mattoon, "it's the best club to join." It is also a challenge to many students to achieve membership in this elite club.

Getting a Head Start

"At times we wondered if FBLA would even make it." These morbid words summed up Matt Brennan's opinion on FBLA's sorry beginnings. With the absence of Mr. Amstutz, FBLA's long-time adviser, the business department was slow finding a replacement. Several old members kept up the pressure and finally FBLA found two new advisers, Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Wilson. With forty members on the role after its second meeting, the club was well on its way to success. Mike Hurlburt, the club reporter commented, "I never knew so many people were interested in business." He had every reason to be surprised by the turnout; the club had never seen such success in the past. Loran Dill, the newly elected President, showed his dedication when he stated, "I want to see FBLA so firmly established, that its membership will soar into the hundreds!" Featuring guest speakers from a wide range of business fields, members were given a background on a variety of areas. Several conventions were attended. Everyone really looked forward to his future business careers and desired the development of their own companies. And due to the overall interest of its members, FBLA achieved its goal to educate the future business leaders of America.

Thinking of Others

A gavel knocks on wood, hushing the Keywanettes, PHS' all-girl service club. They had fun activities, such as breakfast parties with the local Kiwanis Club, and attending social events at a convalescent home. Yuri Iwata commented, "Helping others helps you grow and learn to appreciate the things you have." They assisted with Freshmen orientation over the summer by giving tours and hyping up incoming freshmen.

The club had about fifty-five members and an enthusiastic group as well. "I like meeting new people and sharing my time with others," said Molly Roth. A new idea, they began holding dinner meetings, which were held at a member's home. A speaker and potluck dinner appealed to all the participants. Donna Thrun mentioned, "We grew as a club this year, serving willingly, for example, selling basketball tickets at the door which helped raise money for our school, our home." The Keywanettes donated their time and effort to every job they accomplished. One member commented, "I loved helping the elderly and seeing their grateful eyes and happy smiles." This example, one of many proved that by helping, one will grow.

Unlocking Priorities

"Our main goal is to be a helpful service to the community!" stated Danielle Davidian. Heavy attendance supported this popular club during its weekly meetings. They discussed upcoming events, budgets and new ideas, aimed to help their community. "Being a Kiwanis sponsored club, we always knew someone was there to support our activities," said President Matt Bailey. The club's largest and most well-known activity was the Toys for Tots drive to aid needy children around San Diego. The toy drive proved itself with a highly successful turn out, and allowed the members to unify themselves into a great big family. Many classes participated in the drive. One member said, "My first-period class wanted to win a pizza, but also to help those in need." Of course, the class with the largest amount of donations received a pizza party. Key Clubbers often took time out for fun-filled activities, which meant fund raising car washes, ice sliding and beach parties. Nevertheless, they worked hard and unified themselves to be as helpful as they could in any situation. Kristen Rangel summed up with, "The club is unique because we love interacting with others, and knowing we accomplished our goals; The rewards are satisfying enough. Also, PHS students know where to go if they want the cleanest car in Poway!"

A Desire to Serve

Called to serve, Civitan fulfilled their goals this year by helping the community and school. Mrs. Fulwiler, club adviser, helped organize Toys for Tots in conjunction with the Key Club. They greatly benefited emotionally with the Christmas spirit and the gift of giving. Lisa Mancini, president, responded, "It was important to unselfishly give to those in need, and I could see how the lonely people in our community appreciated our friendship."

Their second year at PHS, Civitan has doubled in size. Some members helped at The Plaza in Rancho Bernardo for the Christmas holiday. They also had fund raisers, one being a Halloween Gram which was very successful. Due to its popularity, the club ran out of helium for the balloons!

One member commented, "Civitan is an outlet for those who want to help the community, but don't know how to go about doing it." They had a parent group that sent out newsletters to the members at PHS. It helped keep Civitan informed on community events which led to active social events. Karen Coffey summarized, "Civitan is a great opportunity to learn more about yourself through service to others." Many people did learn that helping others also helped them, and that is what made Civitan survive this year.

Don't Drink and Drive

SADD: Students Against Drunk Driving, a club that when started raised an eyebrow or two, finally gained acceptance at PHS. The problem of students drinking and driving, and either killing themselves and/or others, became a common theme in Poway.

A group of students, led by Julie Read, decided to work to stop this cruel fact. "The SADD club's main goal was not to preach to students to stop drinking, but to help them realize they shouldn't drink and drive," stated Kathy O'Heron. SADD wanted the students to set up a contract with their parents: that if they drink, they can call home at any time for a ride, with no questions until the next morning. SADD held dances and other activities, enabling students to seek them if needed. Although just freshly started this year due to a drunk driving accident, SADD proved to be a very helpful and important club around the PHS campus. Wendee Tucker said, "I'm glad someone finally realized that there was a problem with drinking and driving, and did something!"

They had well-attended meetings and an average of thirty-five came every month. One activity SADD sponsored was a Friday night dance accompanied by 91X partysounds. The club handed out bumper stickers reading, "Friends don't let friends drive drunk" and helped with the promotion of Safe Rides, a free call for a ride home when you are 'intoxicated'. SADD shed a positive light on PHS students about not drinking and driving.

Breaking Away

Coasting downhill, the Bike Club picked up twenty new members. With all of their new members the Bike Club went out and participated in several charity rides that helped earn money for multiple sclerosis and diabetes research. They also rode for fun. Mr. Weiss stated, "I finally had someone to ride with." And ride they did, covering meters at a time. This group's spirit and energy came through. Riding to Miramar Lake was just one example of the adventures they undertook. Aaron Morello commented, "Our group was energetic and we had a lot of fun when we went on rides, especially to Long Beach. We saw more of our surroundings on a bike than from a car." The active club pedalled many miles to success.

Skin Diving

Diving for an Adventure

Splash! There goes another skin diving expedition off La Jolla Shores. The club instantly dove into bubbling success. Ms. Behrhorst taught many of the members how to skin dive, which furthered the interest of new divers. A true outdoor club, one member explained, "The adventure and surroundings of skin diving intrigues my senses, and the fact it is off campus is great." Ms. Behrhorst said about a recent trip, "It was a lot of fun and a great day for the dive." The club was originally started two years ago and Ms. Behrhorst became adviser this year. Matt Paschall, club president, mentioned, "It was fun and educational. We planned a trip to Catalina." About seventeen members attended the meetings and nine turned out for a dive. They paid dues when necessary, but the small expense was worth the refreshing experience. "You can get as much out of this club as you are willing to put into it. Most of the time I feel like I am going to the beach with a bunch of friends," stated Torin Haskell after another trip.

Math and Computers

Computers are Part of Me

"People think that we are all in calculus and getting straight A's. In reality we are from several different math levels, and our grades vary just as much." This summarized President Steve D'Angelo's opinion on how he felt people wrongly stereotyped club members. According to Steve though, "The club is growing stronger every year and our roster has never been so full." Meeting every Wednesday during lunch they discuss different math and computer techniques. They also enter a variety of contests. These contests are open to the rest of the student body. Club members have special benefits like being able to participate in monthly contests and the possibility of joining Mu Alpha Theta, the National Honorary Math Club. Some major contests include the UCSB College of Creative Studies Math exam and UCSD Honors Math Contest. The club also competes in computer contests, such as the International Computer Problem Solving Contest. Besides competing they are also out to have fun and stimulate more student participation. "Being able to appreciate math and computers in a society which is so influenced by them is an extreme advantage, and this club was established to foster just such feelings!" Mr. Weiss summed up his feelings towards the club when he stated, "Mathematics is the playground of the mind." With an attitude like that, how can members avoid having fun? This club does seem to be one of the most active academic clubs.

Outdoor Club Finds Success

Apparently Poway High School loved the great outdoors. Not knowing what to expect, the Outdoor Club's President, Dave Mattoon, got together with a couple of his friends and started a new club. Mr. Scott Parker volunteered to serve as the club's adviser. With a few announcements and a couple of weeks behind them, the Outdoor Club was well on its way. During their fourth meeting, over sixty students attended. "I was amazed by the turn out," Dave Mattoon said after the meeting ended. Planning all types of social and constructive activities, according to Brian Merrick, "We will soon be the most active club on campus." Coming back from lunch Mr. Parker commented in surprise, "I let the students handle everything. I had no idea that the club would become so popular." Involving everything from backpacking in the mountains to picnics and parties at the beach, the Outdoor Club seems to appeal to everyone.

Learning Can Be Fun

Everyone knows where the animals are. We complain as we run past their pens during P.E. These animals are there for a reason; and, when students aren't learning how to care for them, the Future Farmers of America are. The F.F.A. was one of Poway's oldest clubs. Their members met every month to discuss animals, plants, and landscaping. They participated in projects and analyzed projects already completed. In order to improve their individual skills the F.F.A. offered members the opportunity to compete in several competitions. Many students exhibited their projects in the Del Mar Fair and other local fairs. Janice Lunt stated, "I have been in F.F.A. for four years now because I love animals and this club lets me get closer to them." Dan Stauff's pride came through when he said, "More students are getting involved than ever before. The F.F.A. is looking at a great future."

Student Life

Student Life Lives On!

Student Life's second year almost proved to be its last. Early in the year Mr. Mehrtens, Student Life's adviser, said, "I don't know if Student Life will make it this year." The club lacked leadership and unless a student would take on the responsibility of leading such a unique club, it would have died out. Matt Paschall filled the gap and pulled the club together. Before long, they were meeting regularly on the front lawn. Here they discussed their religious beliefs and everyday Christian living in an attempt to strengthen each other. Students soon began to flock to the meetings. Matt expressed his satisfaction with the club's progress when he said, "I feel that Student Life can now survive the years to come." According to Christina Montgomery, "Even though Poway high is such a secular campus, we still have many similarities and common interests." It is these interests that have and will keep Student Life going.

ART

Art Paints New Horizons

Painting its way into existence, Poway High continued to show its creativity and spirit with the creation of the Art Club. The Art Club gave students a chance to help out the art department by painting the counters and tables. Every art student is encouraged to join. The Art Clubs' efforts have helped to provide a better environment for students to work in. Mrs. Margery Zacarias stated, "I feel that my students will be able to be more creative now that they are working in a room full of creativity." The Art Club also pulled together a group of artists who were willing to work together. Art Club members helped each other out by sharing ideas and offering assistance to those in need. According to Charlie Mitchell, "We are one big happy family." The Art Club can presently boast twenty-five members and they seem to be painting their own horizons. They know no limits.

Home Lies Far Away

They come into America! The foreign exchange students arrived with pure anticipation of learning and enjoying themselves. No better club than AFS could provide foreign exchange students and Poway High students with that need. AFS gave an opportunity for the exchange students to meet new friends from America.

This year AFS sponsored; Gesche Moller, Katrin Vogelsang, Jan Langer and Anja Herzberg from Germany; Soeren Skive from Denmark; Hughes Jacob from Belgium; Paivi Poikala from Finland; Kelly Campbell from Australia; Adriana Rodriguez and Rodrigo Lobo from Brazil; Carolina Angulo from Venezuela; and, Takeshi Kato from Japan. The club planned fun activities such as a trip to Magic Mountain and a Cultural Faire, which the foreign exchange students participated in willingly. A growing atmosphere blossomed and an education about different countries and friendships bonded the visitors with native Americans. Exchange student, Gesche Moller said, "I like everything about America. The school system is much easier and different. Schools are larger than in Germany, and Poway High is much more exciting. Students and teachers are involved with the school. Americans are much friendlier to strangers." Another student commented, "AFS has taught many of us Poway students to learn from others, especially people like the exchange students and the outgoing personalities they have really shows what neat people they are."

Poway's AFS club should be proud of the members and what each individual learned about one another and the friendships they made, which will last a lifetime.

Choir Carries A New Tune

To most people, choir represented illusions of an "easy A," but according to Mike Mosgrove, the choir director, "no bozos or 'easy A' seekers last very long in here."

The Intensity and pure desire to excel could be seen when talking to students or when one saw the class in session.

"Sure, the class is fun," said Amanda Callaway, "but it's a lot of hard work." The ensemble got the opportunity to see their hard work pay off when they competed for the first time this year against other performing vocal groups. According to the students, the hard work was well worth all the effort. As Gina Kamby stated, "The class is easy, but that's only if we all work together and the class is in control." Matt Guerdma added, "Choir taught me to use my voice well. It's an excellent fine arts class that really broadened my outlook on music." Joyce Gibson summed up the success of the choir by stating, "We have a lot of fun while learning a lot of important vocal techniques. Mike Mosgrove is a well-qualified teacher, and he does his best in working with each member of the vocal ensemble." Poway High school's choir can surely sing their way into the hearts of any listener.

"Say, "Cheese!" Got it!" The Photography Club sure does. As a new club, it started this year with well-attended meetings and served an educational purpose too. For the first time, some members learned to take excellent pictures. Jeff Aghassi said, "After learning how to use a camera properly, I like my pictures better." They had guest speakers such as Steve Thorton from the Poway Chieftain and photo contests, which motivated more students to join the club. One member said, "It's a fun club and I hope it grows in years to come." President Hugh Poza commented, "Many people have come out to learn how to improve their photography skills and that makes the club rewarding."

Not only did members have the opportunity to improve their skills, but they actually looked at photography differently. Mr. Bradshaw, club adviser, provided some insight into the art. "Good photographers capture a sunset and turn that burst of color into a poem on film, or with luck and sensitivity, capture a person on film as a writer etches a character analysis." Thanks to the good leadership from Hugh Poza, President; Janet Helser, Vice-President; and Glen Tripp, Secretary the club willingly reached out to the interested members and assisted in developing their talent.

Janet Helser expressed her feelings about the club, "With the large amount of students in this school interested in photography, hopefully the club will prosper in the future." And ending a great school year focusing on excellence and growth in the years to come.

A Bonding School Spirit

Titan time! And one instantly knows there must be a pep-rally or an assembly in the gym. Pep-rallies being one of the many activities were considered successful by the students and the ASB. The ASB planned and decided on the pep-rallies, assemblies, conventions and school improvement programs that binded our students together. "The assemblies and pep-rallies are to unite the school and have some fun!" exclaimed Bonnie Boswell. Many people enjoyed the fun activities that the ASB put on. Senior Kelly Robinson said, "The festive atmosphere made school spirit come alive." For example, the class yell initiated school participation and school spirit. Junior Dave Meyers commented, "They are making assemblies more interesting like the Mt. Carmel one we had in the fall." That particular assembly got many students worked up for a great football game.

Not only students felt the impact of the spirited year, but also the faculty too. ASB adviser, John Deavers, said, "The ASB is working hard and hopes the students like the things we are doing for them and the school." The ASB sought to reach out to the students, getting them involved in school activities. As Kim Jameson, ASB President, "We are reaching out to the students instead of them having to come to us to get involved." But the students still had to do their part. Fortunately, the majority of the student body did their part and took full advantage by participating in some of the activities that the ASB planned.

Band Marches On

The tradition continued as the Poway High School's Emerald Brigade emerged indisputably Southern California's best band. We were the best, not only in marching at half-time shows but also musically in our exceptional jazz band, wind symphony (the advanced group) and the color guard.

Besides bringing music to our ears, the Emerald Brigade also brought people together. As Pam Grimes and Sherry Bennett put it, "The band is like one big happy family. No one is unwanted and all are striving for the same goal, to succeed musically."

This year, the band was lead by two drum majors, Kristina Henriksen, and Jeff George, both of which did an outstanding job of paving the way for what turned out to be a great year.

"Without the help of each individual person, the band could not be as successful and outstanding as it is. It takes time and effort from each person to bring the 260 member Emerald Brigade to its successful standing," stated Conrad Ross.

The Emerald Brigade also received scores of invitations which invited them to perform in several major events both nationally and internationally. Only their lack of funds prevented them from traveling. After proudly marching through 1986 the Emerald Brigade can now rely on its strong underclassmen to carry on the tradition.

Reformed Standards

"Can I have an Iliad?" rings throughout the school on a given day when the newspapers hit the oncoming hands of curious Titans. Maybe the overall success of our newspaper was because of the changes it went through. For example, the format of the paper, one student noticed, "is bigger and better; the paper is larger and contains a lot of facts." The staff also had grown in maturity, for the most part there were a lot of new staff members. Adviser Ms. Heath was excited about this year's paper and as editor-in-chief, Kerry Carter said, "My main goal for the Iliad is perfection — or close to it. This includes eye-appealing layouts and graphics, accuracy and credibility of our newspaper, and especially a wide range of high-interest stories which attract a variety of students, not just a certain group or clique. I am always aware that we are doing this job for the entire school." Cindy Hilbig commented, "The Iliad contains well-written articles pertaining to the students; I especially enjoy the editorials."

The staff tried hard to make this year's Iliad an excellent school paper. Staff member Glen Tripp said, "The staff has a chance to represent different points of view and spread what we believe to be correct information pertaining amongst PHS students." All in all, the Iliad made students aware of what was going on around the campus.

Annual Updated

"Arrrrrgh!!!" A shrill voice echoed out of the sealed doors of H-12, out of frustration and sleeplessness. The Odyssey planted a seed during the summer of 1985, and the staff was willing to sacrifice their time, their lives, and their typewriters so as to insure their planting's survival. And so the twenty-fifth volume of the Odyssey evolved out of late-night pizza binges, indoor soccer matches, long hours developing film at the Photo Darkroom, and the tense moments that followed sometimes sheer agonizing evenings in a hot, steamy, bubbling atmosphere. Blaring stereos, easy conversation, and bonded friendships grew out of the pink walls within H-11. The project, engineered and nurtured along through the summer heat, the winter rain, and the senioritis warming trends of spring, left the staff seeking cases of white out, ribbons of ideas, and support when the deadline nights grew long and hard.

This year's Odyssey took on new traditions, besides adaptations of the old. They entered the computer generation, spun off some really classy and sophisticated work, and produced the largest annual this school, or San Diego County's ever seen! Aided by a program for indexing, the word processor in copy writing, and the addition of the Odyssey's own grain focuser, the annual's efficiency, quality, and organization reached a peak in performance. Without the work and dedication of everybody on the staff, the Odyssey would never have made it to see the light of day, nor the hands of its subscribers.

Computers Expand Education

With a whirl and a bleep, computers have encouraged the expansion of knowledge by updating the curriculum of the PHS faculty. This year many new experimental classes were organized in order to test the improvement in learning by the students with the aid of computers. The science, English, and math departments federated together to participate in a three-subject area in high-tech learning. A new class called HI-TECH-HI allows students the opportunity to work with professionals in industry and solve real problems that arose in their partner's profession.

The computer seemed to be adding a great deal to the improvement in learning of the students while adding enjoyment. Laura Spier, a student in the experimental English class, summed up the enthusiasm reflected with her response, "I love the computer! It makes everything so much easier and fun." Mr. Bradshaw, an English teacher and supervisor of the yearbook added, "In yearbook, we're anxiously awaiting the arrival of our two new computers to take advantage of their space-age efficiency."

A New Generation Benefits from Learning

"I hate the computer!"

Computers used to be unknown mysteries to be feared. During the 85-86 school year, many students discovered that computers could be helpful and at the same time fun.

The English department began using word processors. Mr. Gregory Franzen's fourth period class used the computer room as an experimental English class. With the word processors, the students did not have to retype their composition papers in order to edit them. The idea encouraged the students to revise their papers several times before submitting them for a final grade. If the computers continue to add to the curriculum, we can look forward to seeing much more of them. Vicky DeBerry expressed her delight with the tool when she said, "It's a lot easier an I'm having fun using the computer."

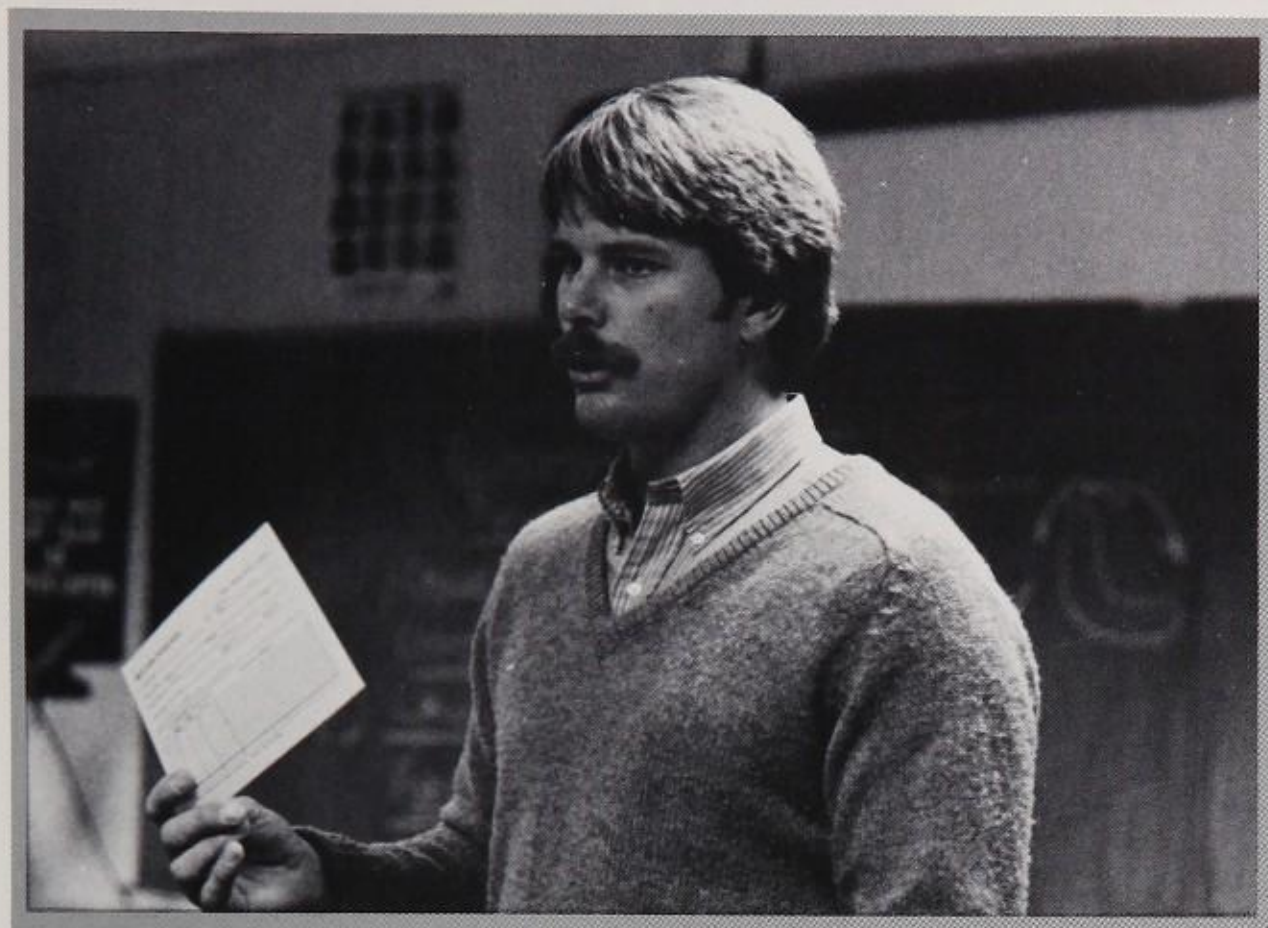
Thriving For A Safe And Healthy Future



"I wouldn't be caught dead driving with this student," comments Mr. Nelson.

"Stop!" The sweaty palms of the driving instructor clutched on to the nearest stable object, the dashboard, a typical scene during behind the wheel drivers training in students' Drivers Education class.

Drivers Education taught students, mostly sophomores, the basic fundamental skills of driving and the rules of the road. Included in this course were also several sections of Health Education. This part of the class gave health tips on well-balanced diets, first aid, CPR, and helpful information on drugs and sex.

One sophomore student, Alisa Paraiso said, "Since I've been in Health, I've been eating healthier meals rather than the junk food I usually ate." This class prepared students to give help safely and beneficially when necessary, while informing them on good nutrition.

Drama Strives For Public Applause

Mrs. Manos shuffles through her papers, stunned by the performance.

"3-2-1 Contact!" The count down of the remaining three years until the new theatre for Drama continued. This year a great many things were done to raise the community's awareness of how widely renown the Drama department was in California, and their need for money to support the upcoming theatre.

A Theatre Booster comprised of Drama parents and alumni formed in August of 1985. a Shakespearian/Renaissance Fair took place on April 31 because of their enthusiasm. The fair involved Poway, Mt. Carmel, artists, craftsmen, mimes, and several other schools. White stallions pranced nervously awaiting their jousters while mimes entertained the crowd. The Drama department reached many goals this year striving for approval of Ms. Manos and the audience.

Library Takes In A New Helper

Mrs. Nobriga looks over the books as Pam Nagel looks on.

"Shhh!" A familiar warning from a librarian in P.H.S. library. The students quieted down, but a few whispers could still be heard.

Researching, studying, or a quiet time to read a favorite book at lunch were only a few uses of the library. Along with its resource, there were librarians willing to help and listen to the needs of the students. One sophomore student, Veronica Fox said, "The librarians are helpful, and in the library I can find dramatic books such as plays and use them as scenes for plays." Another student felt "I can go to the library and just relax."

There was a new computer in the library called an automated circulation center. This computer took care of keeping track of books returned, taken out, and on reserve. Mrs. Nobriga, a librarian, stated, "The computer has made our record keeping more accurate."

1986, Last Group To Remember Her

A big part of the enthusiasm of the Foreign Language department died with Mrs. Pynchon. After battling with a lethal bout of cancer for many years, Mrs. Pynchon left P.H.S. in 1982. Mrs. Pynchon was a very enthusiastic German teacher who tried to make German as real as possible. She encouraged and bade foreign exchange students welcome since she had originally come from Sweden. She made the German Club very active with regular field trips to learn about German culture and music. Her excitement in German seemed to be catchy since some of her students took top honors in the National German Exam. Mr. Stauf stated "She was a very nice and generous lady who really cared for the interests of her students. She tried to involve herself with the students as much as possible.

Mrs. Pynchon shares a thought in German on the board with her class.

A Special Resource to Learn and Train

Mrs. Wilson gives Pam Mahoney the "little" help she needed to wipe away the confusion.

"Gee Mom, can I be in Special Ed too?" The Special Ed students at P.H.S. had a lot of benefits over the rest of the school. The students were placed in one of two different types of classrooms. "Resource" provided the extra push students needed to keep up in at least three regular classes a day. It might be amazing to think but, a lot of the very intelligent, such as Gate students are also classified as Special ed. "Special Day" accommodated the students who needed more help and were not able to attend three regular classes. Most of the students were employed by businesses in the community such as Baskin Robbins and the Wild Animal Park. Ms. Rollins, a Special Ed teacher stated, "Special Ed provided a resource for students who needed support in the demands of regular ed programs while providing them with work experience in many job areas."

Three Star Teachers Sweep Seniors

"Congratulations to the Most Outstanding Teachers of 1985-86; Mr. Greg Franzen, Mr. Norman Weiss and Mr. Greg Peterson." These outstanding teachers were determined by surveys answered by the graduating class of 1986.

Mr. Franzen, an English teacher, was one of the favorites. A senior, Kathy Conniff replied, "Mr. Franzen not only teaches Book Knowledge, but he teaches you about life and how to deal with it. He educates you! He cares and he's a friend."

Another favorite was Mr. Weiss, a math and computer teacher. Denise McSurdy, another senior wrote, "He is really nice and also very interesting. He's an all-over great guy!" The same responses went to Mr. Peterson, a history teacher. Amy Donarico added, "He's got a great sense of humor and for being a new teacher he's very understanding and fair."

The senior teachers, lf to rt: Mr. Petersen, history, Mr. Weiss, math, and Mr. Franzen, English.

Old Equation Solved By A New Tutor

At the sight of their new tutoring pal, the computer, students expressions of bewilderment started to fade. The students and computers were a part of the new program called Hi-Tech-High which involved tutoring students through computers. Mrs. Turpin, a math teacher said, "The students would solve equations and problems that the computer would print out on the screen. If the students were wrong in their answers or needed assistance, the computer's help key would remind or aid them with their problem." A student, Jody Eleay, in the experimental Algebra 1-2 math class said, "I hope everyone gets the chance to learn through computers because of the time we graduate, computers will be in." Mrs. Turpin added, "Time will tell of its success."

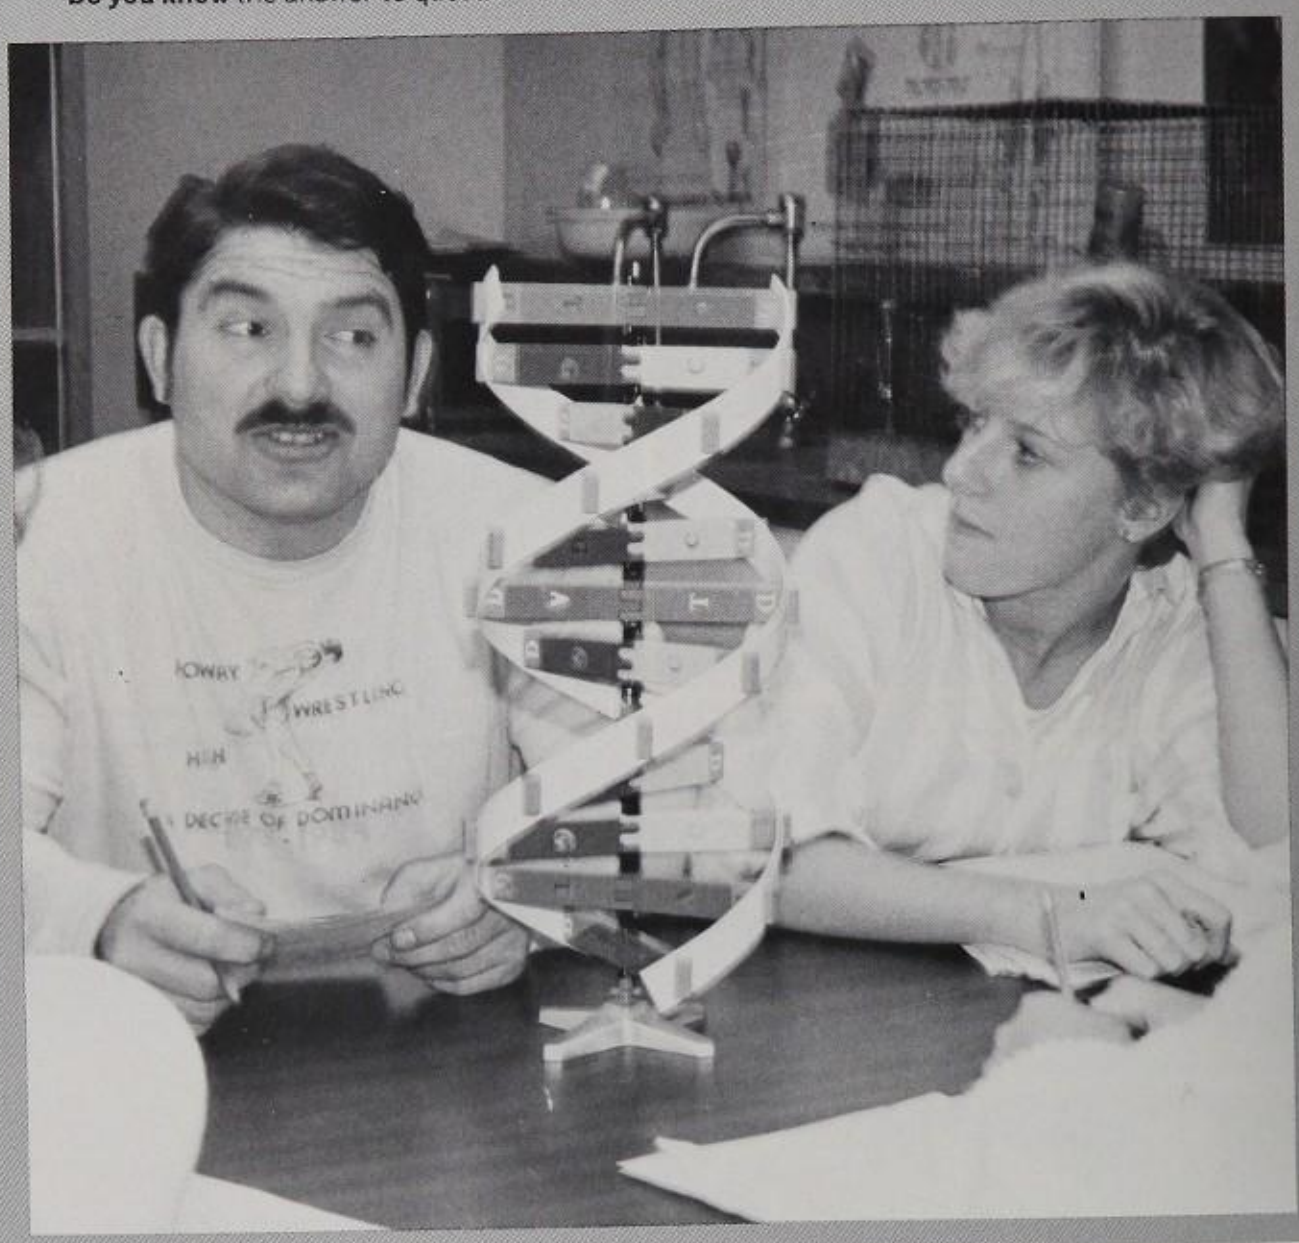
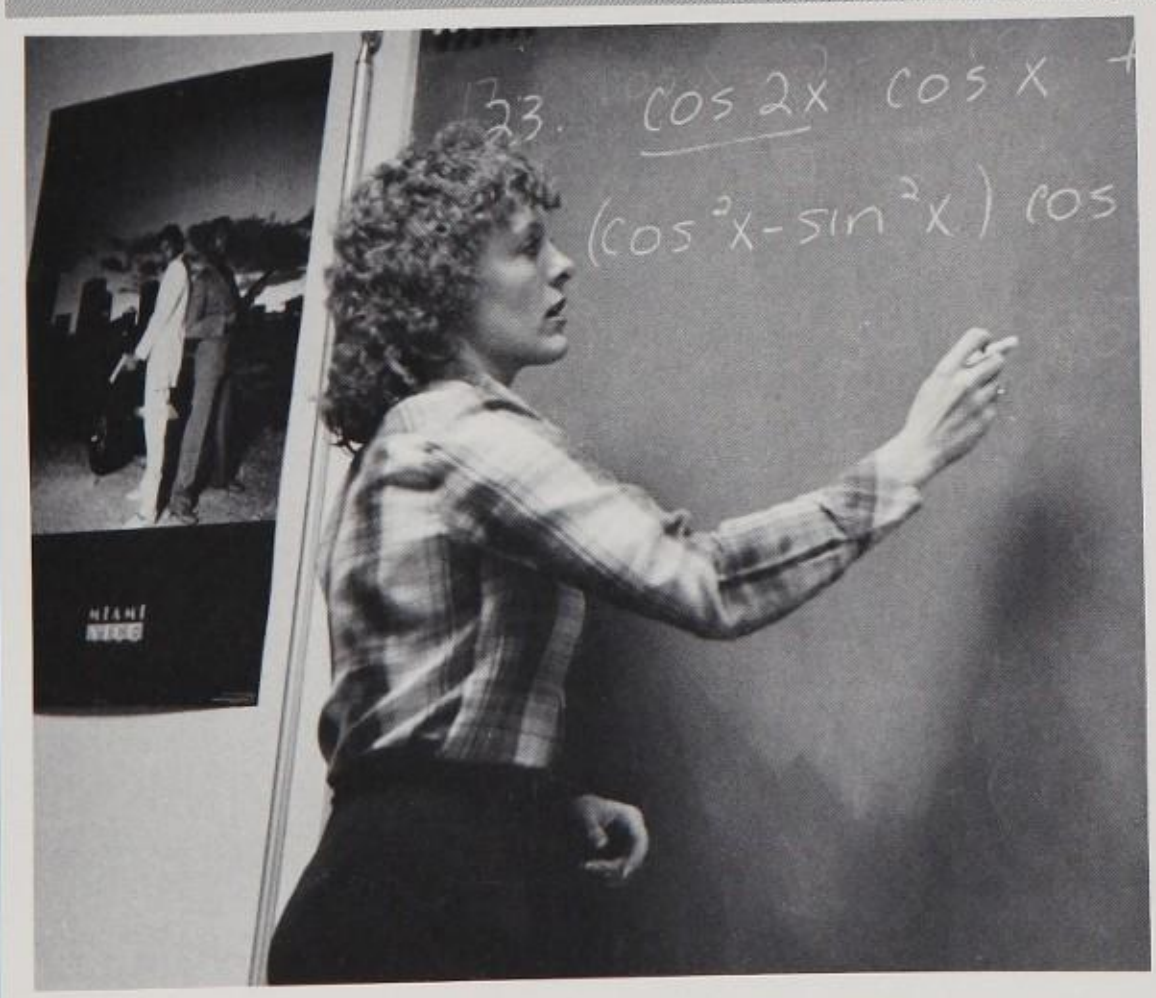
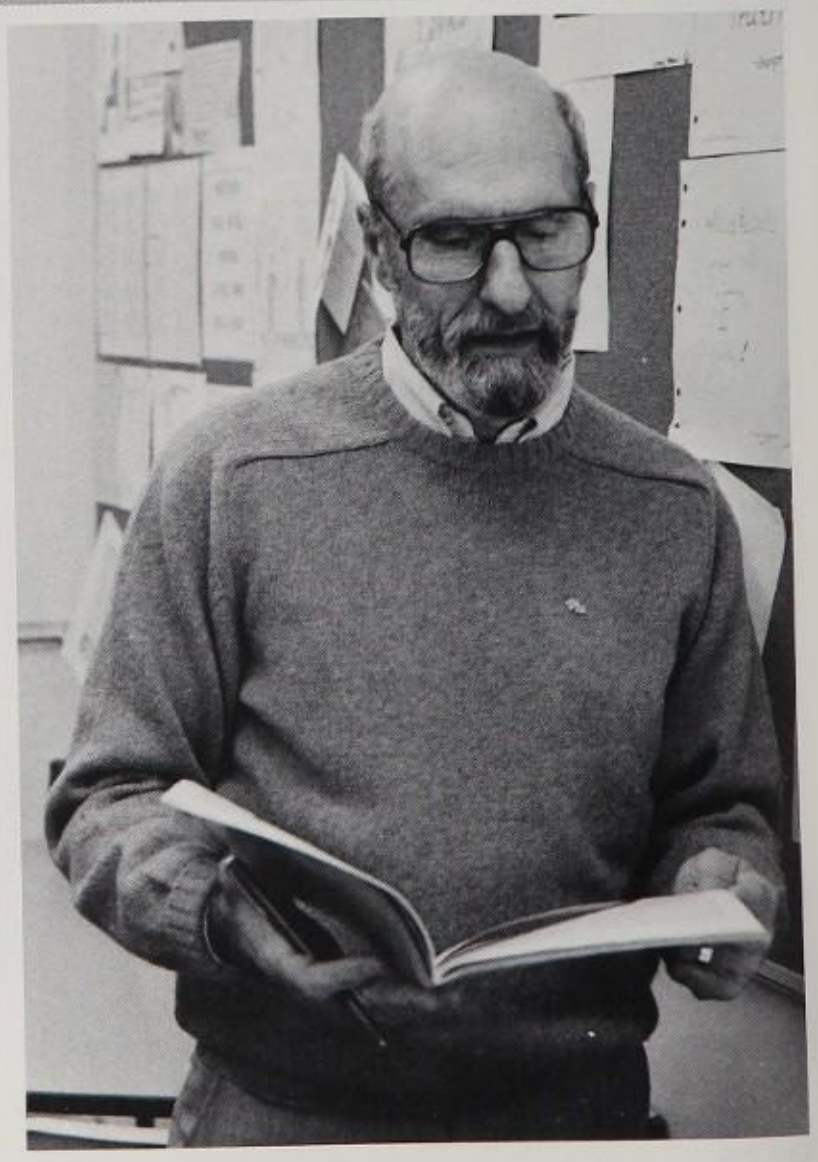
Science Conducts A New Experiment

Smoke seeps from the mouths of open test tubes and chemicals boil as a beaker explodes. This year, in an experimental Chemistry 1-2 class, fewer chemicals were used because of the aid of computers. The computer's main functions were to aid the students in Drill and Practice, labs, and tutorial services. Immediate responses on assignments and evaluations on labs could be given. The computer could also help the student with problems when the teacher wasn't available. This is not to say that teachers are replaceable by the computers because computers can't give lectures or encouragement. Tami Watkins, a junior in Mr. Flanagan's stated, "I find the computer to be helpful yet some of the programs are difficult." A 10% increased enrollment of all science classes since last year and a new requirement brought about a "Life Science" course. Seven teachers were awarded cash grants for outstanding science proposals. Also, the state gave PHS $50,000 to be used on new equipment. The Science Department continued to improve its curriculum with new technology and outstanding work.

"Do you know the answer to question #1?" Mr. Torretto asks Kathy Grassburger sarcastically.







Ms. Asch illustrates the enigmatic concepts of Math Analysis.

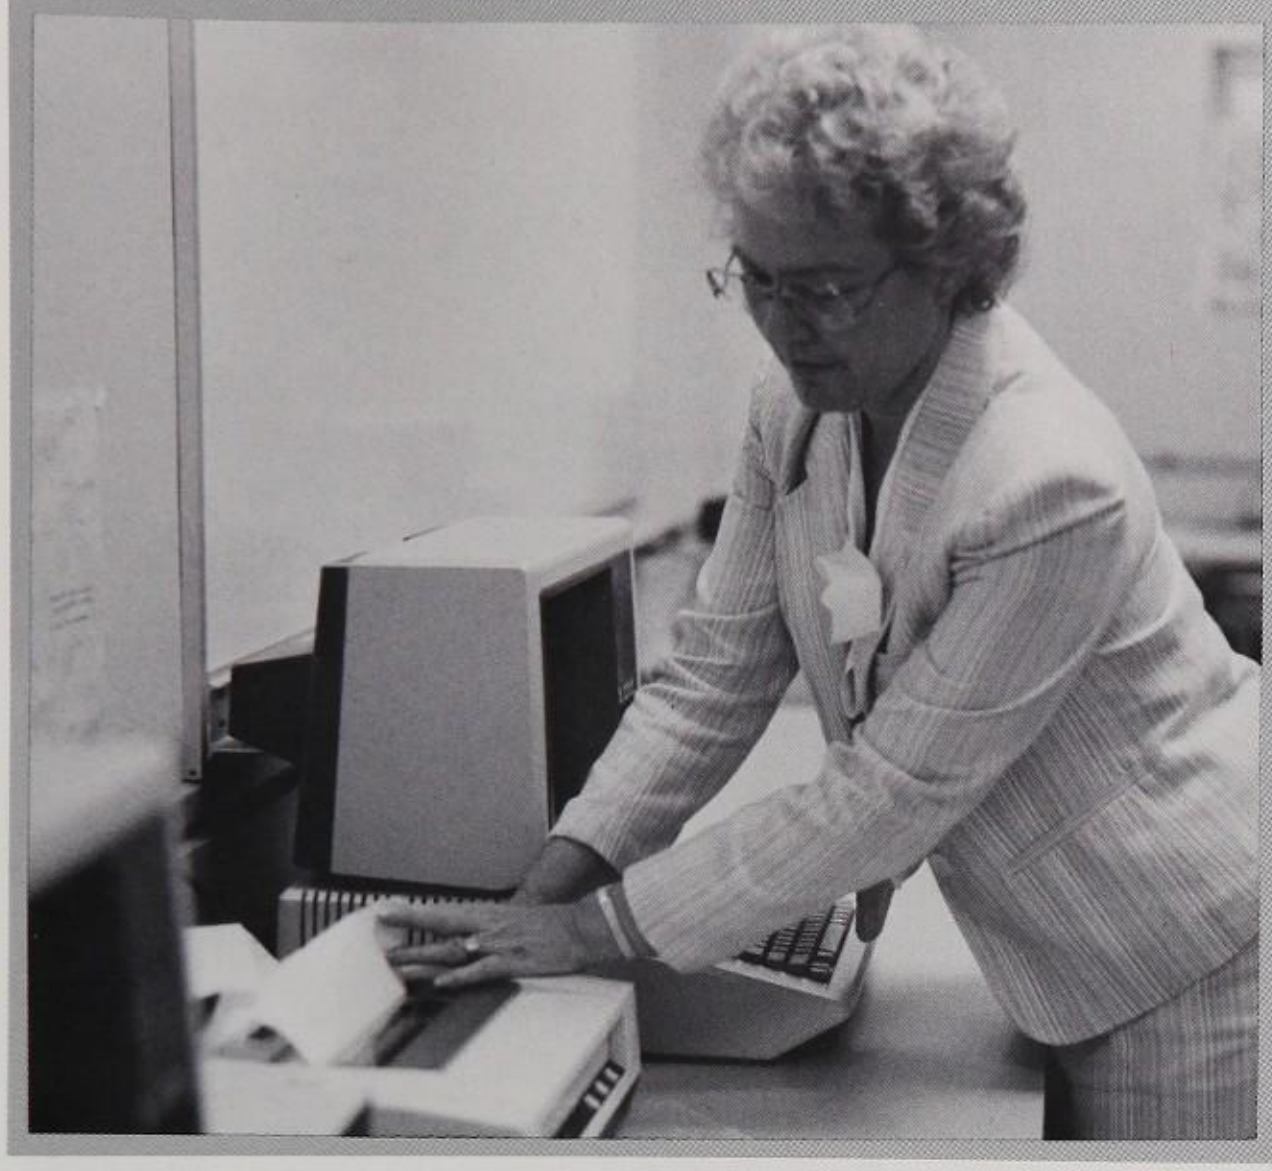
The Business Department Moves Forward



Mrs. Mitchell confidently awaits the final printouts of her students' grades.

As one enters the Business Department, the frantic clicking of the typewriters and the whirr of computers sounded throughout the air. Ten electronic IBM typewriters and computer printers have been added this year to improve the learning of the students. A new class, "Word Processing on the Microcomputer," was added to intrigue the computer minded since computers are going to be the tools of our generation. Carolyn Grimes, a future business leader who took business classes every year of her four at PHS and was in FBLA commented, "I like to work independently because I think you learn more. (Also, the teachers are very qualified: Yes, the teachers are very qualified.)" They were given a grant and are a computer-based model site for California high schools. They gave a computer demonstration which was attended by fifteen visiting teachers in November. The Business Department continued to advance its technology and hoped to impliment several new courses to be approved by the curriculum council.

Making Way For New Traditions

The sun rose and with it, the blurry eyes of those seniors dedicated enough to spend their last eve of summer, slumbering on the quad. Yes, senior status had taken over, allowing even the shyest of upperclassmen to walk with that certain air.

September and October seemed the month for enthusiasm with tailgate parties, morp and football games. The following months dragged as seniors saw graduation, still ages away. With some regret, those "years" passed quickly. The relationships strengthened as soon-to-be ex-Titans realized time was running short. The wall remained the "Senior Wall", just the connotation "Senior" allowed for strange behavior without unreasonable criticism. Friends made in four years at PHS became even closer in the months leading up to that final day; but, the thought that these people would be with us forever made graduation more acceptable and the memories of Poway High even happier.

Energy Ignites Senior Class

The senior year was a high-voltage danger zone with one activity after another. Senior breakfasts, broom hockey games and tailgate parties were constantly in process and all witnessed great successes.

The activities were all devised in the minds of four very hard working class officers who represented the senior class of '86 in the ASB. Dave LeCours headed the class as President. He ruled PHS very democratically, confronting the senior class before each decision was made final. "There's a great opportunity to take charge," Dave confessed, "because there's so much power invested in the ASB. But that's not what it's there for. Hopefully, the senior class won't regret anything that went on this year. We tried to do as much as possible so we wouldn't look back and think, 'We should have done this,' or, 'Why didn't we do that?' "

Yes, like Jesse James, Batman and Gumby, Dave had a side kick. Katie Rarity was the busybody who added ideas to activity lists and ran around doing what Dave couldn't. "I like to think that I was a large contributer to the senior class excitement," added Katie.

None of the notes or paperwork would have been taken care of if it weren't for the beautiful, blonde, behind-the-desk secretary, Christy Domville who promptly took down everyday minutes and organized many a desk top at Dave's request. Erin completed the quartet by balancing the senior budget and bouncing checks.

Chris Toomey decided, "The year was really busy. I can tell our senior reps were busy. I'm glad they were though, because without their enthusiasm, the year would have been a drag. They kept us busy with filling senior breakfasts and an ALMOST senior ski day. I think the event that went over the best overall was the Broom Hockey game! Fun, fun, fun!"

Senior class officers sizzle with excitement.

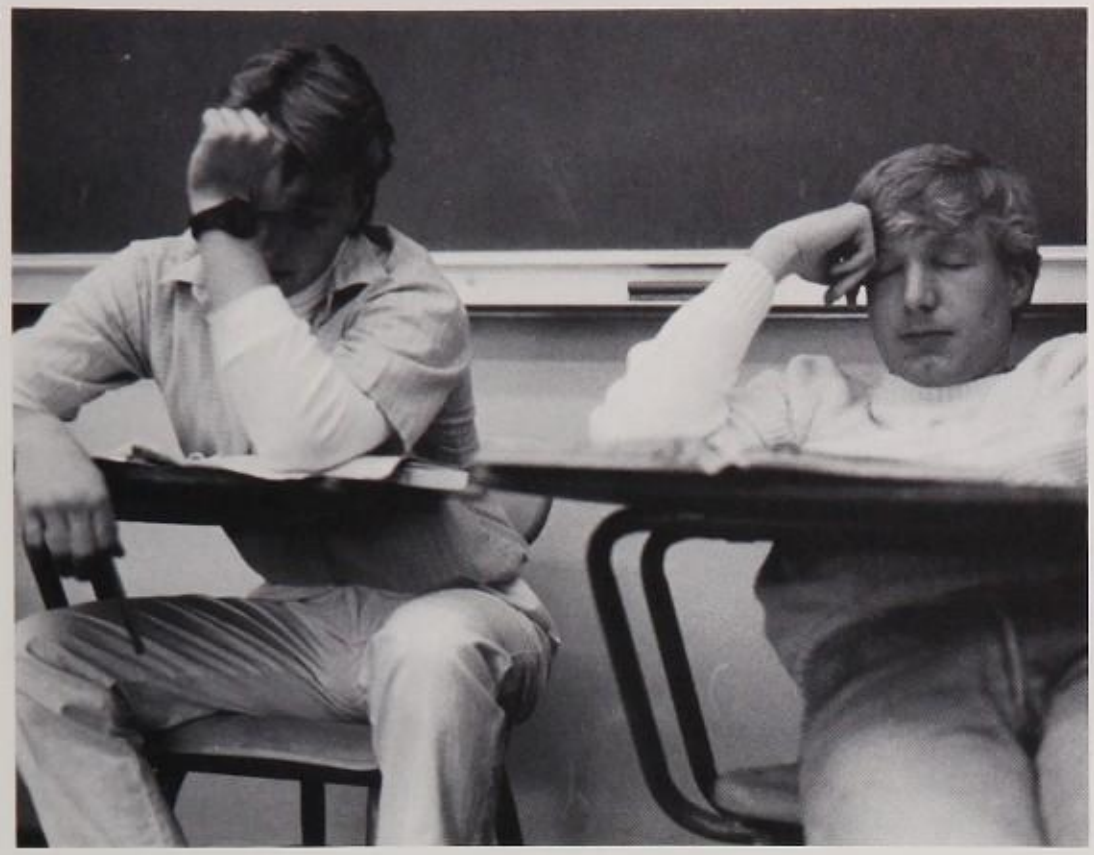
Senioritis Invades Study Habits



"You guys, I've got so much homework to do and I have to go to work from three to nine. What should I do, skip homework or work?"

"Skip both."

Most seniors solved their problems in this manner. Some schedules consisted of five classes, others of four, while those steadfast, hard working students battled through six or seven classes, all with an AP in front of them. But, for most second-semester seniors, whose acceptances were framed and already collecting dust on the shelves, ideas of shopping, the beach or "vacation" became key vocabulary words.

The countdown began the first day in September as the bell rang. There were far more important things for seniors to do than study or write research papers. After twelve long years of classes, most seniors were ready to go out and enjoy themselves. Like an epidemic, Senioritis hit one senior after another. Duffy Jolley decided, "I acquired Senioritis after entering both of my AP classes, one honors class, three band and a Math Analysis class. Of course, I was assigned the related homework, but Dangermouse (an awesome program on Nickelodeon) was much more entertaining."

Kevin Tillotson confessed, "As an underclassman, I was so concerned with my grades, I even had nightmares about F's, but I grew out of that and the beach sounded much more appealing."

After all, what was homework, anyway?

Perhaps it had something to do with the back packs the underclassmen wore constantly!

Seniors find Time for Breakfast

Eyes nudged open to the smell of sizzling bacon and maple syrup. The knowledge that an adolescent appetite would soon be filled made the day ahead seem less forboding. For many late-sleeping seniors, this morning activity became merely a fading memory. The true reality of the situation proved that waking up at six forty-five and making it to school by seven twenty-seven left little time for a nourishing meal. One exception to this usually devastating schedule occurred at periodic senior breakfasts. The first of these gatherings took place at the Rancho Bernardo Denny's. It hosted a few dozen seniors who were brave enough to rise before the sun. The next breakfast saw over one hundred seniors who felt it easier to travel to K-1 rather than trekking all the way to Rancho Bernardo Drive.

"I finally got a good, hot meal for breakfast instead of a quick granola bar or piece of fruit from the refrigerator," commented Marilee Ogren. The school breakfast also found Dr. Hughes and fellow administrators behind the griddle, flipping pancakes and browning sausages. Stated Cindy McCarthy, "I thought it was neat to see so many seniors together, not separated around the campus in their own groups."

At least two good things came of these breakfasts. Seniors were saved from malnutrition while spending time with their fellow classmen and getting to know others at the same time.

So, as seniors looked back on their final year at Poway High their memories did not begin with the bell. Instead, memories reached back into the wee hours of weekday mornings when half-opened eyes met for a breakfast with friends.

Is it in the eyes, or how about the walk?

What exactly is it that gives a person "the special look"? Whatever it may be, Marilee Ogren and Brian Berry had it. These stunning individuals won the privilege of being selected the two best looking seniors in the class of '86.

"It hit me as a big surprise when Paige and Kathy told me," said Marilee, "but I was also very flattered. It's nice to know that people notice me, but I think it's more important for them to know that they are noticed too."

Though both Marilee and Brian stood out in the crowded campus, neither partook of the habit of staring into mirrors or constantly primming themselves. They could often be seen sweating it up or swimming it up, whether it was caused by Marilee on the tennis courts or from Brian playing polo in the high school pool. "One truly good looking person is one who catches your eye no matter what condition they're in," stated Jenni Ernst, one of the observant seniors.

"They say having 'the look' will help you advance in life, but I don't think that's very true," confirmed Brian. "They don't help you to get the kind of friends that I have, nor do they help me do well in school, waterpolo or whatever challenge I'm faced with."

If PHS had its own magazine, the pages would have been filled with many of Poway's bright and shining faces. Marilee and Brian were chosen by the mass to represent the mass, the best looking seniors of Poway's '86 graduating class.

Beyond the illustrious title both felt they had a lot more to offer than just great looking smiles. Marilee and Brian looked forward to successful careers and lots of fun in the future. With all that they possessed inside, their looks would definitely not be their largest attribute.

Mickey and Mr. Rogers Come to Poway

Mickey Mouse and Mr. Rogers aren't just childrens' friends who hang around at Disneyland or TV stations waiting to discuss Disney trivia or Mr. Rogers' neighborhood. They became household utensils, helping with bedtime stories and manners. All in all, they were a couple of swell guys.

In a crowd, one could always pick out the "most likely to resemble Rogers and Mickey" candidates; and, the Poway High campus joined the crusade. Hidden amongst the stacks of books and grinning faces, we found the two personality champs. Yes folks, our own Mr. Rogers and Mickey Mouse went to Poway High! And just like ordinary people, they ate lunches, tied their shoes, came to class, mostly on time, and were basically involved in whatever they could get involved in.

Lori Rousseau walked around the campus with the classic "Mickey Mouse grin" that turned anyone's bad day into a good one. She commented, "People are friendly. You just need to work a little harder to crack some smiles than you do with others, but there's always one in there."

Todd Wilson always had a good word to say to others and his cute, little freckled face managed to shine its way into everyone's heart. "People make me feel good," he decided. "I think it's my responsibility to return the favor with a good word and a smile. Everyone's worth that."

Although they weren't movie stars, Lori and Todd smiled to their fans and added relief to the kids who waited for words to liven the PHS campus.

When I Grow Up I Wana be a Jailbird

"When I grow up, I want to be a jailbird. I want to rob a bank, hijack a plane and become an international terrorist!" Dave LeCours and Kim Jameson set their goals and succeeded at becoming what they wanted to become. This showed when these two had something to do, without a doubt, the job was completed.

Dave began his success in his high school career when he helped his soccer team go to CIF in his junior year. He was very active in clubs and events on campus and through the community. He wasn't involved because he wanted to look good for colleges, but because he enjoyed the activities. He had already become successful as he did things that he enjoyed.

In his senior year, his peers elected him President of the Senior Class, undertaking such jobs as float building, tailgate parties and the infamous Broom Hockey games. He said that he would certainly become "rich and famous one day."

Kim Jameson also headed for the future by accomplishing all of her major goals throughout high school. Her freshman year, she vigorously rooted for our frosh teams as a cheerleader. She became involved in the ASB and organized a beautiful 1984-85 prom at the Grand Tradition, a first-time site, in her junior year. For the finale, in her senior year, she headed the ASB as President.

When asked what she really wanted to be, Kim smiled and said, "Well, running for the Presidential elections in 2000 would be a long shot, but who knows?" Long shots, or not, both Kim and Dave felt that being successful in high school would aid in making them successes in adult life, no matter in what field endeavor.

No Poway High student needed to buy tickets for the Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey Circus when it came to town. We had our own "big top" right on campus. The star performers could always be found with smiles to yield and jokes to tell. Jeff Page used his skills in the "Ultimate art of quote making." His famous line, "Life is a desert" came from his lips at least twice a day.

He never failed to throw out the last words. He constantly reminded the "senior chicks" that a joke or prank came tops on his list. He could often be found imitating someone in a crowd in order to force a smile from a sad face. To Jeff, "Happiness and friends were as important as a shower every morning." If ever there came a day when Jeff wasn't smiling, his counterpart would come through with a shining smile.

Katie Rarity won the "Clowniest Chick of 86." She often mimicked different cliques. "It's like, Oh my God, no way, you know what I mean?" She could talk on and on without any real direction, but she would smile and say, "Hey, it makes people laugh."

Her jokes often sounded quiet but never mistakable or unnoticed. If it came from Rarity, people laughed. During lunch, Katie often wandered from one group to another and never left anyone until she saw a smile wreck the solemn faces. Even a cup of hot chocolate sounded fun to Katie . . . She loved to go to Bob's to order cocoa and watch the little marshmallows that floated around the cup without melting.

Jeff, known for his quick witticism and smart remarks stated, "Life is not just a desert, it is also a circus."

Poway High's Own Ozzie and Harriet

"They smooched behind the trash cans on the quad? They gave each other a hug outside of H-11? I don't believe it!" None of this juicy gossip centered around our 1986 Class Couple. Everybody knew Jesse John and Leigh Ann LaTorraca were the couple. Unless one of them fell incurably ill, the two could be found constantly together. Their famous pose sat them daily on a cement bench on the Senior Wall. There, they would giggle and Jesse would often become a chair for Leigh Ann as she sat herself on his lap. Nothing went said without quick "love" glances or friendly pecks on the cheek.

They never amused themselves with "Schnookums" or "pumpkin." Silly names like those loomed far from their vocabulary. Instead, Leigh Ann called Jesse "The best friend she could ever hope to have," and said "it would be great if we could always be close."

The most important factor in their relationship came from the commitments they made for one another. Since their freshman year, they dated and fussed over each other, like cream and sugar, never one without the other. That was the way they liked it. They didn't feel isolated from their friends, because they enjoyed being with friends, but more than anything they enjoyed each other.

When asked about the future, Leigh Ann and Jesse simply smiled and said, "we haven't set a wedding date, we'll get back to you at the reunion." Until then, they would enjoy each other.

Leigh Ann falls on her knees, proposing to Jesse who concentrates on "The Economy."

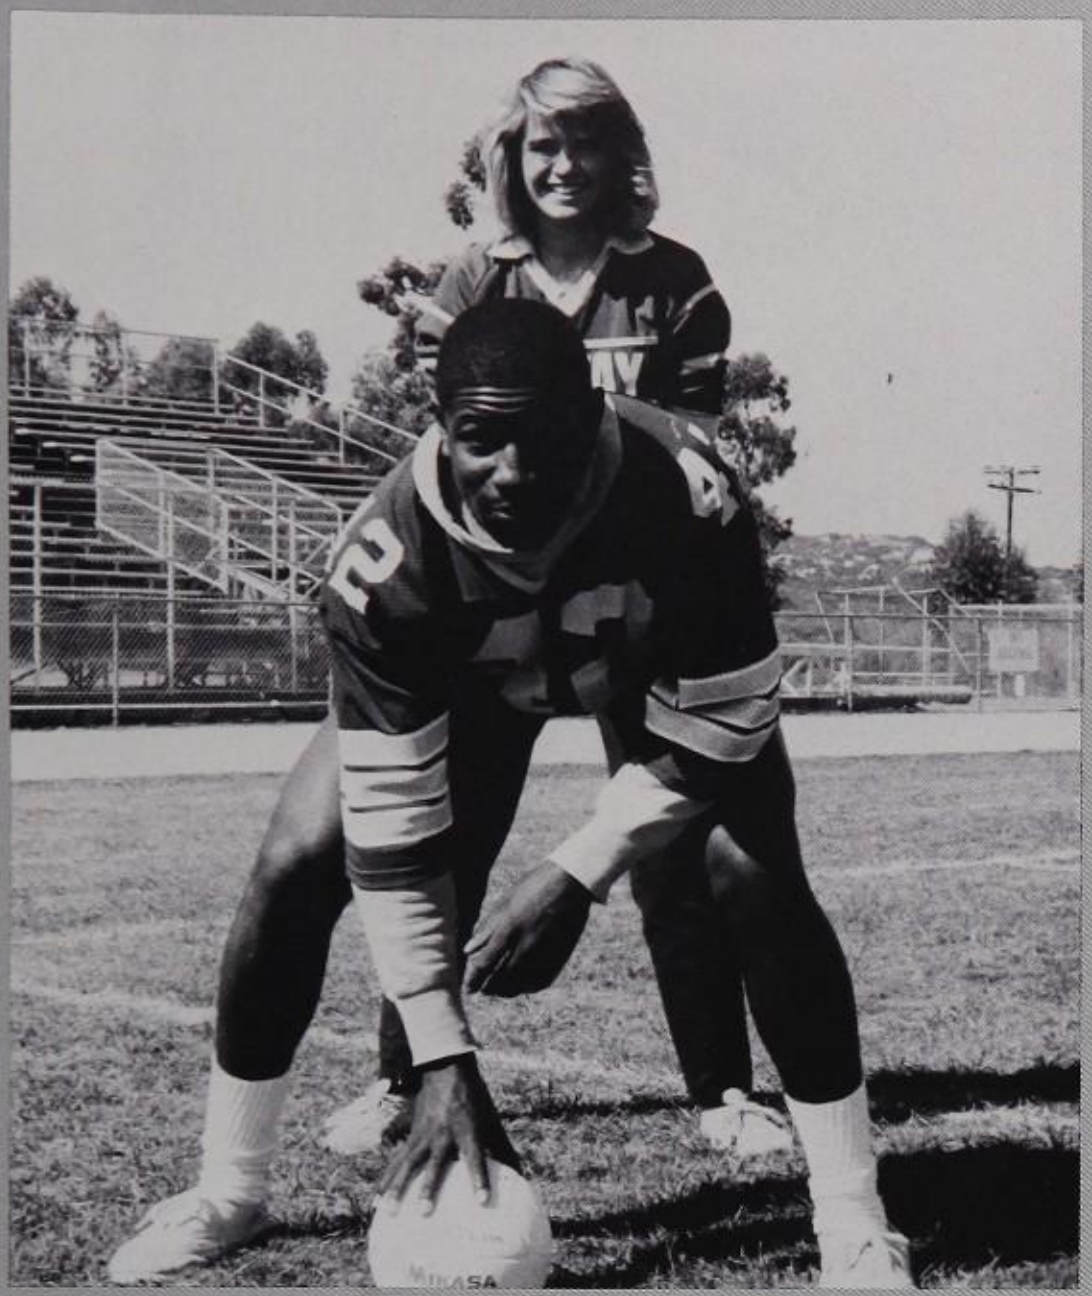
Senior Titans in the Athletic Spotlight



Harold Jones hikes a volleyball to Julie Read for an awesome spike.

Lean muscles, the agility of a cat and a varsity letterman's jacket, are all you need to be an outstanding athlete.

Statistically, Poway High has become renowned for its superior sports program due in part to outstanding seniors such as Julie Read and Harold Jones, voted most athletic.

Julie Read gained recognition through her fierce competition on the volleyball court where she aided her team into the CIF games as a Jr. and played as an outstanding Varsity player her Senior Year. "Volleyball has taught me how to work closely with my teammates while still relying on myself in tight situations." Besides participating in high school volleyball, Julie also held a position with a North County team, helping her to improve her ability and range of competition.

While Julie centered around one sport, Harold chose a variety of activities, all with great success. He was a starting Defensive player on the Varsity football team, and won statewide acclaim for wrestling as well as notoriety in various track events. "All sports took a lot out of me, but wrestling was definitely the most demanding," stated Harold. "I figure that if I spend a lot of time on my physical appearance when I'm young, then as I get older, I'll have an easier time staying in shape."

Both Harold and Julie forsaw themselves involved in athletics far into the future, but for now, sports made high school go a lot faster. Julie added, "My sports career was like a class in itself because I learned perseverance, dedication, camaraderie, and most of all, responsibility. I just had a great time getting in shape and making friends.

It's Not How You Feel It's How You Look

"You look marvelous, simply marvelous!" Statements like these were accented by Mylee Goetz and Erich Bork. These two, spiffy seniors, were voted best dressed and spent their years living up to that title. Neither appeared flashy or terribly abstract, but their constant good taste allowed them to stand out to their peers. "Dressing up can be fun," confessed Mylee, "but more importantly, looking nice makes me feel better and people can see my tastes." Bill Chakos commented, "She always looks good, even when she's in sweats. It's not so much what you wear, but what looks good on you. Mylee looks good in anything."

When asked why he took such care in his appearance, Erich simply quipped, "To impress the girls, of course!" Seriously, Erich and Mylee both thought not stressing their materialistic needs, felt taking care in what they looked like expressed their individualism.

Erich stated, "I like to look different, which is difficult because if someone likes a piece of clothing, they'll go out and buy it, then there's about ten kids with the same coat."

"Mylee and Erich may not have the most expensive wardrobes," stated Lori Rousseau, a classmate, "but they always looked terrific, whether they were wearing casual clothes around the house or dressing up for an extravagant evening out on the town. Though fashions will change through the years, Erich and Mylee will never fall behind or be at the forefront of a fashion trend but will continue to set their own styles.

Tommy and Tina Titan Show Spirit

The Poway High School Alma Mater used to ring through the Mount Carmel stadium after all sports events. Seldom was it heard in 1986. The words fell from the wall in the gym, but those heart-warming words, "Poway High we honor thee" never lost their meaning to the seniors' ultimate "Tommy and Tina Titan." John Willing and Erin Monahan not only had unique faces in a crowd, but their voices came through like foghorns in a storm. Together, they stood in the cement stands, always facing the crowd with their backs to the event, offering "Shift to the left, shift to the right" cheers which often invigorated the audience far more potently than any dance performed by the cheerleaders.

Erin took quite a turn in the 1984-85 school year as she decided to cheer from the stands instead of with the cheerleaders. This year she was a member of the Bleacher Creatures and still enjoyed being loud.

Becki Moberly, Erin's classmate, joked, "She may have a little bod, but she sure has big vocals!"

Erin commented, "Though I'm not cheering, on the field level, I'm still contributing to the noise from the crowd, which is just as important." John agreed and admitted, "School could be a bore, but I enjoyed getting involved and having fun. It's the only time I could be loud and obnoxious without feeling like a fool in front of people. Besides, when I was rowdy, others were too."

Fond memories of high school should accompany everyone through life. With such livewires as John and Erin on campus, the chances of more students having fun were increased.

John Willing supports Erin Monahan as they both cheer on the Poway teams.

Come On Up and See Me Sometime

Eyes meet across a crowded hall, then turn to other eyes. But, there are so many to look into, it's difficult to choose. This dilema plagued Krissy Shriver and Mike Lucia, awarded the honor of class flirt.

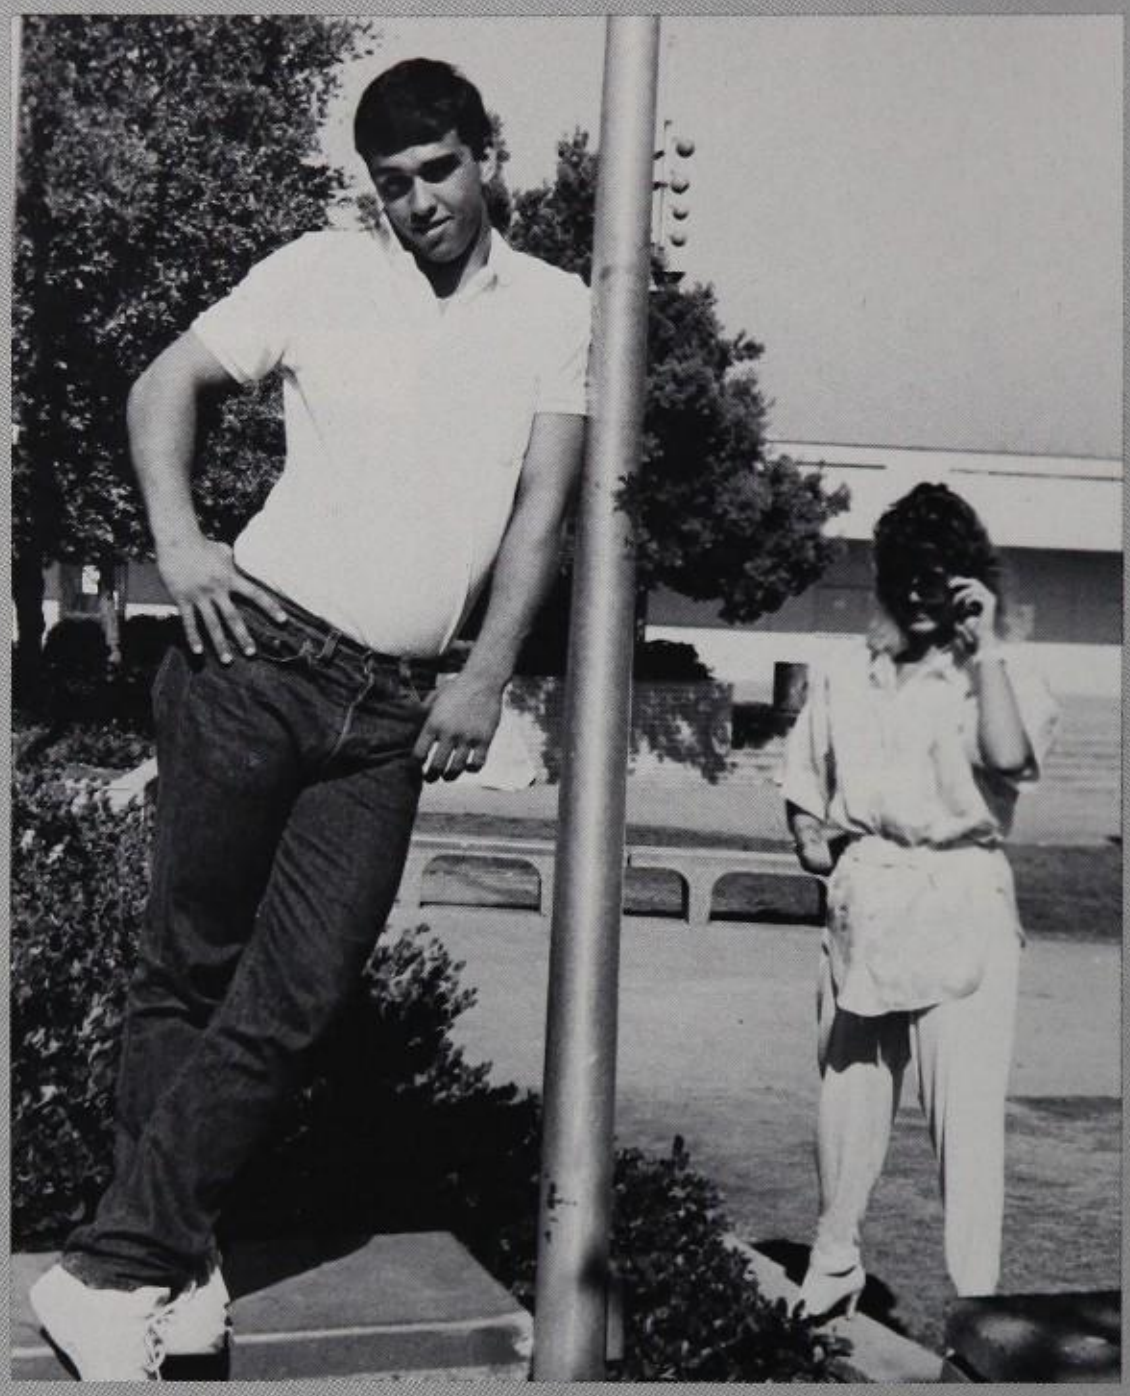
Krissy's bookcovers consisted of pictures of shirtless "hunks" like Tom Cruise or Matt Dillon. "She just adored those guys," commented a friend, Michelle Beck. Mike would defend himself by saying, "I don't consider it flirting, it's just that I enjoy female company and I like to make them smile." He rarely failed there. Whenever observed talking to girls, they seemed to be constantly grinning just as much as he.

Krissy, his counterpart in carousing, also took part in the joys of socializing. "If it were not for the guys at Poway High, school would be a lot more monotonous. Friends are very inportant to me, but there is not the challenge to get their attention."

Though Krissy and Mike loved to "look around" at others, they both felt that serious relationships were very important and should not be compromised. Mike said, "His women are important, but his woman is the tops."

Both feel that the harmless activity of flirting made up a great portion of teenage life. As Mike put it, "People are fun and I like to have fun with them. If I can make a person smile or even blush a little, I think something has been accomplished."

Krissy and Mike simply took advantage of the fact that the world has always been inundated with fabulous looking people. They were the sightseers on a tour of the Seven Wonders of the world, only the Seven Wonders were not the Sphinx or the Taj Mahal, they were the gorgeous guys and gals on the Poway High campus.



Krissy Shriver gives Mike Lucia the approving eye.

G. Einstein and C. Pythagoras

Einstein and Pythagoras had nothing on Gordon Shockley and Chrisanna Weech. These two outstanding students won the votes of their peers for most scholarly in the class of 1986. "School takes up a lot of my time," confessed Gordon, "but, I figure if I understand and do well at what I do right now, then I will be a lot better off in college and beyond." Gordon won various awards for his academic excellence including being recognized by the Kiwanis Club in the Youth Salute. He applied at the Ivy League schools like Yale, Princeton and Stanford and wanted to major in either international relations or political science.

Chrisanna, on the other hand, wanted to major in medicine at Northwestern. She said, "I have always been a hard worker and that comes in handy when dealing with the more difficult classes."

Neither Gordon nor Chrisanna centered all of their time on academics. Sports and friends deemed just as important to both. Gordon played on the Varsity boys tennis team while Chrisanna showed her skills through high school basketball, league soccer, and softball. "If it weren't for sports, and especially friends, I don't think I could have done as well in school," confessed Chrisanna.

Their faces may not always have been found buried in books, but Chrisanna and Gordon got their work done and with the quality that proved them to be successful.

If high school performance and involvement give strength to future accomplishments then both of these hardworking individuals felt that they would go as far as possible in the years to come. Gordon summed it up by saying, "High school does not decide one's future, but it definitely gives you a great start."

It's five a.m. Do you know where Gordon and Chris are?

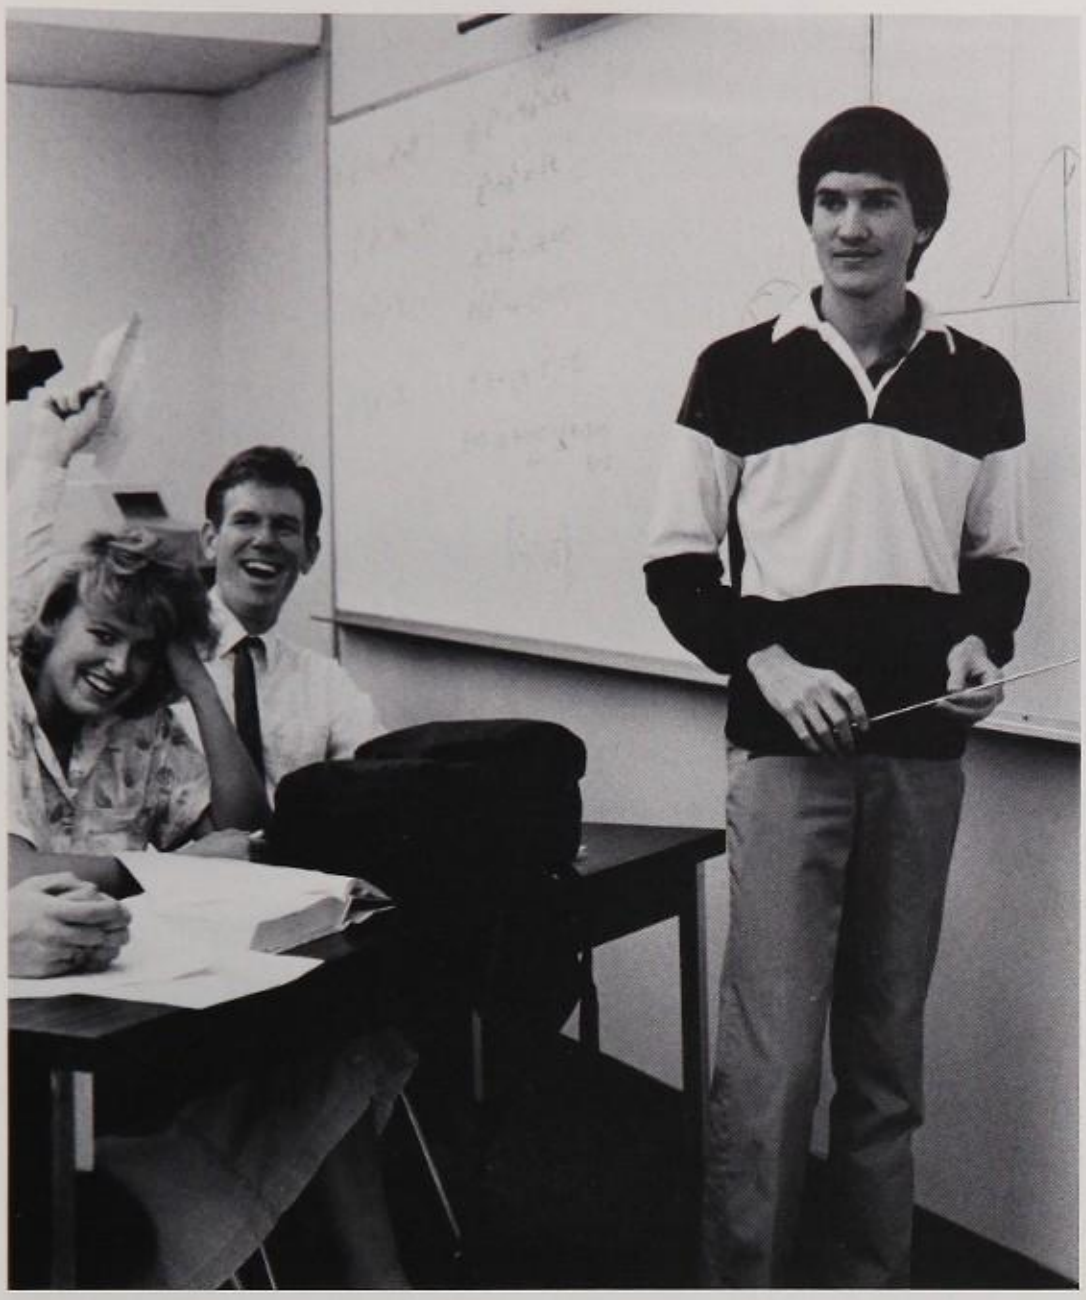
Outstanding in Math and Science



Stephen D'Angelo attempts to educate an unruly bunch which includes Mr. Weiss.

Science and math have always been subjects that have tied together. Math problems are used when calculating distances between the sun and other stars, or when figuring out the speed of light. Who hasn't heard of $E=mc^2$? And, how many students have thumbed through a math book without reading, "If the earth is round and its moon is also round, how far is the trip to Jupiter in a space rocket that is triangular?"

Steve D'Angelo understands the connection as he has excelled in both subjects throughout his school career. He has enjoyed both subjects because they have given him a chance to challenge his mind with the logic of Calculus equations and science because the labs are interesting.

"Math and science relate to the universe which is such an immense mass. I feel the knowledge of these fields overwhelms any other because it is such a wide subject," admits Steve, who has dedicated most of his time to math clubs and scientific programs.

"Stephen has been at the top of his class every year for the past four years," commented Mr. Weiss. He added, "Top really means top because Stephen is at the pinnacle of high school Mathematics — second year calculus. He has been very influential in the development of the math club and competed in every math club that came along."

Stephen received definite recognition for his abilities as he won the reverence of being the number-two student in the San Diego County Honors Math Contest with such honors and accomplishments behind him, Steve still felt he had a long way to go. With such an immense range of knowledge within the areas of math and science there was no limit to what could be learned or taught.

Outstanding in English

Often people placed English on the list of last things to do when it came to homework, when in fact it has so much importance in everyday life. People often take literature for granted when reading a Harlequin romance or jotting down quick finishing touches on essays. However, poetry and story writing were a lot more important than "Oh, I'll get to it later" subjects.

Two students of Poway High School glorified the English language as they showed off their skills in competitions, tests and tournaments. Jennifer Drayton and Betsy Klein were the co-outstanding seniors in English for the '85-'86 year.

Jennifer was a person who used her skills in English to influence others. She wrote for the Iliad, the school newspaper. The quality of her work placed her in the top 6% of the nation. She also won the NCTE award, a competition which assisted her scholarship efforts. She felt, "You can break rules in English primarily because there aren't any rules. English involves the human condition which is always flexible, but it never changes drastically."

Betsy Klien worked with the same enthusiasm. "Her quality surfaced in her ability to do all things well. In fact , not only does she excel in writing and literature, but also she placed in the California State Speech Tournament as a junior." stated the department head. She believed the methods of her success were "hard work, determination and a loss of sleep . . . sometimes."

The ability to write and speak well listed as important attributes to everyday life and communication with those around us. Both Betsy and Jennifer gained understanding of this needed communication and went beyond merely doing the work to clearly and effectively express themselves.

Betsy and Jennifer relax with some good friends.

Outstanding in Music

When Beethoven was a child, he knew how to compose music. Mozart played with the same vigor. As they grew, their work grew just as rapidly. The music became more complex, and to its audience, it became more appealing. These great composers wrote their compositions for future musicians to use for entertaining others, for the joy and appreciation of music and for examples to better music. Poway High School's music program displayed a great musical attitude in the '85-'86 school year, spawning such great musicians as Heather Montgomery. Marc Davis, the music department head decided, "Heather's dedication made her an outstanding student. She was a member of the All-Southern California and All-Sate High School Honor Boards because of her talents. She also held the principal chair in the Alto Saxophone section." Her talent has taken her through four years of the Emerald Brigade, winning honors and awards and much of her time is dedicated to music. She said she enjoyed music because it had so much effect on life. The radio and the television make music more prominent and it touches so many people. I enjoy music the most because the lyrics are so true and the way notes are put together, they sound so beautiful. I can't picture the world without music.

She plans to continue her career in music, to further her education, and learn more about the various types of musical sounds. As long as there exists music and musicians such as Heather, society will be gaining a great deal in the area of the arts. Beethoven and Mozart would have appreciated the determination and love of music that Heather Montgomery exhibited.

Heather Montgomery proudly displays one joy of her life, her saxophone.

Outstanding in Social Science

The words "Social Science" often conjure pictures of oversized history books, weekly quizzes and boring lectures. Seriously though, the area of social science goes way beyond these aspects with such classes as civics, American history, You and the Law, and the newly required Economics. One girl who took great advantage of these choices was Chrisanna Weech, voted "Most outstanding in Social Science."

"I've always felt that to know a lot about social sciences and current events is to know a lot about how we should live and should not live." Since her freshman year, Chrisanna partook in advanced classes, not only in social sciences, but she also felt that it was definitely one of her strongest subjects. "I have always had to work hard," commmented Chrisanna, "but, without the work, I would not have accomplished anything and I hate wasted time. If I am going to do something, I want to do it right."

With such determination, it would seem that Chrisanna would be a natural for politics, but she says, "No, I would rather be a medical student and hopefully a doctor. Health is important, and I'd rather treat people than lead them, but with my knowledge of the world events I now understand politics better and if I ever choose that career, I know I will have a head start. I suppose I haven't totally blanked the idea out, so maybe I'll become something with a title other than MD." No matter which she chooses, her high school record will help.

So no longer did Social Science merely mean large books and lengthy lectures. To many students with the interest of Chrisanna, the words meant a look into the future through the helping eyes of the past.

Chrisanna holds the world in her hands.

Outstanding in Drama

"To be or not to be" was not the question that plagued Jan Manos, the teacher of the thespian group at Poway High. Instead, she had to ask herself, "Who should it be, who should it be?" In the end, she had to rely on overall participation in school and in the community. Her final choice was Teri Deaver. She said, "Teri has not only been outstanding at Poway, but also she graced the stages for various community groups in Poway and Escondido." When asked why she finds drama so appealing, Teri replied, "Drama, for all its fun, is mostly an escape for forgetting oneself and learning about others. Theater is something everyone should try at least once; the people are wonderful and the performances invigorating. It can change one's whole outlook on life."

Though Teri won the final selection, Mrs. Manos wanted it to be clearly known that Teri was not the only one capable of receiving the honor. Amanda Callaway, Joyce Gibson, Linda Powledge and Kathryn Thomas, all members of the International Thespian Society Troup 1369 along with Teri, had what it took to shine on Poway's stage as well as beyond the campus. Miss Manos spoke proudly of her girls as she commented, "These actresses are equally responsible for the outstanding successes at Poway High in the last four years. They provided leadership, dedication and their God-given talent unselfishly. We shall miss them."

Teri definitely saw drama and the stage as a part of her future, be it professionally or for pure enjoyment. School meant more to Teri than books and tests. Without the stage high school would have been incomplete. The actress and the student merged to form a girl worthy of such an honor.

Teri Deaver rehearses lines for an upcoming performance.

Outstanding in Art

Picasso, Van Gogh, Henri Rousseau are all artists who have glorified and defined the word art. Their paintings have been exhibited to generations and generations of art lovers, who gaze at the works with admiration and awe. Their names have been etched in history books and encyclopedias, where they live though many died years ago. These artists have set the part for more painters, sculptors and other creative talents. Wendy Malliet was one such person with these artistic abilities.

"She was our department choice," confirmed the art department head, Clay Walker. He added, "She had a lot of determination and liked to do things with care. We noticed that her work wasn't only strong in one or two areas of art which indicates a high overall performance level." Wendy smiled when she was told of her award. She seemed a little shy. "I love to paint," she said. "It's a way of unique expression; and it's fun. I like to view my product after the hours of work." Wendy studied art because she had the talent and she enjoyed it.

She concluded, "As art is timeless, my pieces of work will always have meaning." So, the next time you visit Paris to see the "Mona Lisa," or go to any art exhibit, don't forget to look for various works by Wendy Malliet. They may, one day, be there. But even if her works do not make it to the fame of Europe they stood out enough as did Wendy herself to be rewarded by the faculty of Poway High. The personal satisfaction of knowing her work was good gave Wendy a good start in whatever she chose to pursue.

We Almost Got the Gold

"I know, we'll do Willie Wonka and the Chocolate Factory. I can see it now, a chocolate river, a fountain of Hersheys, little red oompa-loompas running around in little oompa-loompa suits." The faces of the senior float builders twinkled with anticipation as they saw the first-place prize calling them. Unfortunately, a chocolate river was not the easiest thing to create. Thanks to Dave LeCours, Katie Rarity, the skilled workmanship of John Hughes and John Willing, the float builders worked on a new plan. A sure-fire scheme to make the best float in the Homecoming parade had been made.

John Willing commented, "We worked night and day, hammering, nailing, painting. At first, we didn't know what we were doing, then things began to pull together. We became sort of like one big family. Since we were together so much, we joked and goofed around without offending the others. To the girls, I think it was one, big gossip session (but then, what else do girls do?) Ha-ha. Overall, we had fun to balance the work."

Finally, the big night came. We all met at Mount Carmel to show our completed masterpiece . . . Our very own Pirates of the Carribbean. Pete Zaayer was the poor pirate who was chased by the man-hungry native, Erin Monahan, around the treasure island. Dave Welbourn led his pirates in the wooden boat to defeat the natives and "Go for the Gold."

"The evening went well," insisted Paul Prebole. "I never got up in front of so many people in a skirt before singing 'Yo-ho, Yo-ho, a pirate's life for me.' I felt like I was in Disneyland."

"We didn't win first place, but we came close and had a great time getting there."

Senior pirates prepare for a bloody float battle.

Parking Lot Boosts Spirits

Mexican hat dances, 'Barf in a Bag', and stolen barbeques, what else could one ask for in a tailgate party? For several spirited seniors, these gatherings formed the basis for fun before the main events — the Friday night football games. Once or twice a month, at the beginning of the school year, the front parking lot of Poway High saw an invasion by girls donning "Chicks of '86" sweatshirts and seniors guys prepared for any activity by the Senior class officers. The activities ranged from the whip cream eating fight, to a limbo competition and yes, the all-exciting "Barf in a Bag" relay race (NOT as disgusting as it may sound).

When asked why she thought the tailgate parties were planned, Senior Vice President Katie Rarity exclaimed, "My tail was ready to gate! No, seriously, it gave us an excuse to get as many seniors together as possible outside of a serious environment. We could all let loose while promoting unity and friendships within our class."

One bleak spot in the tailgate ventures came with the disappearance of Mr. Weiss' barbeque at the first party. The question, "Who took it?" became a standing joke to many seniors, but, unfortunately, the barbeque was never returned.

Overall, the parties were successful. Dave Welbourne disclosed, "The fun we had boosted our spirit for the game, making for an overall, great, Friday night."

Who could ever have said that a parking lot was only good for parking a car?

A New Tradition Grows & Grows

"The halls are so crowded, everyone tramples each other!" cried Stacy Bauhof. People have good reason for saying this. Poway High had the biggest underclass ever. It totaled over 2100 students. Poway High in 1962 originally housed 300 underclassmen. In twenty-five years the population has grown sevenfold.

This underclass sometimes forgot the advantages they would have over the seniors. This year's juniors, sophomores and freshmen would be seeing, next year, all future Titan football games in their own stadium instead of driving to Mount Carmel. "It'll be great not having to go to the Mount for home games," said Rob Miller.

Growth was not restricted to our campus. Immediately behind our school, bulldozers scraped away vegetation and terraced the hillside. As a result, our cross country teams were forced to use Rancho Bernardo for practices and meets.

Hopefully the construction will be completed soon and our student-population growth will slow down. We may never return to the rural atmosphere of 1962: We are leaving behing old traditions and starting new ones.

UNDERCLASSMEN

Hard Work pays off for Juniors

Every student knows that the junior year is the toughest year academically. With chemistry, U.S. history, and a demanding English class, there is not much time for anything but studying. To be a junior class officer, there is need for a very special type of person. And that is just what the class of '87 was blessed with, four very special people. Domonique Rosano held the presidency, Pilar Melendez reigned as vice-president, Glen Tripp held the position of secretary, and Brian Maienschein dutifully acted as treasurer. These four officers held their heads high, took a deep breath and jumped into a very successful junior year.

They started the year off with the popular MORP dance, which raked in more than $1300.00. Then in October, they successfully charmed the audience with their winning gold-mine float. Brian Maienschien said, "After winning the float competition, we knew our united class was headed for continual success."

The biggest mountain the officers had to climb was Prom. This year Camp Pendleton hosted the magical event that went on the juniors' long list of achievements. Jeff Page said, "The juniors did a great job with Prom this year; they deserve a lot of credit."

When the year finally ended, the four grinning officers all looked back with pride. Despite chemistry finals and Constitution tests, they never let their class down. Doe Rosano finished the year by stating, "Now I'm ready for anything!"

Glen, Brian, Pilar and Doe made up the driving force of the juniors.

Juniors Display Perfection

Juniors capture the "Gold" with their winning float.

Nervous juniors gathered around their miniature gold mine they hoped would take them to first place in the float competition for the second year in a row. With a lot of last-minute bustling on the sidelines, straightening of costumes, and a lot of praying, the juniors and their winning float were off.

The miniature saloon, general store and gold mine crept onto the football field, glittering the theme "Going for the Gold." Sara Massengil leaned over to a friend whispering, "It looks so real; their costumes and props are so elaborate!" As the float slid slowly foreward, saloon girls served ginger ale to rowdy cowboys in a bar, old miners panned for precious gold and outlaws shot one another in realistic looking mock gunfights.

The junior class worked hard together on the float. As Jenny Selser said, "It took a lot of hard work from many devoted people." But the hard work paid off as the class of '87 ran away with the five hundred dollar first prize. Through the screams and laughs of the junior's pride, Doe Rosano yelled to everyone, "We'll be back again even better next year!"

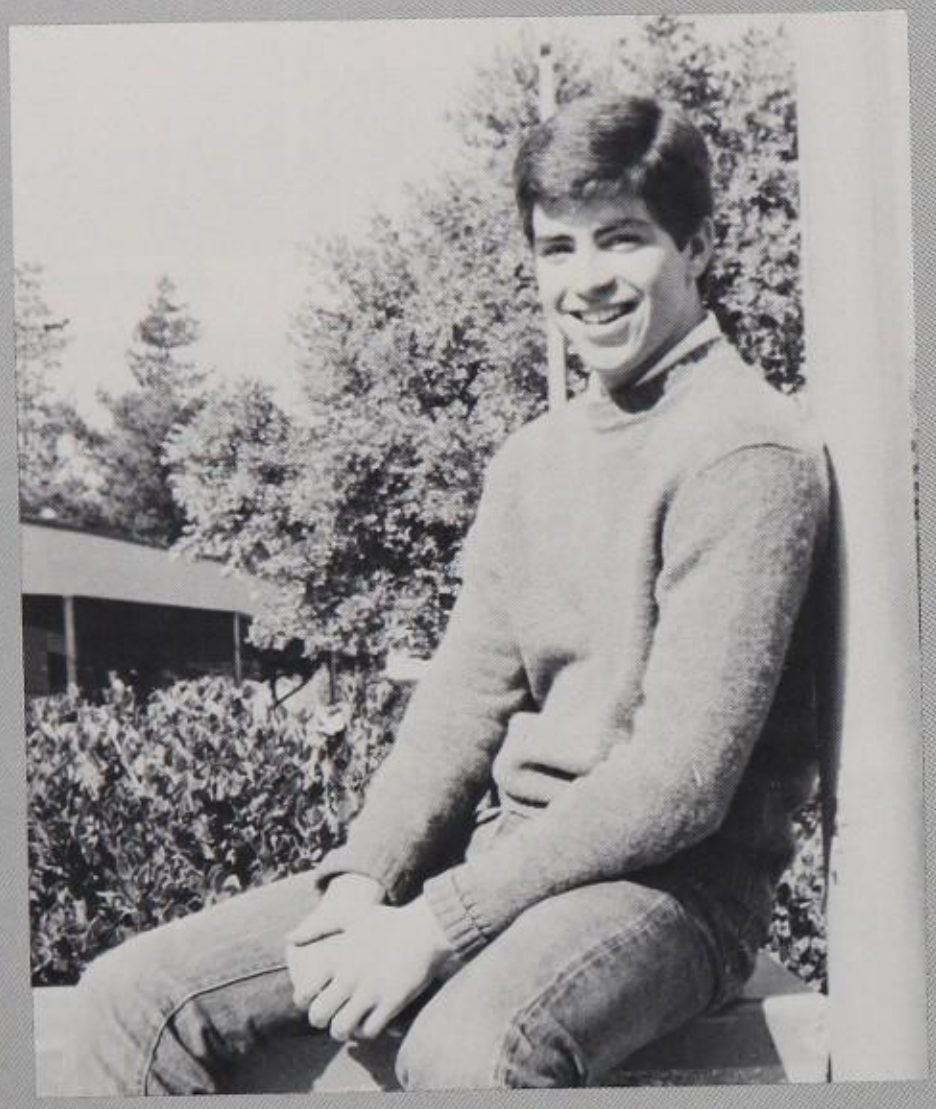
Glen Plots his Tripp Into Success



Glen Tripp's smile reflects his positive attitude.

Glen Tripp's face became familiar around the Poway High campus during the 85-86 school year. Besides getting involved in almost every club and activity at school, he participated in sports, plus retained excellent grades.

Glen began this school year holding office in many clubs and organizations. He was the president of the bike club, and served as secretary for the AFS, the photography club and the junior class. Glen could have been found at speech and debate meetings and academic triathlons while still finding time to write articles for the Iliad.

Glen also participated in such sports as waterpolo, JV basketball and baseball.

His contribution to the school did not hinder his G.P.A. Glen supported a 3.95 while taking courses such as A.P. Chemistry, Honors Survey of American Literature and A.P. Calculus.

Glen summed up his feelings about his hectic schedule by saying, "Being involved at Poway High has put me in contact with people, which makes high school a more enjoyable experience." Glen Tripp exemplified an outstanding Poway High junior.

Juniors Explore Titan Center

Jenny Selser utilizes the Titan Center to plan her future at the college of her choice.

"Berkeley? hmm . . . no, UCSD . . . no, Humbolt State! Yes, Humbolt State!" exclaimed one of the many curious junior Titans found each lunch hour, piling through the catalogs in the Poway High Titan Center.

College awareness became a very important part of the lives of the junior class. The class of '87 wanted to learn everything possible about different schools before actually applying. Debi Quesenberry said, "The Titan Center has really helped me limit my choices of colleges." The college catalogs included information on freshman requirements, tuition, and campus life.

In addition to the great variety of catalogs, the juniors had access to a little computer called the Eureka. When given the right numbers, the Eureka would print out information on careers, colleges, and job availability. "With a little help from Mr. Boulware, the Eureka gave me just the information I needed!" stated Junior Jennae LaRue.

The Titan Center has really proved itself profitable in aiding the juniors at Poway High make their toughest and most important decision for their senior year, the right college.

Commissioners Receive Recognition

"Commissioner? What's a Class Commissioner?" stated Matt Bailey. Most of the students at Poway High had never heard of a class commissioner let alone knew their job. The 1986 junior commissioners put in long and hard hours, and were never really recognized for their work.

The junior class officers started by picking five commissioners out of the dozens of applications. The people chosen were, Prom: Kristen Rangel, Julie Dickinson, and Katie Molloy. Fund-raiser: Jenny Selser, and Publicity: Tonia Reinys. These five girls put their time and effort into keeping up the successful junior class reputation. Prom commissioner Kristen Rangel said, "Prom was a lot of very hard work, but Julie, Katie and I knew it was all worth it when we saw the smiles on everyone's face!"

Brian Maienschien said, "We wouldn't have made it without the commissioners; they were the most important part of our success!"

Tonia, Katie, Kristen, Julie and Jenny smile with a sense of accomplishment after a hard year.

Liza Yum; A Distinguished Junior

Liza Yum radiates confidence in her junior year.

"Studying hard does pay off!" stated Junior Liza Yum. Liza was chosen as an outstanding student for the class of '87. She spent her junior year as a very energetic student and involved herself in extra-school activities.

Her junior class schedule consisted of A.P. Calculus, Biology, Chemistry, and Honors Survey of American Literature. These tough classes boosted her GPA to well over a 4.0. High grades granted Liza acceptance into the California Scholarship Federation, National Honors Society, and the Society of Distinguished High School Students. Liza stated, "School has been a challenge for me." Tammy Watkins said, "I admire Liza because she treats everyone the same; she doesn't flaunt her intelligence."

Liza didn't spend her whole junior year studying. She participated on the JV tennis team and also gave the swim team a try. "Sports," Liza pointed out, "Are a way of escaping the stress of school work." Participating throughout school, academically and socially, Liza exercised herself as a remarkable and distinguished junior.

Sophomores Dig in and Work Hard

Establishing a firm foothold on the second step, the class of '88 continued their climb up the PHS ladder. President Brady Hamilton, Vice-President Cindy MacKauf, Treasurer Heather McLeod, and Secretary Teri Miley sparked up fresh ideas for their sophomore class that improved unity and school awareness. Attendance nearly doubled in the class meetings, showing greater class support. "I never knew how much went on at the school until I went to our class meetings!" exclaimed Tiffany Shafer.

The sophomores put on the not-so-traditional Winter Ball. Girls treated guys to a semi-formal evening at the PHS gym that had been magically transformed into a world for "Winter Sweethearts." "I didn't even recognize the gym; it was so beautiful," stated Stephanie Harris.

The class of '88 was very successful when it came to fund raisers. The sophomores sold gourmet suckers, and sweatshirts, which brought in over $1000 for their class. "We were really inspired by the fact that we could bring in so much money," stated Cindy MacKauf.

This year the sophomores learned the power of unity, and pulled together for a successful class. Students encouraged one another to participate in class sponsored activities. "Our class is like one big family," stated Stephanie Allen. The class officers initiated creative fund raisers, like the sophomore sweatshirts, and professionally ran an important school dance. "Our class officers did a really great job this year!" stated Jenny Pinta.

Kristin Yamasaki grips the wheel firmly as she heads for open roads.

"Oh no! Not the freeway!" exclaimed a nervous, sophomore driver in training. Driver's training consisted of a part of the semester-long Health/Driver education class. Each sophomore got to drive on the roads during classtime with an instructor. The thought of being behind the wheel petrified most of the sophomores, but they were often reassured by their driving instructor. "I was so scared at first, but once I started driving, I realized that I drove just as well as the other people!" stated Stacy Bauhof.

The students were able to drive through Poway, Rancho Bernardo, and Escondido. They learned how to maneuver a car sensibly, park, and calm their clammoring nerves while on the road. Poway remains one of the few districts that has not cut the Driver's training class. Most schools leave it up to the students to look for private driving centers. It is still not known how long this class will be offered to Poway High sophomores. "I hope the district doesn't cut the driver's training program; it makes Poway High different from other schools," stated KiKi Windsor. Poway High offered a system that allowed the sophomores to acquire all the training they needed for free. Kim Bednar stated, "I feel students benefit from driving at school; it saves a lot of time and money." Jennie Staub stated, "I really enjoyed Driver's training during my sophomore year. Driving with all of my friends was a lot of fun, and I think that everyone benefits from the class."

Enthusiasitc Involvement Sets Goals

A self-contained sense of determination was the main reason for Sophomore Greg Warden's continual success. Football coach Mr. Franzen described Greg as having "a strong, driving inner force." Football and track and field were a few of Greg's athletic activities. He was given the title of Most Valuable Football Player his freshman and sophomore year. "Being honored with an award like that makes you feel like you've done something really worthwhile," stated Greg. He not only utilized his strong determination on the field but also in the classroom. "Succeeding in school is a very important goal in my life," said Greg. His Biology teacher Mrs. Wagner stated, "Greg is a strong "A" student with enough enthusiasm about life to knock you down." Greg's friends describe him as very friendly and always trying to improve in everything he does. Greg said his goals in life are to "Be a faster runner, play college football at UCLA or Penn State, get a degree in business, and most importantly to be happy!"

"I feel that making the most of school is the best route to follow, familiarizing yourself and getting involved with your classes really helps," stated Greg. Greg Warden proved that school is what you make of it, and thinking positively gets positive results.

A friendly smile proves Greg Warden's heavy load creates few problems.

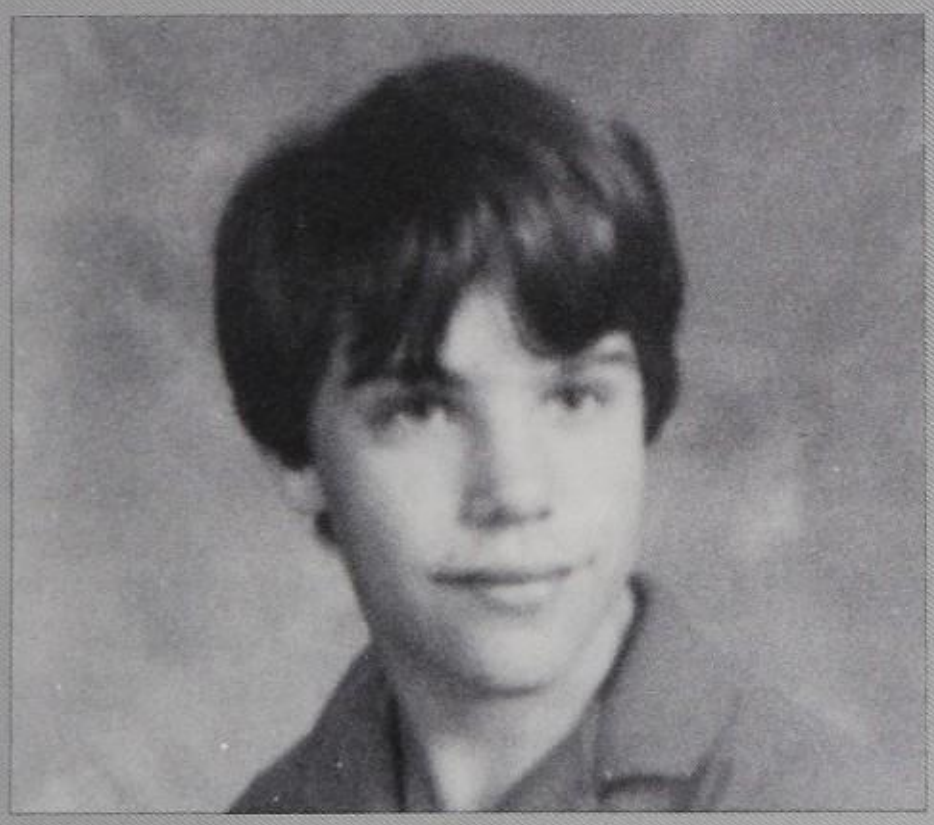
In Memory of Adam Snyder



Adam Snyder 1970-1985

"This announcement is concerning yesterday's tragedy." Dr. Robinson's voice echoed through the cavenous halls. "Yesterday, Adam Snyder collapsed on the Poway High track and was immediately taken to Pomerado Hospital. He passed away shortly after reaching the emergency room." "How? He was so young," cried Shannon McNally. Adam's death resulted from an aortic valve obstruction that he had since birth. "He had a disability but never let it show," commented Mrs. Wagner. Adam led a normal life. He received good grades, participated in karate and was very active in his chruch. Adam arrived at PHS in September from Madison Senior High in San Diego. "Adam was never happier anywhere else. He loved Poway and all of his friends," remembered his mother.

Dr. Robinson stated, "We may never quite understand his death, but if you think about it, when people go to their rose garden to get the prettiest flower, they pick a bud."

Sophomores Accept New Responsibilities

The newly elected Sophomore commissioners smile from a job well done.

Not to be "out classed" by the juniors, the sophomores elected their first class commissioners. "We needed the commissioners' help with organizing our activities," said treasurer Heather McLeod.

The Winter Ball held in February was the main activity the commissioners got to tackle. After long hours of hard work, the sophomores put on a successful dance. "The gym looked great, it was a winter paradise," commented Emily Broughton.

The commissioners attended class meetings, and helped with the sophomore candy sales and car washes. "I really enjoyed the year working as a commissioner; the hard work paid off!" remarked Susie Fink.

The commissioners were, Publicity, Michelle Downey and Shelly Hays; Dance, Susie Fink, Julie Murphy, and Megan Callaway; Fundraisers, Beth Young, Gana Millican, and Todd Sawyer.

Freshmen Accept New Responsibilities

"They do what to the freshmen?" exclaimed Jeff Cundiff in surprise. The class of 89 found the rumors about horrible fate were not true. Uniting the class of 760 students was not an easy task, but was successfully done by the class officers. President Britta VanVranken, Vice-President Lysha Yonker, Treasurer Lynn Deyarmen, and Secretary Tiffany Monroe were great friends, and ran the freshmen class successfully. "I hope we can spread our spirit to the rest of the class!" stated Britta VanVranken.

The freshmen entered a goldmine replica in their first Homecoming parade. Working together on the float started a special bond between the freshmen. "I had a blast," said Chris Williams. "All of my friends were there."

The freshmen worked hardest to build up their funds. By selling candy bars and having a car wash, they were able to raise over $2000. Treasurer Lynn Deyarmen said, "We've been so successful on our fundraisers!" The class of '89 started off on the right foot, and proved that being a freshman was nothing to be ashamed of. Simona Altman stated, "I wasn't too thrilled to be a freshman, but things went pretty smooth." Another freshman said, "My freshmen year was the absolute best!"

Tiffany, Lysha, Lynn and Britta join together to represent the freshmen class.

New Choices Abound

Three freshmen girls stroll around the PHS campus amazed at what they can do at lunch time.

"Wow, there are so many choices!" exclaimed Cheryl Murray. These comments made by freshmen found themselves enjoying the many activities offered at Poway High. Freshmen could participate in anything from band to woodshop. "The opportunity is fantastic! This year I participated in the Emerald Brigade and made tons of friends." stated Dawn Lowen. Freshman Lisa Palmer felt, "High school is so much more exciting than junior high, there are so many more choices of things to do."

The class of '89 made descisions about their future education. "College seems so far away, but I know if I get good grades it will help me get into a good school," commented Erika Sauer. Many students found a large homework load during their first year at Poway. "I never realized how much homework the teachers could pile onto your lap in one night," stated one tired student. The freshmen learned to accept and enjoy their first year in high school.

Adjusting to a New Environment

"Oh no! Where's room M-11?" exclaimed a freshman on the first day of school. Entering high school is a big jump for anyone. Poway students were accustomed to their junior high years at Meadowbrook or Twin Peaks. Matt Schlotman stated, "Poway High is so much bigger and you have so much independence." Once freshmen survived the first "dreaded" day, things started running smoothly. "My first day at PHS was so nervewracking, but soon I got the hang of a high school schedule," stated Julie Wigand.

Junior Paul Mortoloni said, "Freshmen sometimes feel looked down upon by the upperclassmen, and often fade away from the center of attention."

Lynda Spalding said, "I hope to get more involved with the school to make my next three years the best!" These optimistic views from the class of '89 implanted a positive impression in the minds of all who attended Poway High.

Aaron Garrow displays his ability to stay calm, despite the large load in front of him.

"Wow! You want to interview me?" exclaimed Aaron Garrow. An interview was no problem for Aaron as he has an outgoing and willing attitude towards just about everything. English teacher Frank Barone noticed Aaron's openness almost immediately, "He is a very articulate person who doesn't mind sharing his ideas."

It was Mr. Barone who first discovered Aaron's writing talent and started out by encouraging him to attend a writing seminar geared toward teachers. He did and loved it. "It was fun trying to bridge the tremendous gap between teachers and students," commented Aaron.

Surfing is Aaron's first love. He has competed in Hawaii and California, and hopes to compete for PHS. His other love is gymnastics, which he started while living in Singapore. Aaron's happy-go-lucky charm made him great to be around and "the type of guy you'd take home to mom!" stated Christy Selser.

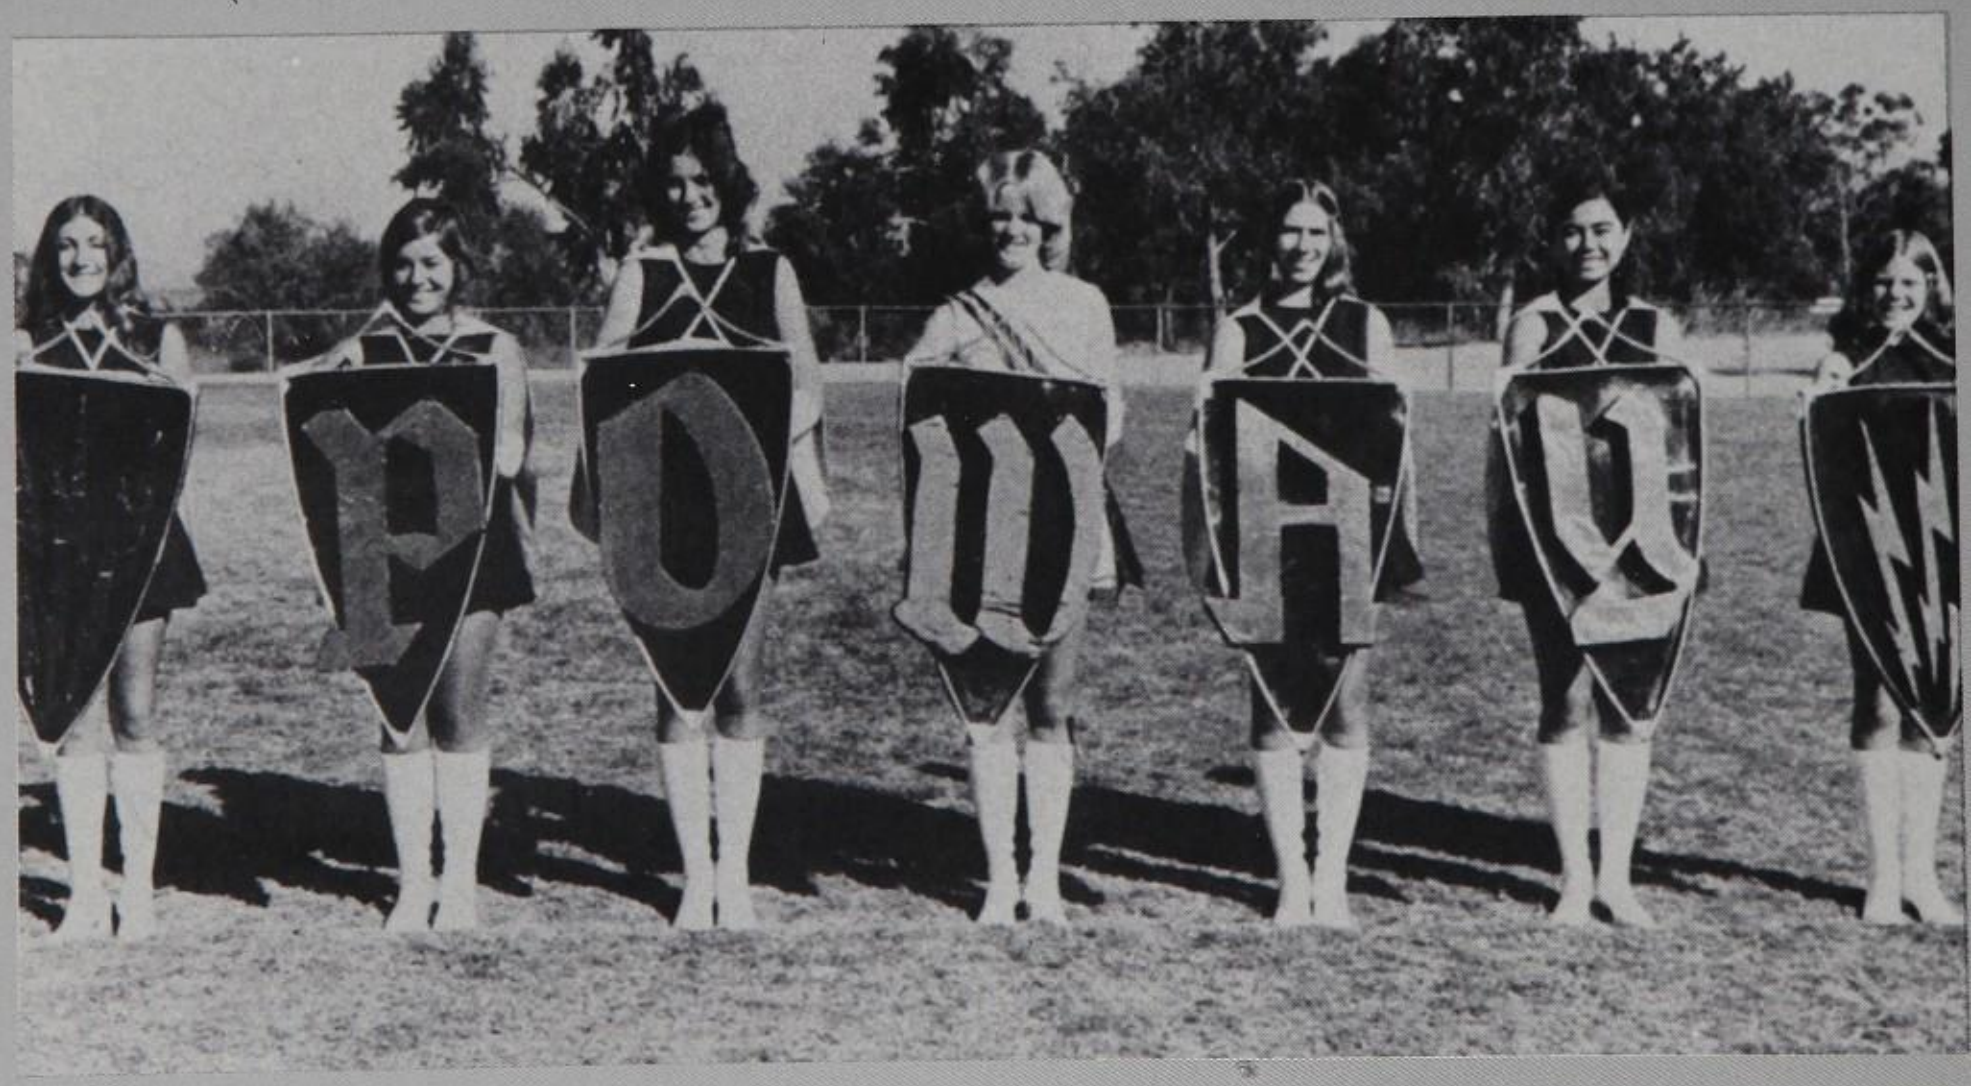
Artistic endeavors — always valued on campus.

The Majorettes display the Titan sign of 1965.



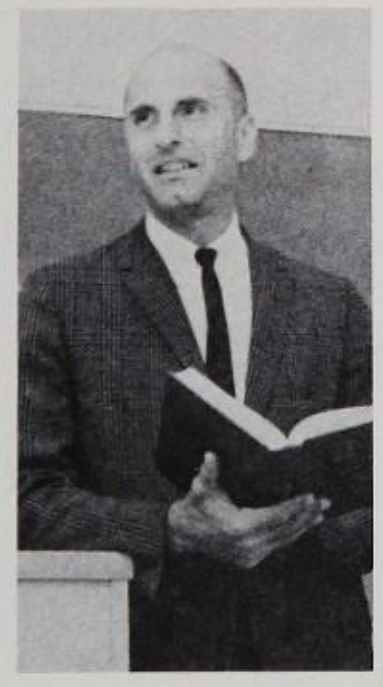
Sparkling and just as pretty as ever, the Emerald Brigade has earned a reputation worthy enough to send them to march in the Tournament of Roses Parade a number of times with the school-name always in front of them.

Changing Times

Growth seems indicative of change. With PHS serving as an ideal example, the campus assumed much more than added years and a list of graduates to look back upon. With each new entering freshman, PHS offered just a little bit more. The days of drag-racing on the dirt road (now a paved Twin Peaks Road) are over, but traditions and customs have more than often only excelled forward. As it has grown and changed, it has diversified and expanded with each generation of Titans.

The 1975 Odyssey (denim) cover was first worn by an attractive Titan, but was printed without the female persons due to controversy.

Remember those days of long hair and idealism?



Do You Recognize Me?

Prior to the Class of '86's births, these faculty members since have taught and graded students for over twenty years at PHS! Do you know who they are?

They are (left to right) Mr. Davis (science), Mr. Barone (English), and Mr. McMurray (science).

Traditions of athletic excellence are exemplified by the Titans record breaking performances.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY PHS!

The steel supporters of the new Titan stadium's bleachers form a maze. Peering north from the new bleachers, the Eucalyptus trees lining PHS's athletic fields sway in the Santa Ana wind. Disasters Shock World

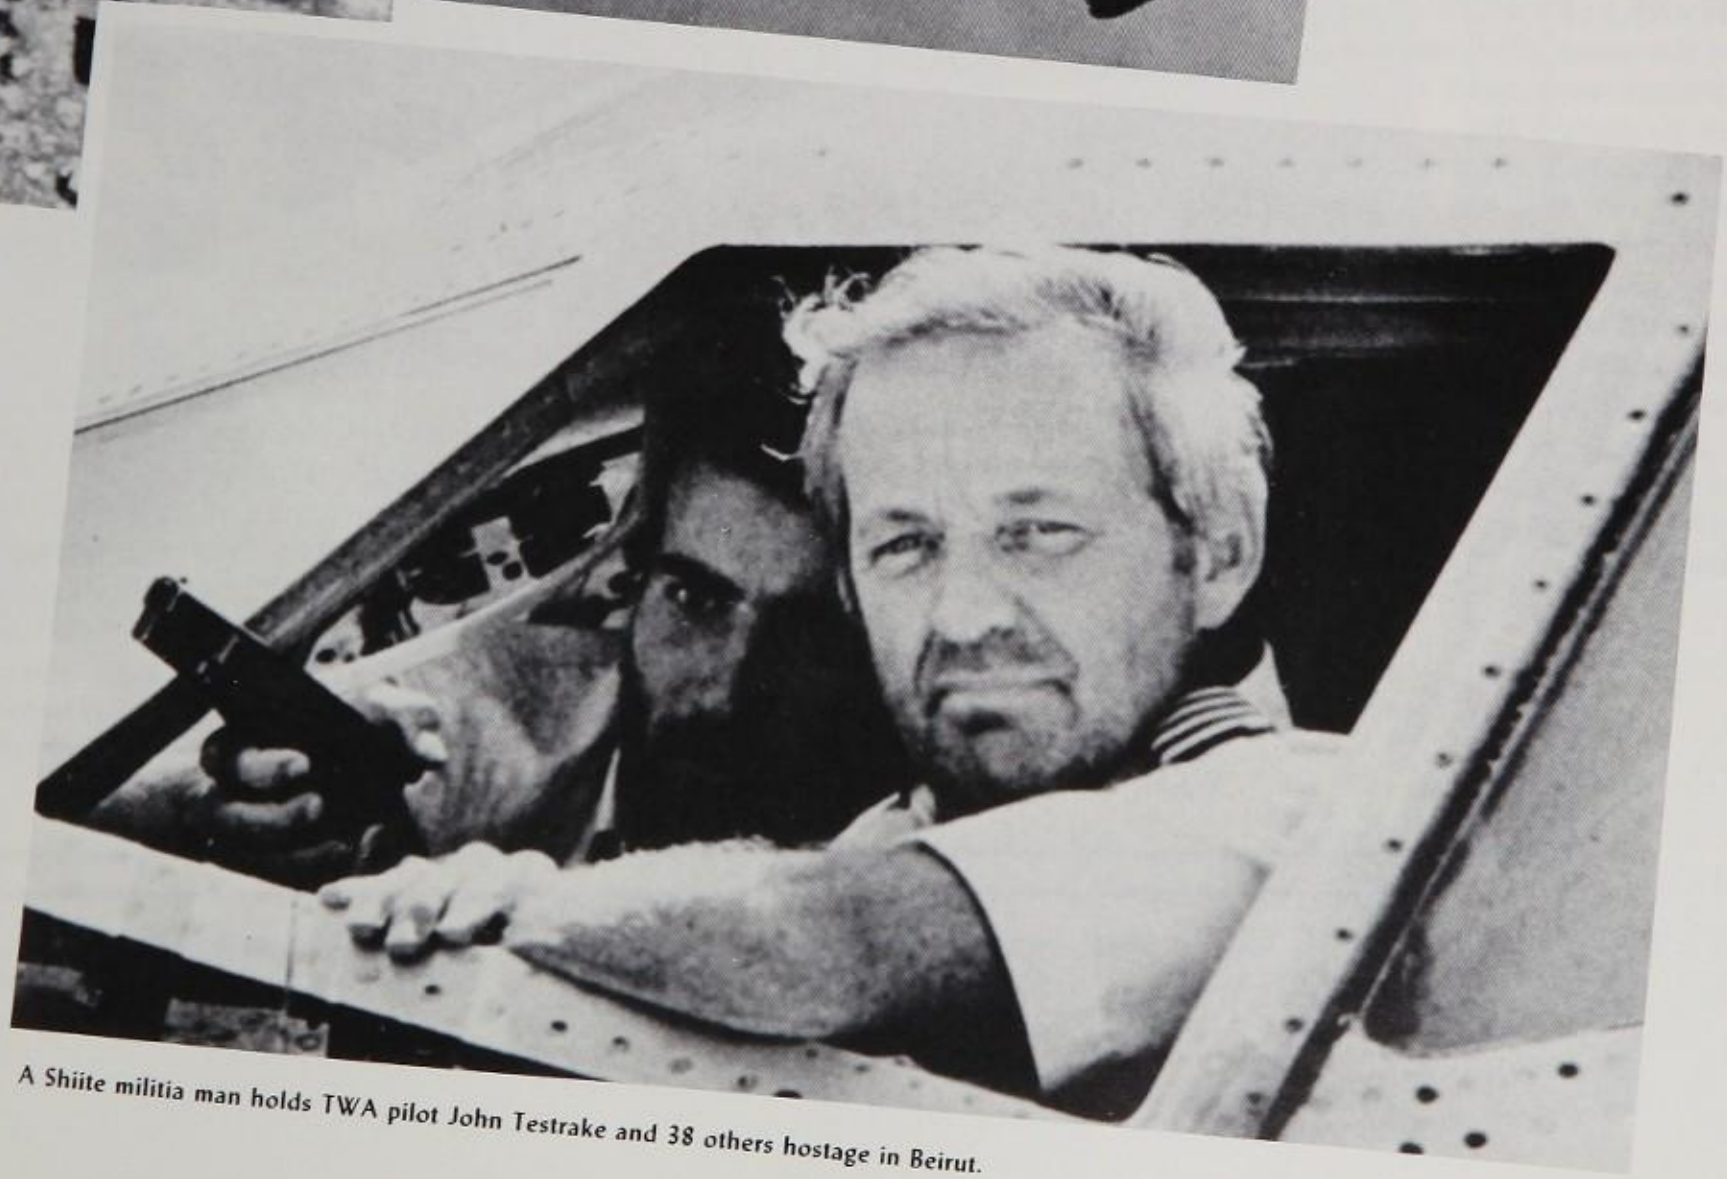
"Some men dream and say why, I dream and say why not" — Robert Kennedy

Where were you when the space shuttle exploded, when the Live Aid concert was staged, when the last plane was hijacked? If there was one word describing the year, some might say terrorism and another might say disasters. Meaning to destroy, terrorism turned brother against brother and shocked the world.

Robert Kennedy once remarked that if we all pull together on a microscale, society will begin to pull together on a macroscale. During last summer, Bob Geldof proved that one person can make a difference and great numbers can make changes. The Live Aid concerts brought more than a fourth of the world's population together in the name of famine relief for Ethiopia. Also Farm Aid united us to help farmers. On a planet shrouded with natural disasters and uncontrollable events, the shock and ailments of modern dilemmas were not enough to stop progress or change. In a world marked by tragedy, the importance of such traditions as brotherhood and freedom appeared more ever sacred.

CURRENT EVENTS

520 people perished in the worst single air disaster on August 12th. four miraculously survived the crash.



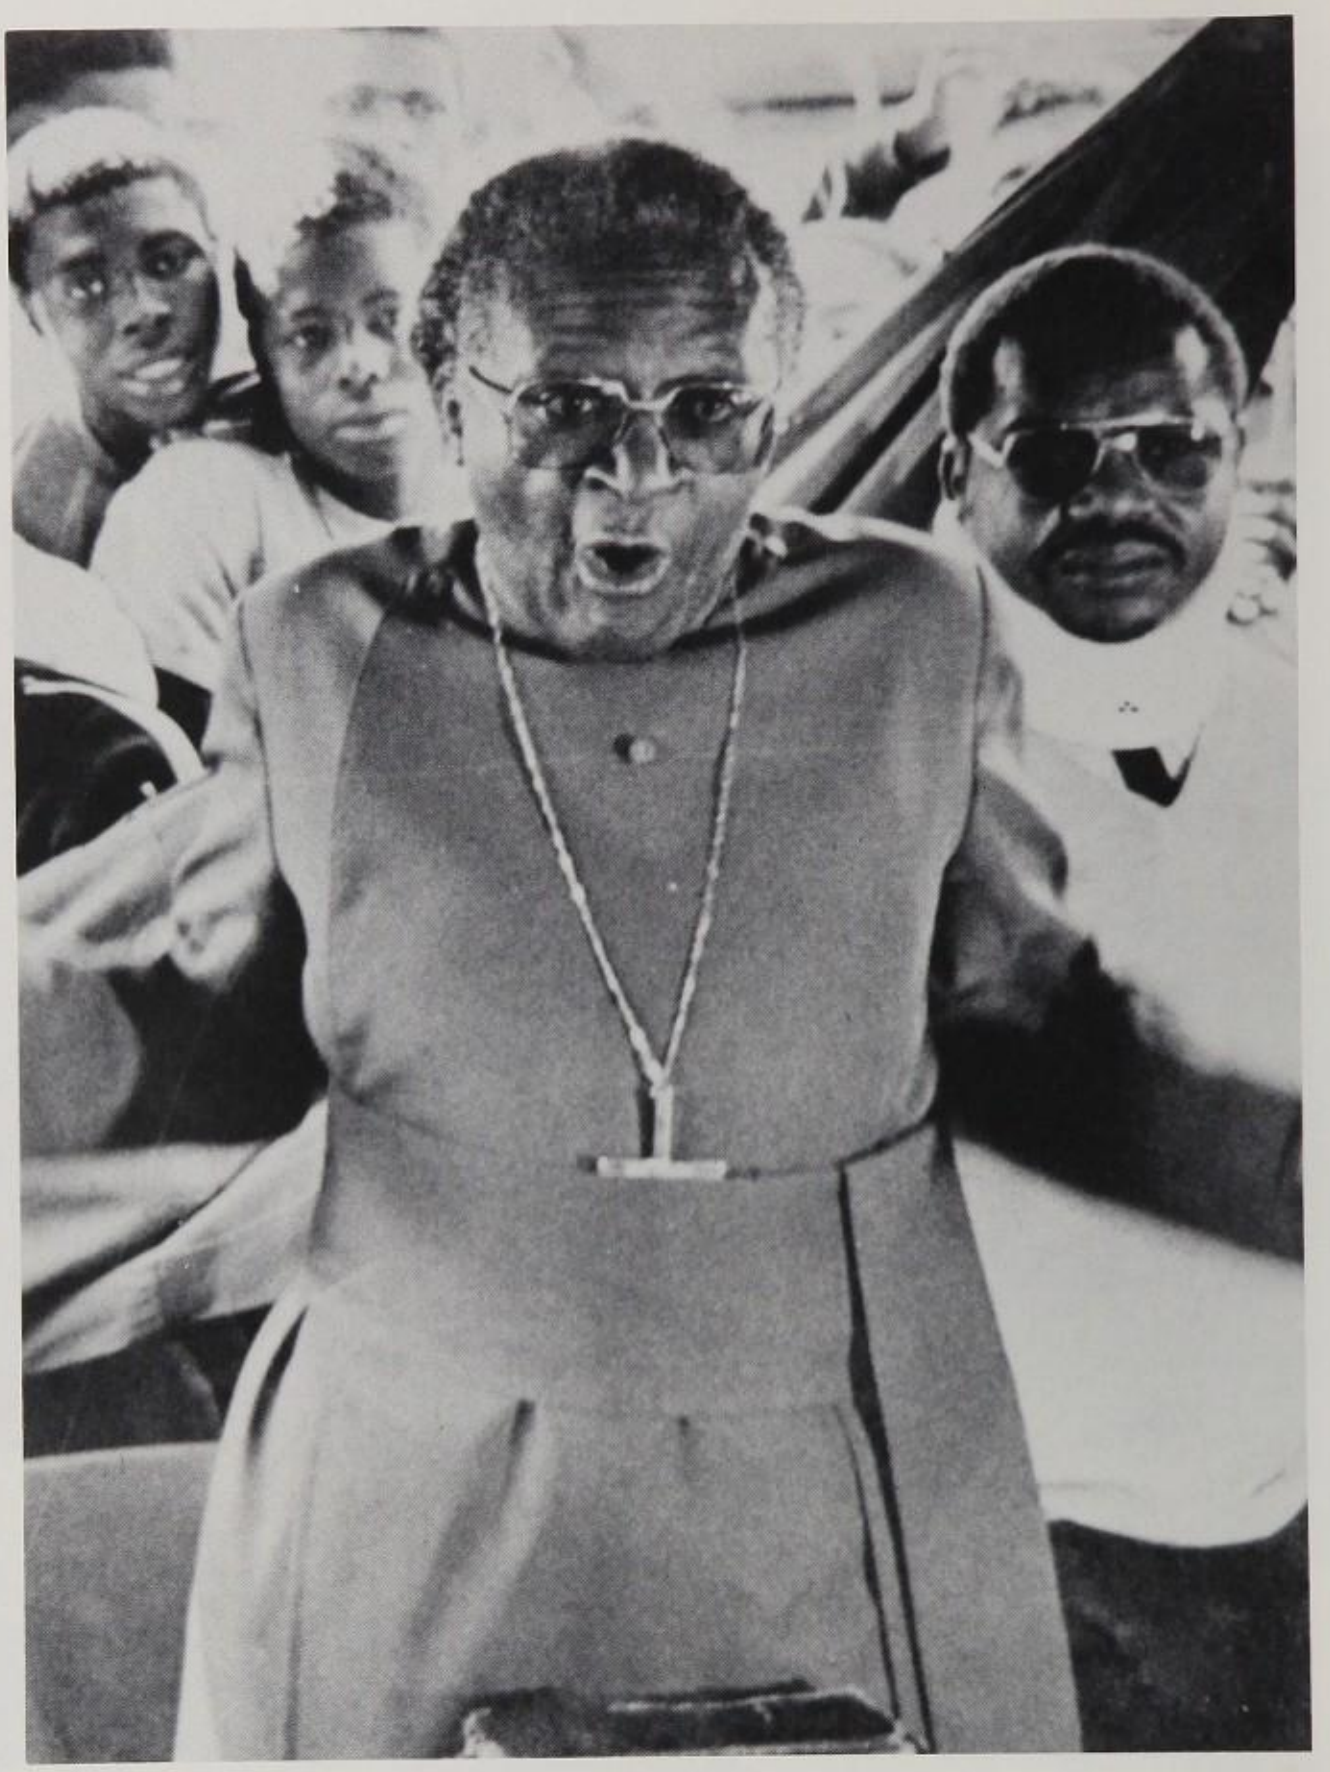
A Shiite militia man holds TWA pilot John Testrake and 38 others hostage in Beirut.

Global Struggles

Abound the Year: Set New Highs

Disaster, terrorism, and hardships littered the front pages and headlines of the 1985-86 year. From traveling speakers representing the plights of many to the Red Cross pleading for assistance and donations for disaster relief, the world seemed to be knocking on our door for our attention and our concern. With over nine thousand people arrested in South Africa in 1985, Bishop Desmond Tutu sought to address that nation's Apartheid policy and at the same time, over nine hundred people were killed in rioting in the last twenty months of racial turmoil. Black anger in South Africa has mounted to such an extent that the country spent three billion dollars to enforce Apartheid with an 83,400-man military force. On the same continent, over 18 million people continued to be near starvation by early 1986.

Natural disasters took a considerable amount of life. On September 19th, an earthquake measuring 7.8 on the Richter scale with over twenty aftershocks toppled buildings and killed seven thousand in Mexico City. At least 25,000 were killed when the volcano Nevado del Ruiz erupted, including eight thousand children, and melted snow and ice to cause a flash mud flood in Columbia.



On August 12th, 520 lost their lives in the worst single-plane disaster as a Japan Airlines 747 slammed into a mounain shortly after losing a tail fin on take-off and flew uncontrollably until impact. Terrorism interfered with air-travel as a bomb was claimed to have caused an Air India plane, with 329 on board, to crash into the Atlantic.

Terrorism reached all-time highs, as Europe and the Middle East were hit with various forms of violence. In June, 39 Americans were held hostage on a TWA plane for 17 days. The cruise ship Achille Lauro left a crippled American dead. In a daring rescue attempt, sixty people were killed as an Egyptair jet was raided by Egyptian commandos after hijackers had murdered two passengers, and shot two others. On December 27th, a bloody attack on the Rome and Vienna airports left sixteen dead and seventy-four wounded.

South Africa's Bishop Desmond Tutu sought support to abolish Apartheid in South Africa.

While the terrorism and disasters surrounding the last year often sent disbelief into our minds, the news made us wonder about our own security.

(Clockwise) Rome's Airport following the Dec. 27th massacre, a women survives the Colombian disaster, and trapped for 2½ days, a Columbian school girl named Omayra Sanchez died before she could be freed from a concrete block.

Looking Back

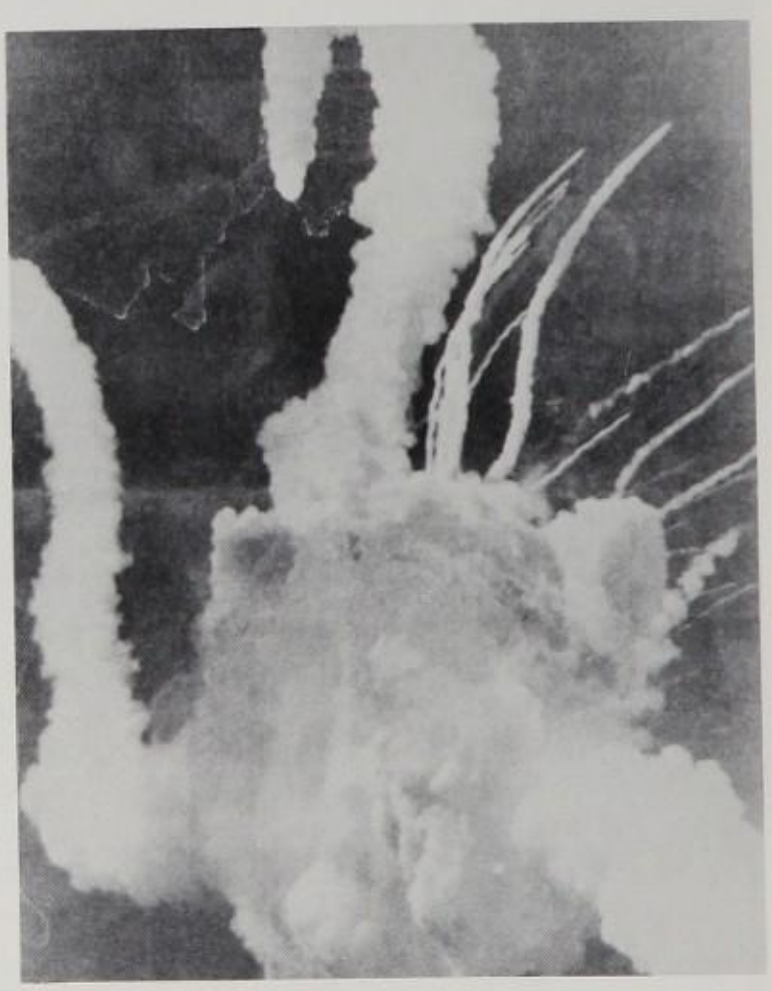
At Local Newsmakers

Striving for the betterment of man, the home front in the United States sought to establish justice, aid, and a peaceful coexistence between herself and other nations as well as within the States too. In their first summit meeting (as well as in six years), between President Ronald Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev, both sides agreed to meet two more times in the next two years to discuss such issues as the nuclear arms race, arms-control, and arms reductions.

On January 28th, as most students were in their first-period classes, the launch of the space shuttle Challenger resulted in its explosion only 73 seconds into its flight. The routine and common shuttle missions often went on unnoticed; however, this particular mission included a member of the general public, a New Hampshire school teacher named Christa McAuliffe. The shock and tragedy of the fateful Challenger left a profound impact on those who witnessed the terror as it was displayed on newscasts and in the media.

Another disaster included the December 12th crash of an Arrow Air DC-8 in Gander, Newfoundland as it was carrying 250 U.S. peacekeeping troops home from the Middle East for Christmas. All on board were killed and the charter airline was deemed responsible for the incident. Since then, Arrow Air was grounded for poor aircraft maintenance and later filed for bankruptcy.

In local news, the California state lottery was officially started October 3rd and brought in over a hundred million dollars! Most of the meony was planned to be appropriated to the state's school districts. In San Diego, Mayor Roger Hedgecock was found guilty of conspiracy and perjury charges and subsequently resigned from office. He was quickly added to a local radio station with his own show. The night stalker, Richard Ramirez, was accused of fifteen murders and sixty-two other felony charges.



And as the news added disappointing and disturbing stories, we sought relief in entertainment and sports.

(Clockwise from far left) Reagan and Gorbachev met at their first summit conference. 250 were killed in the Arrow Air crash in Newfoundland. Horton Plaza and the North County Fair opened up to the delight of fashion conscious Titans. Radio announcer, former San Diego Mayor Roger Hedgecock during his trial. Pete Rose sparks a tear as "Charlie Hustle" breaks Ty Cobb's all-time hitting record, #4192, by hitting a ball pitched by none other, a San Diego Padre. The grim and tragic image of the space shuttle Challenger in the U.S.'s worst space program disaster.

Signs of the Times

Appear in Spotlight

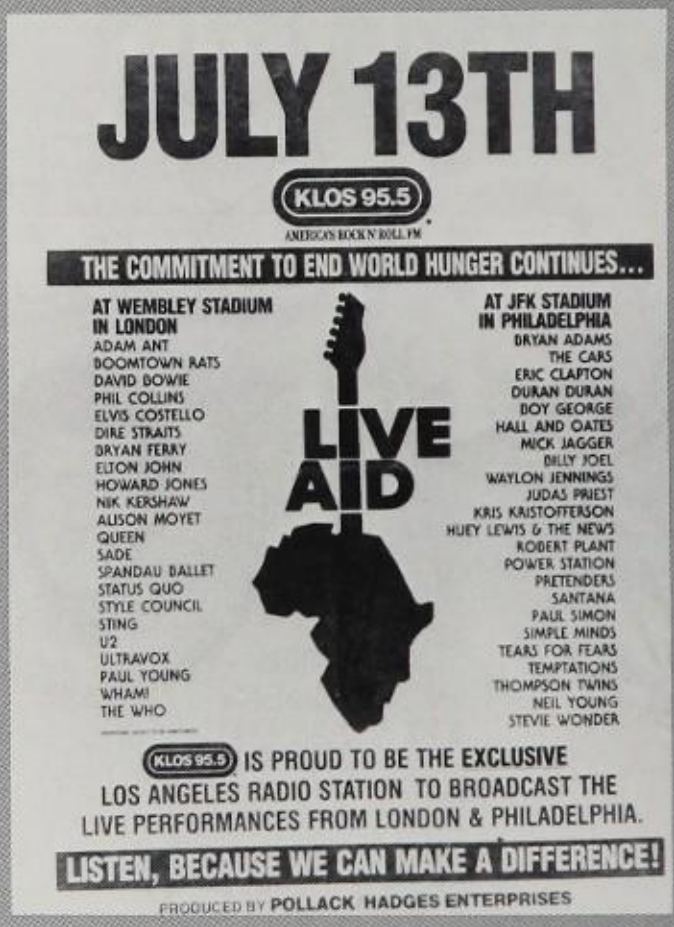
Entertainment riveted deeper into our lives as the world we so often sought to temporarily put on a shelf by it was opened before us. Ironically, more often enough it caused us to think about it with greater detail. The entertainment industry volunteered their time and talents and organized a multitude of events to raise funds to support those in need, such as for Mexican earthquake and African famine relief efforts, as well as for domestic difficulties like the homeless and those afflicted with AIDS.

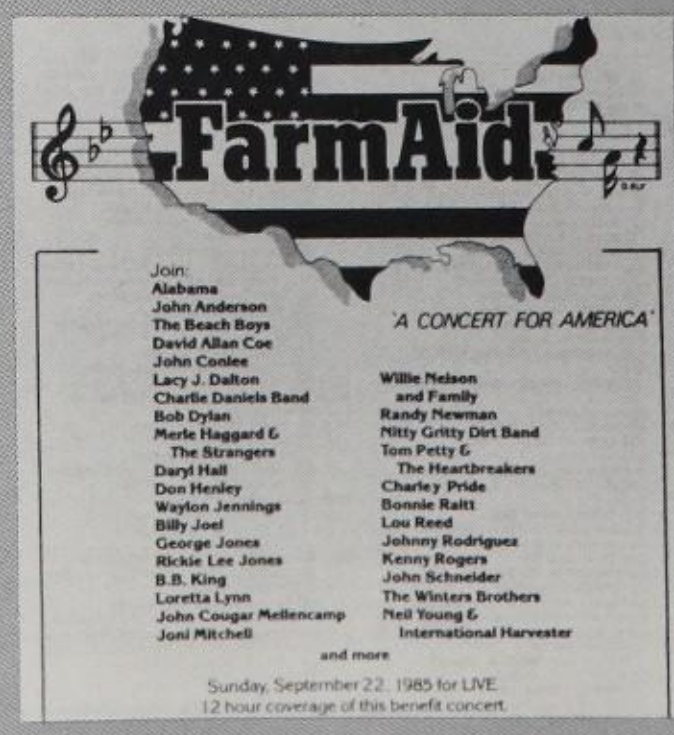
Beyond these enterprises, the arts earned recognition for other, less global events as well. "Bill Cosby" hit the top of the television charts providing family entertainment with a message and a laugh. "Miami Vice" attracted many to spending their Friday nights in front of the tube. Stephen Spielberg followed his former successes with the acclaimed "The Color Purple" but it was "Out of Africa" with Meryl Streep and Robert Redford that took the Oscar for best movie. Michael J. Fox appeared to be a new cult figure while "Back to the Future" kept the cash registers overflowing with other popular draws like Ally Sheedy, Molly Ringwold, and the rest of the "Breakfast Club." In music, Depeche Mode, Simple Minds, REM, the Firm, and Judas Priest kept their respective local Titan fans happy and calling for more.

Artists Dedicated to Welfare

Topping the list of benefits withint the past decade (some might say of all time), the duel Live Aid concerts illustrated the power of musicians and, the united support of almost one-half of the world's population. Organized by Bob Geldof, the motive was to provide needed aid for the starving of Ethiopia. With simultaneous shows on both sides of the Atlantic, Geldof staged the events in Philadelphia and in London. Apart from the headlining acts, such reunions as The Who, Led Zeppelin, Black Sabbath, and the concorde riding Phil Collins (who played both shows) generated the meaning of the cause with over one-fourth of a billion dollars raised.

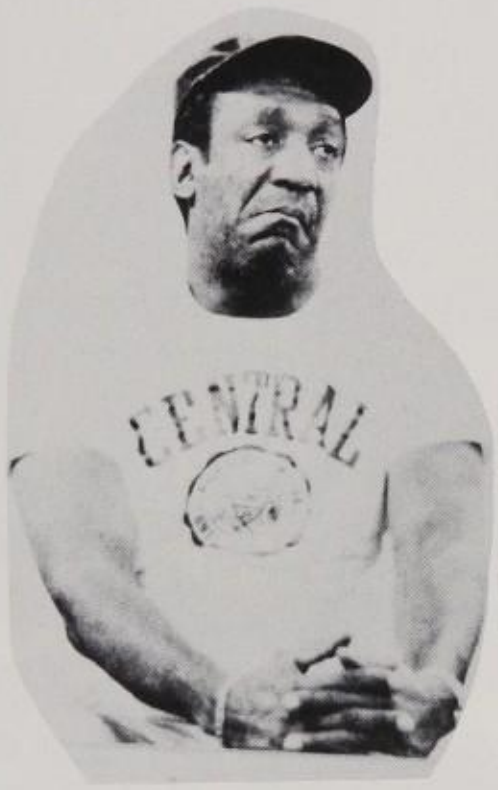
A number of events sought to gain support for their causes. Most notable were (top to bottom) the Live-Aid concerts and Farm-Aid, where big names encouraged and played for the support of preventing the worsening African famine and ailing US farmer.





Hollywood and the world will mourn the deaths of Orson Welles, Yul Brynner, Simon Signoret, Ruth Gordon, Johnny "Come on Down" Olson, Phil Silvers, and the Wizard of OZ's wicked witch of the north, Margaret Hamilton. The death of Rock Hudson stunned many, especially with regard to his contracting AIDS — Acquired Immune Defficiency Syndrome. Most significant of the headlines surrounding his death was the remoteness of such a fatal and terrifying disease in our own lives and experiences. However, the deemed epidemic may not have entered your home (as of yet,) but it already has struck a graduate of Poway High. Such news seems to make the world smaller, while others, like the Middle East and its troubles make us out to be so far and a long way away.

Outside from this chill, we warm ourselves up to comfort. The arts soothe us with their melodies, humor, sight gags, fairy tales, good reading, and unending paths to delight us. To investigate them further, we seem to enjoy just about any subject matter in any medium, according to our own tastes of course. Let us be thankful for the freedom of choice and respect others based on the same right.



POWAY TITAN REVIEW TEST: Are you a well-rounded student? Could you pass this and graduate? Do you consider yourself a worthy enough Titan? Go ahead, try!!!

INSTRUCTIONS: Read each question thoroughly. Answer all questions. Time Limit — 50 minutes.
HISTORY — Describe the history of the papacy from its origins to the present day, concentrating specifically but not exclusively on the social, political, economic, religious, and philosophical impact on Europe, Asia, America and Africa. Be brief, concise, and specific.
PUBLIC SPEAKING — 2,500 riot-crazed aborigines are storming the classroom. Calm them. You may use any ancient language except Latin or Greek.
MUSIC — Write a piano concerto. Orchestrate it and perform it with a flute and drum. You will find a piano under your seat.
MEDICINE — You have been provided with a razor blade, a piece of gauze, and a bottle of scotch. Remove your own appendix. Do not suture until your work has been inspected. BIOLOGY — Create life. Estimate the differences in subsequent human culture if this form of life had developed 500 million years earlier, with special attention to the English parliamentary system. Prove your thesis.
SOCIOLOGY — Estimate the sociological problems which might accompany the end of the world. Construct an experiment to test your theory. POLITICAL SCIENCE — There is a red telephone on the desk beside you. Start World War III. Report at length on its socio-political effects, if any.
PHYSICS — Explain the nature of matter. Include in your answer an evaluation of the impact of the development of mathematics or science.
GENERAL KNOWLEDGE — Describe in detail. Be objective and specific.
EXTRA CREDIT — Define the universe. Give three examples.

From top to bottom: Director Steven Spielberg delivered a steady string of movies, including "The Color Purple," "Goonies," and the box-office smash, "Back to the Future." Protesting the South African white political Apartheid policy, Steven Van Zandt brought another 'cause' oriented, multi-starred record to the world. The song stated that as a result of the government, they (the musicians) would not play "Sun City (South Africa)." Bill Cosby thrilled viewers with his family while offering his fatherhood wisdom. "Miami Vice" starred (far left) Don Johnson and (far right) Phillip Michael Thomas and peaked to stardom. They received 'a little' help from the music world in making their show a hit, such as (pictured in middle) Glenn Frey and his infamous "Smuggler's Blues." 12.

Searching For Sponsors

In addition to designing layouts, writing body copy, sizing pictures, and meeting deadlines, each Odyssey staff member was required to sell advertisements. "Selling advertisements was definitely an experience," stated Odyssey photographer Janet Helser. "Going from store to store, repeating the same sales pitch, and being turned down time after time was not the most enjoyable thing to do." Both old and new staffers needed great persuasion from the editor to attempt this task. Despite the slow start and progression of advertisement sales, the efforts paid off.

The ads bought by local merchants helped finance and lower the cost of the yearbook. This year, as a new means of fundraising, ads were also made available to students, which gave them the opportunity to address their friends with words and pictures. With publicity, more of these ads may appear in next year's annual.

Thanks to the support from students and local businesses, the Odyssey has expanded in size and quality, continuing the staff's tradition of excellence.

Odyssey Peaks as #1

San Diego County Yearbook

Competing in their first Write-Off's Competition, nine members of the Odyssey represented Poway and topped off their efforts with a record-breaking triumph. They received the honors of the Yearbook Sweepstakes trophy, awarded to the best staff based upon the careful evaluation of their copy writing, layout, and photo cropping. Poway's Odyssey broke new grounds with this prize, beating rivals Patrick Henry and Hoover for the first time. Besides this, the three-membered teams of the Odyssey each won awards as well: Team #2 — Stephanie Allen, Yuri Iwata, and Kristen Yamasaki took second place for photo cropping, Team #1 — Julie Dickinson, Matt Rostoker, and Kiki Windsor tied with Team #3 — Paige Jennings, Kathy O'Heron, and Christy Selser for second place in layout. In addition to earning these awards, the Odyssey reached a First Place ranking as the "Best Yearbook" in the county for its 1985 volume, under editor Lara Farle, as graded by the San Diego Journalism Education Association, organizers of the Write-Off's. With a total of five awards, the Odyssey streaked to a higher tradition of excellence.

Life Has no Guarantees first place — student

Rising fast and free leaving for a voyage in our last frontier.
The nations eyes go with you,
holding a special place in their hearts.
No more danger apparent,
for the ones who stay and watch,
until the agony of broken hearts, broken homes,
blanket a nation,
on an early January morn.

Sadness covers everyone,
children in school,
mothers at home,
even the old lady, you thought hated the world.
Sadness covers me like beading rain drops on the petals of a black rose.
I ponder their last thoughts, as the television relives their fiery ending once again.

What did they think,
or did they have time?
I wish they were back,
I wish this was a dream,
I wish they could realize,
the impact they had on me,
on the nation,
making us realize,
Life has no guarantees.

ONE TEACHER'S LEGACY: ULTIMATE LESSONS FROM CHRISTA McAULIFFE

first place-tie — teacher

Knowledge cannot be confined to a text.
Minds cannot be bolted to the floor in ordered rows
nor closed within a classroom.
Life must be challenged
across time and space.
Face Death with fear and a smile.
Sacrifice your life even for those who don't know or even care.
Dare us who remain behind,
earthbound,
to follow your example,
gather those we teach in our arms and thrust them into orbits they never dreamed of reaching, toward galaxies they never knew existed.
Only then can we call ourselves,
like you,
astronaut — teacher.

Our thanks (from the 1986 Odyssey) goes to all of you who submitted poetry to our first poetry contest. Due to space, we are only able to print the top entries. Those selected were entries which met various criteria and scored high. They were judged by the Odyssey staff on a scale of 1-5. Congratulations Winners!

Divona Trickett, English Teacher

"I wrote this when I was in college because I was haunted by the accidental suicide of my junior high school friend. She made quite a mistake as she tried to scare her family (and she payed for it with her life)."

The Pendant, first place-tie — teacher

She pulls the covers up around her shoulders.

Knowing safety, she abruptly stops her twitching mouth. Her lips regain position over their inmates, but far too soon four orangish teeth break through to taste the air. She forms a fist, with a knuckle, wipes a carrot peel off her chin, then forces her glasses up her nose to their rightful place.

A willow branch scrapes at the window.
She tugs at the blankets and the sheet comes loose.

Closing her eyes, she views the tree crashing into her room. Sounds of scratching stop. Planning to scream, she opens wide, but her lungs refuse the work. Her claws still clenched, she pounds her stomach in and grins at feeling revenge upon her inner soul. But knowing it's not enough, she cries.

The leaves keep up their weary pace and the glass continues to itch. She wraps the bedding round and round her hands.

Calling her name, a voice informs her time has come to go downstairs.
Refused, it asks again with no reply, then gives up and lets her alone. She slaps her tears away and a plan emerges. She jumps from bed and ties a knot around the closet bar, then makes a noose of muslin.

A final "hah!" comes from her throat before It's jerked away. The wind laughs back and moves a twig across the pane. She dangles on, a glare of shock left fixed upon her face.

Denouement, second place — student

The edges of my comfortable little world no longer cradle me in fresh green maple leafness.
The edges have grown brittle and, yes, bitter.
The curling edges crumble,
chipping,
flaking,
and fade to a dusty gray-brown.
The dust settles,
leaving a gasping fish.

Jennifer Drayton, Class of 1986

Warmth, third place tie student

A September moon
washes its blue eye
in silver ghosts.
Steam awakens from the soil, swirling through sun-baked grasses and yawning African daisies, climbing, floating.
Perforated clouds exhale
a blanket of wind with the grace of smoke curling from the caverns of apricot cheeks.
Jagged tree tops
pierce the waters of heaven.
They do not bleed.
I listen to cricket philharmonics,
each love-harp in tune with his brother's,
and I am not afraid.

Jennifer Drayton

Plaid, third place tie student

Our paths cross
Like plaid threads of
A wool blanket —
You Red,
Me Green.
Woven together
With the rest of the world,
We intersect here and there
Wrapping,
Twisting,
And
Strengthening one another.
Often our threads
Flow together over
The expanse of cloth
Red and Green,
Until our directions diverge:
Red with Yellow,
Green with Blue.
We veer apart,
Running new paths,
unknowing and uncertain of
A future rendezvous

Tonia Reinys, Class of 1987

everyone needs someone, third place tie student

People need people, and friends need friends, and we all need love for a full life depends not on vast riches or greatest acclaim not on success or worldly fame but just in knowing that somebody cares and holds us close in our thoughts and prayers and for all the knowledge that we have understood makes everyday living feel wonderfully good, and we rob ourselves of life's greatest need when we lock up our "hearts" and fail to see the outstretched hand reaching to find a kindred spirit whose heart and mind are lonely and longing to somehow share our joys and sorrows and to make us aware that life's completeness and richness depends on the things we share with our loved ones and friends.

Honorable Mention

Elegy to Mr. Denini
(8th grade History teacher)

I still remember the cold-blooded fear
you craftily instilled into each and every student.
You stood,
an intimidating figure rigidly bent forward
forearms glued to podium.
Your voice cut like paper-thin blades into deathly-quiet air each one driven carefully
into our brains.
I bitterly resented your gruff nature and the C+ I received on my report card.

The last day of class
I breathed a grateful sigh of relief
as I waltzed out that door
and into high school.
Work piled up and I used your techniques to wade through the piles and almost never drowned.

I went back yesterday
but they told me
you died of a heart attack last year.
As I sat in my
now too-small seat,
I listened to ghostly whispers of lectures and assignments!
Tears fell, unheeded to the floor and I hoped you could hear my words long overdue.
Thank you,
I deserved that C+.

NUCLEAR SYNESTHESIA

Sounds of silence paint New York City tap water utterly foul, like rusty pipes, and sulfur Yellow, under a blossoming ardent, neon mushroom etching
Nightmarish shades of doldrum indigo and gloomy white silhouttes Evenly, furiously lapping, rippling cantankerously, like a bitter citrus fruit, outwards from midtown.
Spicy red and reverberating harshly in a roaring lion-like fury, blowing me down with Tears of salty human oceanic undercurrents brewing the black licorice, burning rubber, fluorescent cyclones. They Hurl burning upon my bloody, sweaty, screaming visage.
Time radiates and smokes like toast.
Early morning sunrise, rocking and rolling, thundering with ground shaking heavy metal, and Surrendering the final ringing purple and lilac bells of of St. Patrick's Cathedral to frankincense and heaven,
I shiver in a downpour of man's progress and competitive power, slowly melting like
A wax figure upon the black, hard tarmac erupting and bubbling in a boiling spurt of the city's dying breath.

Matt "PAX" Rostoker, Class of 1986

Charisma

Spring entered my back yard today
With no knock on the gate to tell me of her presence,
But a heart-warming confidence that surprised me
Into immobility, as I watched her, the rosy pink goddess
Of flaxen hair and graceful stature, float with long strides
Over the brownish remains of winter's grass.
She said not a word, only wore a dreamy, abstracted look
On her soft face, as she waltzed from bush to tree
And touched their stark, brown limbs with pale, long,
Slender hands. Then roses bloomed, a brilliant palette
Of colors, pumping into the air a heady scent;
And the trees covered themselves modestly with apple-green
Leaves and fluffy pink and white blossoms;
The grass, a lush carpet of brilliant emerald green.
She left as suddenly as she arrived;
Beneath the lavender and baby-blue hues of early evening
I smelled the haunting perfume that lingered behind her.

Tania Stepanek, Class of 1987

Knowledge:
the delicate dance
of red-warm ladybug legs
upon a freckled arm.
Her wings blur,
Shining like a tear, and she flies home to save her children

Wonder:
the fluorescent glare
of the refrigerator's light, greening the celery
and whitening the mayonnaise.
The bulb's warning stabs at the hungry,
dims at the satisfied.
Open, on, close, off, open, on, close on?

Discovery:
the steady stare
of a familiar reflection, displaying the pliable warmth of a body and a mind that murmurs, "a ha."
It is me.
And I return the wink.

Jennifer Drayton, Class of 1986

Runners-up: Matt Rostoker, Tania Stepanek, and Jennifer Drayton

Our green caps fly high from our field seat words of promise and warning we ignore the start of our future tonight we meet though now not caring what life holds in store.

Summer days ahead we are spread apart,
All different directions stretching away from this dwelling where we received our start finding our own way; Unwilling to stay.

We rushed so quick from our childhood days talking time, enjoying youth we had overlooked.
We want to return but there are no ways,
But only pictures and words in a book.

In haste childhood scattered, for age we yearned
But too late in life, we finally learned.

Tonia Reinys, Class of 1987

P H S

Birds whistle merrily, in trees reaching for space.
Downpour of leaves,
as trees sway to the East Trash drives down hallways, chased by janitors.
Yard duties on the prowl,
waiting for students to foul up.
The 2:16 bell rings a silence, and starts an uproar.
Rubber laid in the parking lot,
burns the nostrils.
Jocks with their girlfriends,
head to the field,
pushing around freshman who get in their way.
Halls now empty,
except for a few,
who talk to their friends
with the first words,
"Did you hear about . . . "

Desiderata

Max Ehrmann

Go placidly amid the noise & haste, & remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly & clearly; and listen to others, even dull & ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud & aggressive persons, they are vexations of the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain & bitter; for always there will be greater & lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be yourself. Especially, do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity & disenchantment it is perennial as the grass. Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue & loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe, no less than the trees & the stars; you have the right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God, whatever you conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors & aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul. With all its sham, drudgery & broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

The Titans will no longer play on the Mt. Carmel field. It is hoped next season will allow our "boys" to play at home.

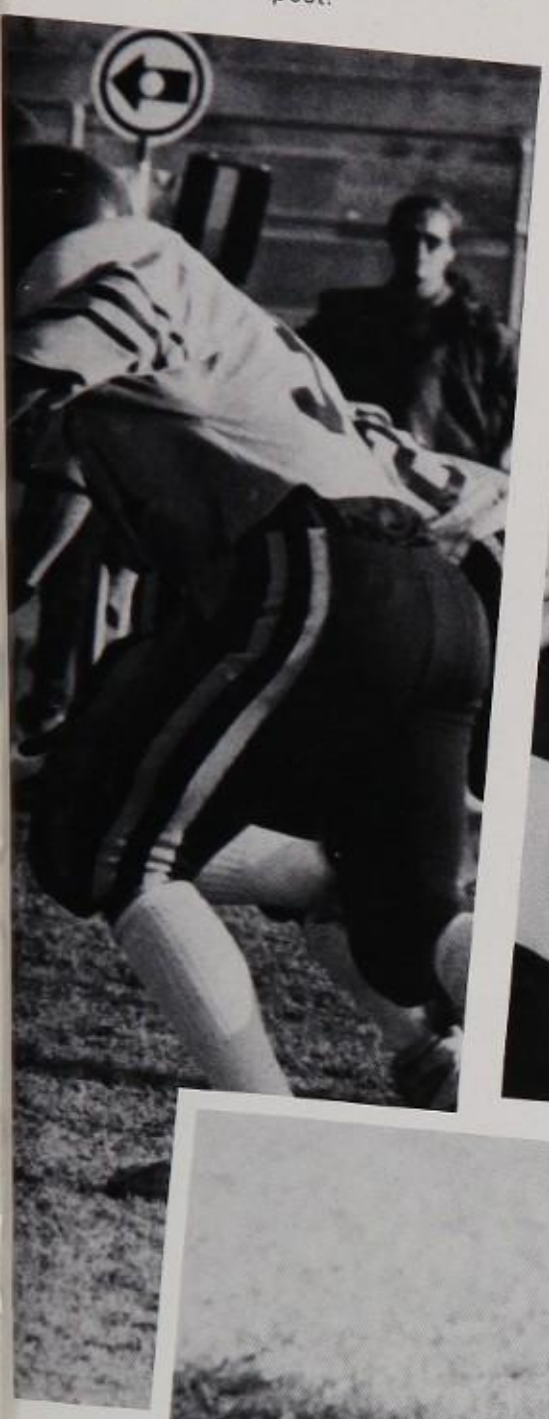
Seniors Bid Adieu To the Old PHS

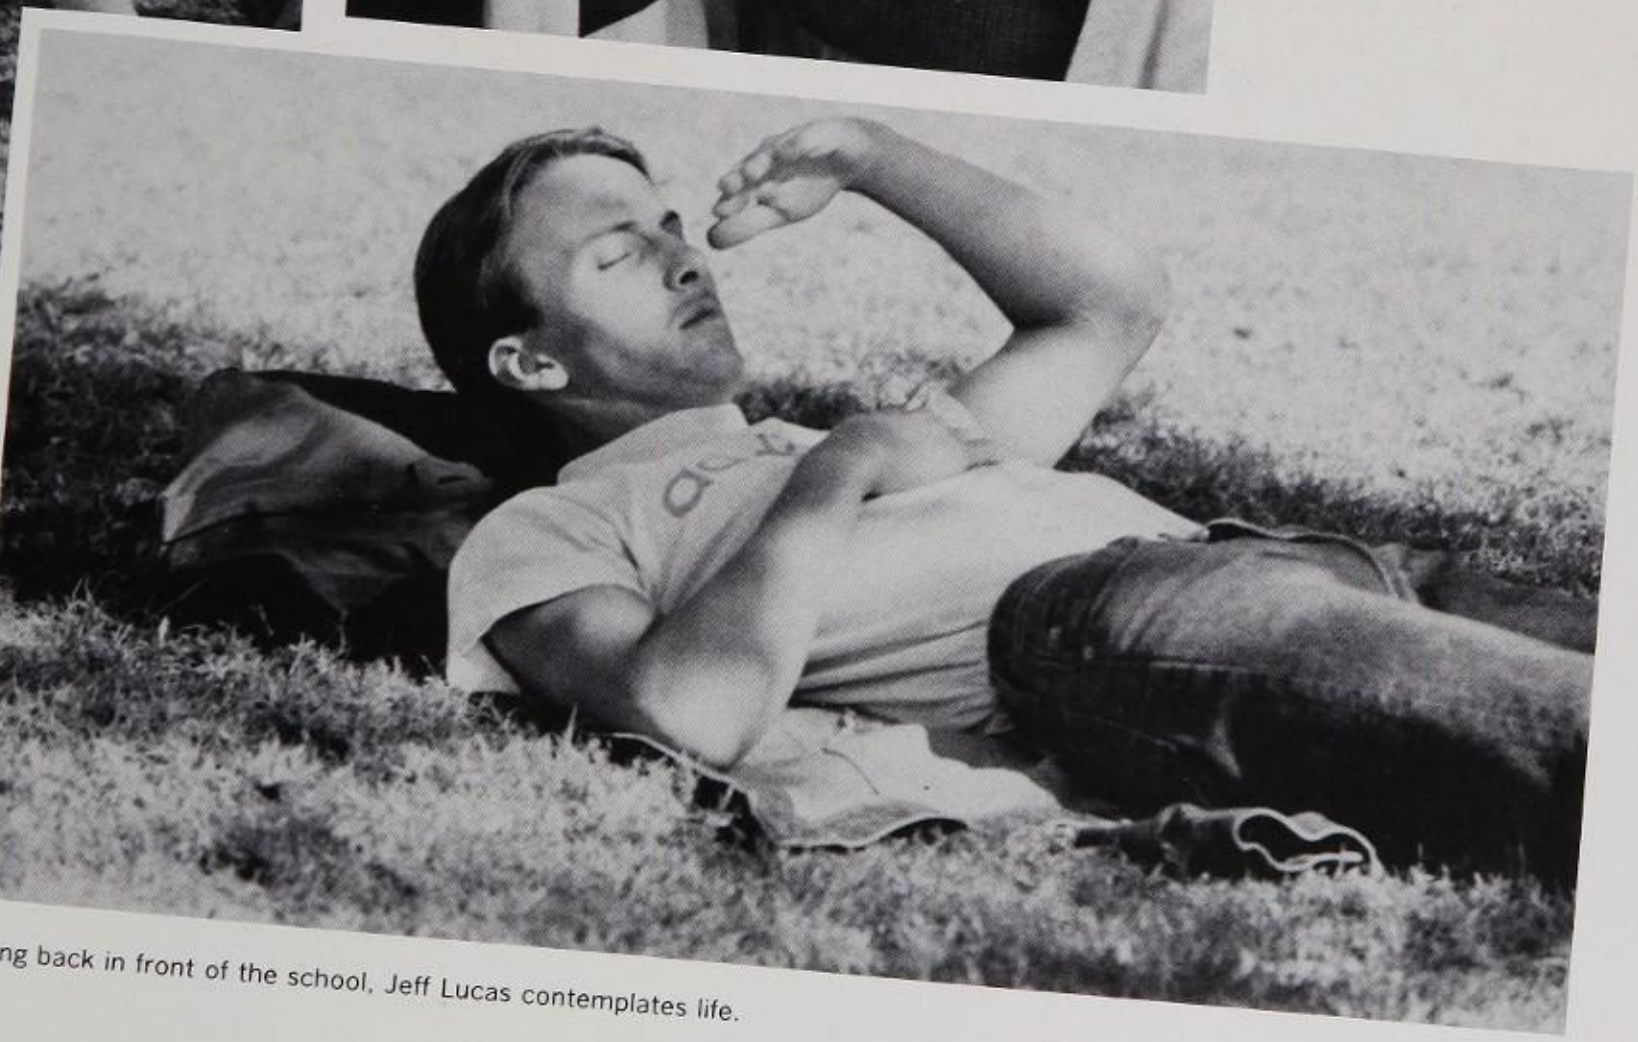
Lockers close for the final time; textbooks are returned. Teachers and students bid their tearjerking adieus' and reminiscence upon yesterdays as the last carload of seniors exits the parking lot. Closing out upon PHS, their final time, before embarking on a journey of their futures, they shout one last goodbye before speeding off.

But the excitement of graduation doesn't stop with the seniors. The eager anticipation of underclassmen concerning their rise up the "Class" ladder of high school swallows them up as they fill the void so quickly left by the departing seniors. Some will work; some will go away to a college or university, and others will disregard the idea that they are indeed "out." The reality of the world could be hard hitting for those unprepared and unexpected of its harsh nature. But for many, it is a time for growth and positive change. We are talented individuals, no matter where we stand. It is to expand upon our horizons such that we will continue to learn and excel in our futures.

CLOSING

Straightening clothes, Kristin Stewart tidies up Miller's Outpost.

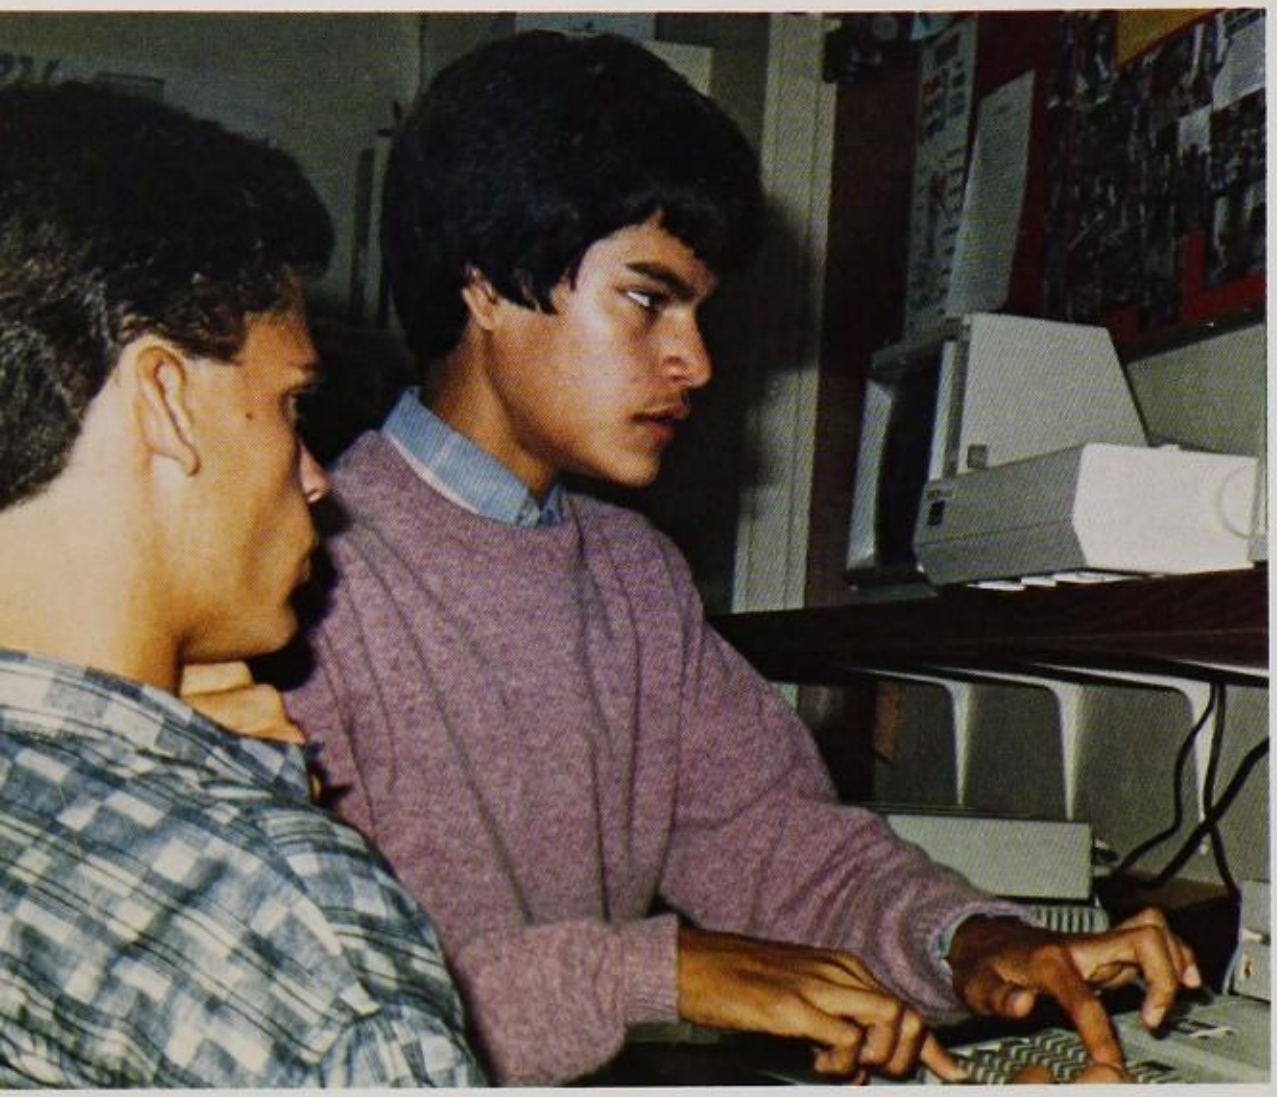


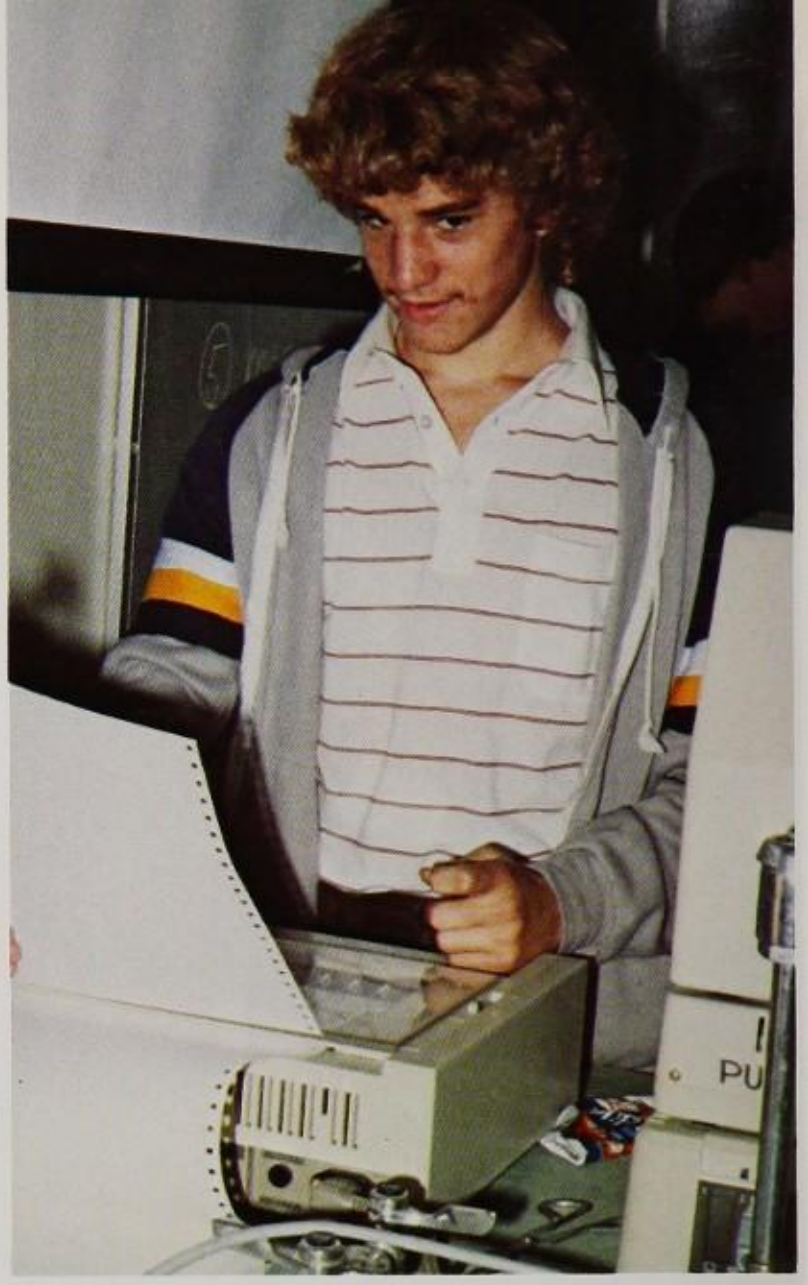


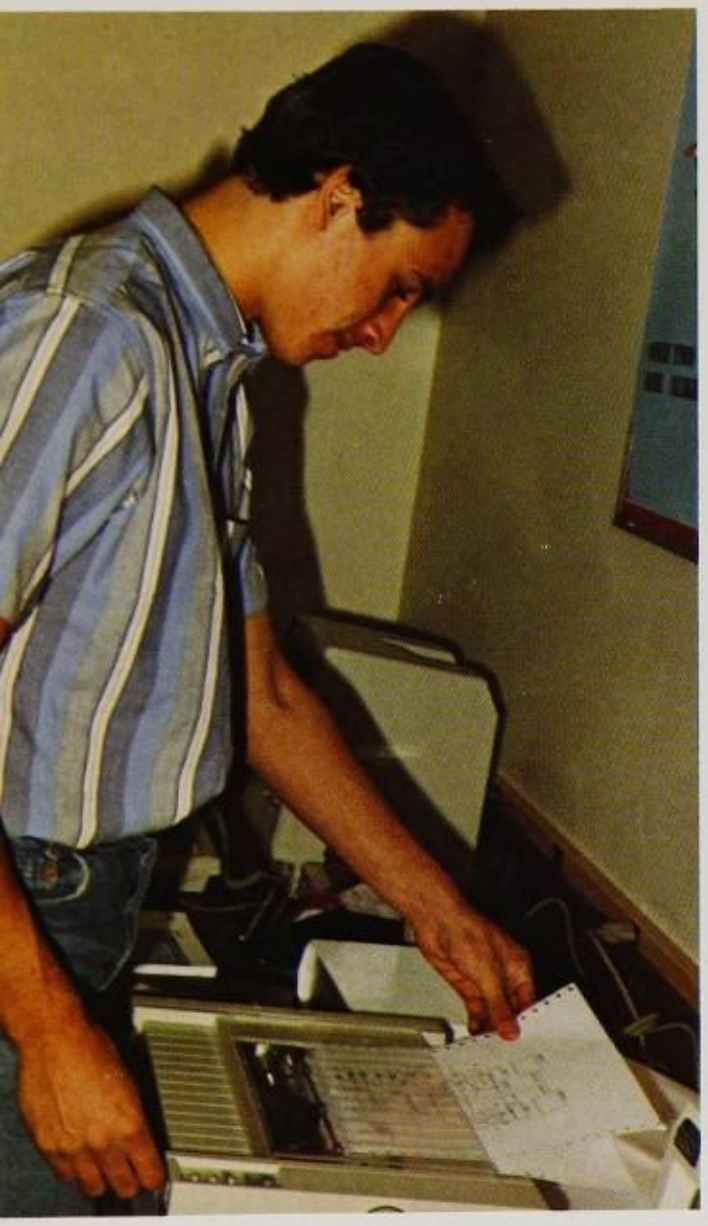
Kicking back in front of the school, Jeff Lucas contemplates life.

Obtaining a lab printout for chemistry, Nathan Rollins checks the screen.

Gary Anderson watches Keith Stevens instruct the computer to do a function.

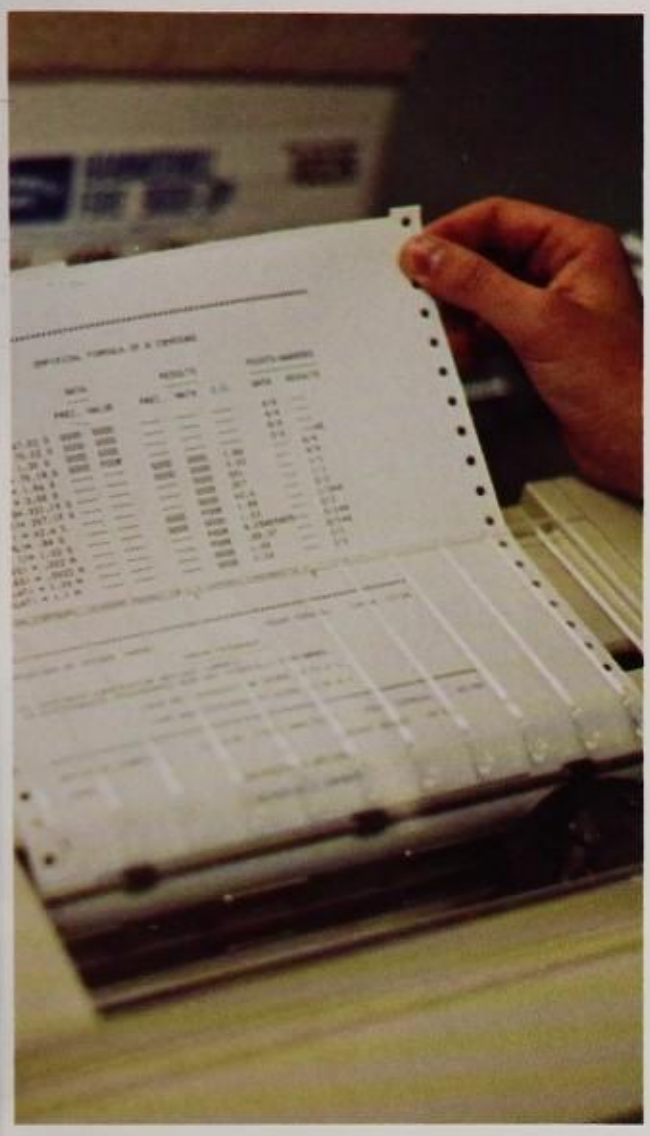






Senior Matt Lehrer inspects his printout and proofreads it for any errors.

Mr. Larry Foster enables Shelley Nielsen and Kathy McMahon to discover the fun of computer programming.



OPENING NEW DOORS, PHS'S computer technology

By opening the doors of our minds with the keys of our acquired knowledge and understanding, we discovered new frontiers and dared to dream. We decided what to reach for. We searched and looked for the key to enlightenment and achievement.

Success! PHS stepped into the future. The rapidly developing field of computer technology warranted the renovation of two classrooms into the Institute of Applied Technology. The new center added some courses to those already being offered at PHS. "The field," according to Mr. Larry Foster, "is moving too fast to keep up!" He also added, "Computers are being utilized throughout the campus in every department. We are definitely one of the forerunners in infusing the computer into the standard curriculum."

In addition to the new center, computers were discovered all over PHS. Chemistry students found an assortment of programs at their side, dealing with problems and observing the steps as directed by the computer to solve them. Word processors became a writer's best friend, next to the dictionary, as greater opportunities and benefits were provided. Students also became aware of the computer's usage in determining attendance records and truancies. From class scheduling to financial records, from science to business, Jon Rudd concluded, "And to think we are only entering upon this new tool!"

Chemistry students benefited from instructional aids, such as this data on empirical formulas of compounds.

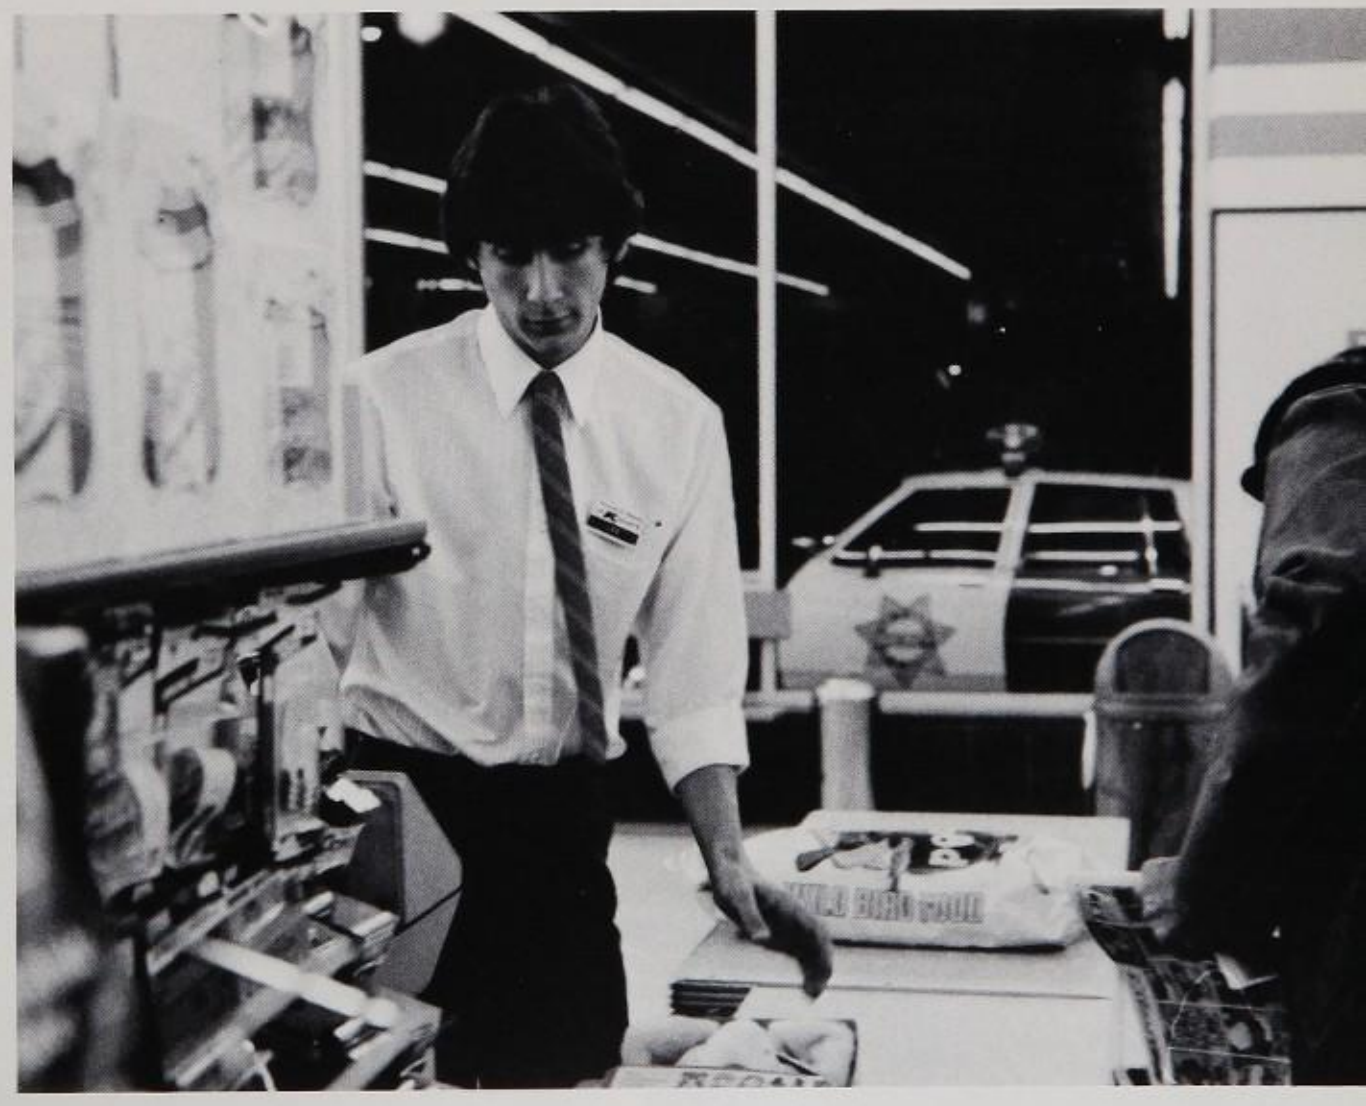
STUDENTS GAIN RESPONSIBILITY
working for tomorrow

"Attention shoppers!" beckoned Tracy Lee Callahan, "today we have some really fine red-tag specials!" Titans quickly filled the job openings throughout the community. From the local supermarkets to the fast-food franchises dotting Poway Road, hard-working students bagged groceries, fixed lawnmowers, made sandwiches, pressed cash register buttons, and took inventory. Carrying a steady part-time job and keeping up with one's school-work seemed to require considerable amounts of time.

Whether saving for college or that dream automobile, the working class entered the competitive and green-cash society we live in. The motives were not as important as the jobs themselves. The hard reality of laboring oneself away under undesirable and unhappy working conditions left some students with frustrated and tired bodies. Lee Keane mentioned his dissatisfaction, "They take advantage of you because you're young and inexperienced. It's even worse when you consider the kids who have worked hard for a year and are still making the same minimum wage they were hired with!" Other students expressed similar opinions, while others were thankful for their quality jobs. Chris Eakman spent his summer working at Jack Murphy Stadium, selling food in the stands. He said, "I really enjoyed working on a commission basis, and the girls I met were nice benefits too!"

With the passage of the school year, students enrolled in work experience and worked hard for their money. Whether planning for the future or the college or a set of wheels to get to work, Titans earned their keep and gained rewarding and valuable job experiences.

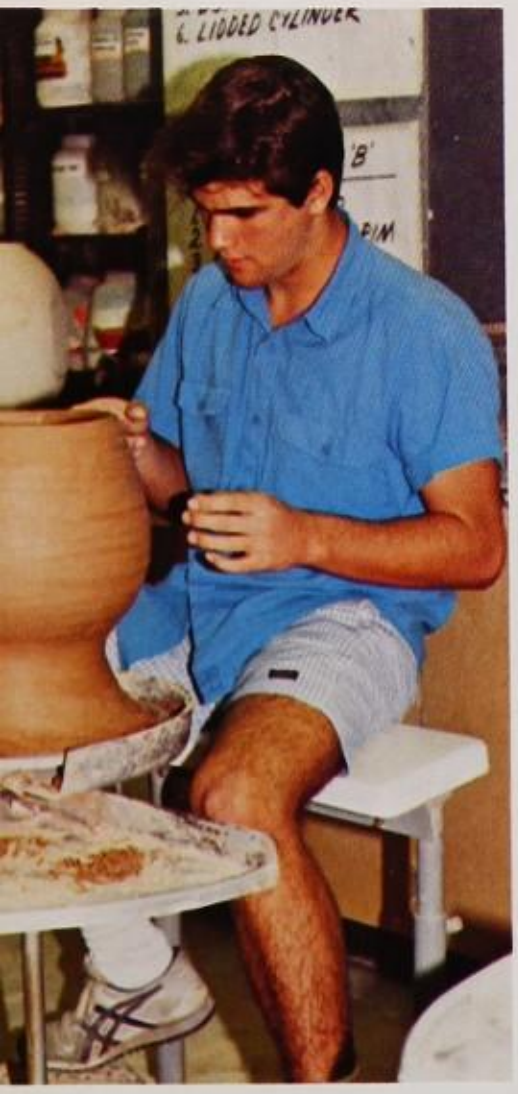


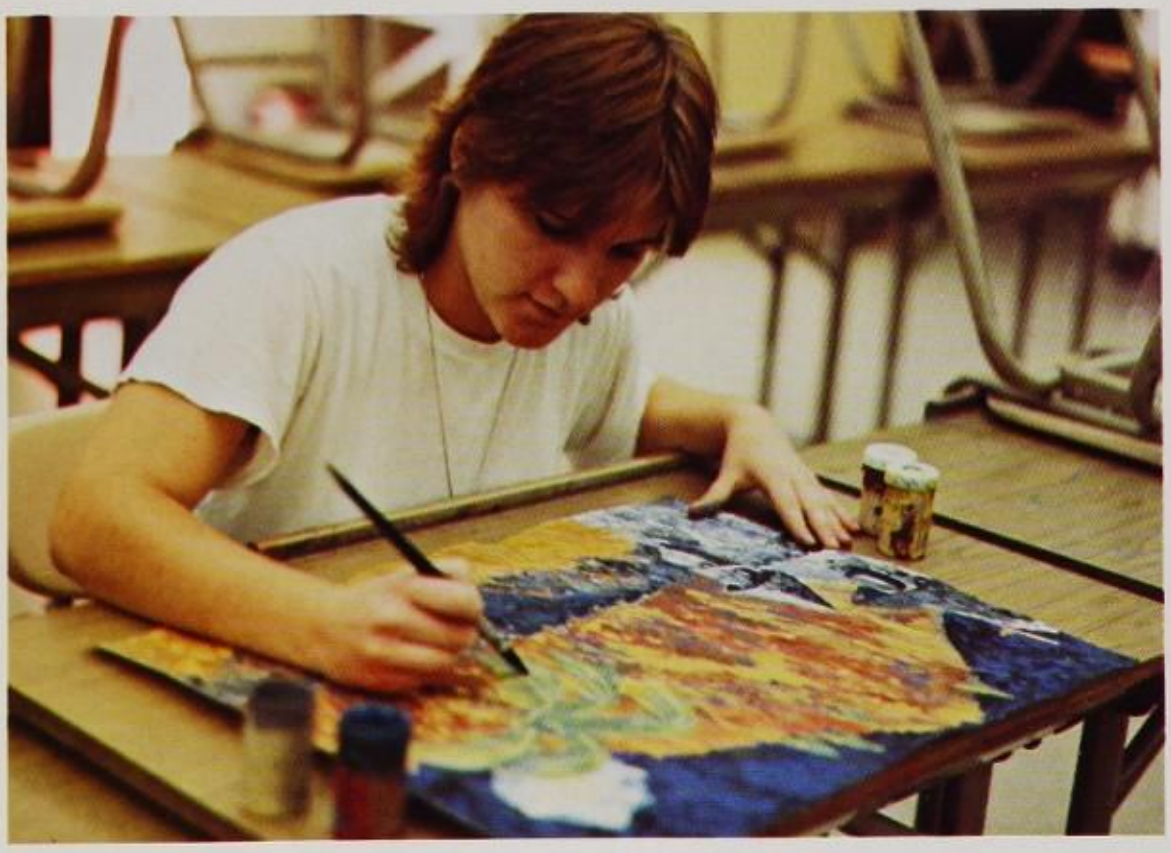
Lee Keene concentrates intensely on his register.

Christy Domville has a smile for each cone-buying customer.

Hannah Koleszar concentrates upon her drafting layout.

Joe Segoria moulds his clay pot on the spinning wheel.





Cynthia Shimkus displays her attempts in utilizing Mr. Walker's advice while incorporating her natural style of painting with auras.

GIFTED TITANS RISE TO THE TOP as talented individuals

"No one of us escapes limitations . . . Some people are gifted with their hands, some people are gifted in the realm of art or music, some people are gifted in the realm of abstract ideas. Almost no one is gifted in all three realms. We are limited, and we must accept ourselves with our limitations, recognizing that we can do what others cannot do, that we can contribute where others cannot contribute. To accept ourselves with our limitations means also that we will recognize how variable and flexible our lives can be. The great thing about life is that as long as we live we have the privilege of growing. We can learn new skills, engage in new kinds of work, devote ourselves to new causes, make new friends, if only we will exercise a little initiative and refuse to become rigid . . .

Let us, then, learn how to accept ourselves — accept the truth that we are capable in some directions and limited in others, that genius is rare, that mediocrity is the portion of almost all of us, but that all of us can contribute from the storehouse of our skills to the enrichment of our common life. Let us accept our emotional frailties, knowing that every person has some phobia lurking within his mind and that the normal person is he who is willing to accept life with its limitations and its opportunities joyfully and courageously."

— Joshua Loth Liebman

With each one of us an individual, with everyone of us endowed with a particular talent, a gift, we might learn to account for that in which we are deficient in with that with which we are not. Whether we live as artists, businesspersons, lawyers, welders, musicians, clerks, athletes, or students, we all are unique and gifted, intelligent human beings.

SHADES OF YESTERDAY
foreshadow tomorrow

"Goodbyeeeeee! PHS" accompanied the traditional cap tossing, following the graduation ceremonies in the new Titan Stadium. Looking upon their growth, changes, and adolescent phases at PHS, the "Class Of 86" departed the twenty-five year old school on new grounds. Despite the crowds and associated complexities of a large student body, the advancement and excellence of PHS remained to be a foundation, as new traditions ensued. Armed with a new generation of computer-oriented curriculum, a new "Home Field," and the prospects of continued redevelopment and improvement plans for PHS, the modern times of the mid-nineteen eighties symbolized an important period for both PHS students, faculty, and alumni.

Twenty-five years ago, PHS opened its doors. Today, the city of Poway appeared to be growing daily. With housing projects, the problems of overcrowding, and the loss of a small-town atmosphere, the changes of adolescence appear to be coming home to PHS as it matures and continues to build upwards and outwards. Change seems unavoidable in this day and age. The future depends on those who've passed through the halls of PHS and on how they face the many changes within the world and in the immediate Titan vicinity. With our ability to deal with change, we will continue to broaden our horizons and to make our own traditions and decisions.
